I would get up from my soft bed and go see my mom and dad. I would hold onto my brother and cry. I had such a scary dream. So I would cry for him to comfort me.

'Yeah, yeah, so…!'

Before I knew it, my vision had darkened.

'I'll wake up soon.'

But that wasn't the case.

“…….”

The child lay on the rotten ground for a long time.

I couldn't move my legs. I couldn't raise my head. I couldn't scream. Even wiggling my fingers was difficult. I couldn't see anything, I couldn't hear anything.

All I could feel was my body slowly being torn apart or melted away.

“…….”

I think a monster is eating me.

‘… It was right that my mother abandoned me.’

His father, his older brother, and everyone in his family abandoned him.

I had known this since I came here, but I had tried to deny it. There was no way my family would come to this place where monsters were running rampant. The child was to slowly rot away here and be eaten by monsters.

'Death wasn't the scariest thing.'

I don't know how much time has passed. The monsters ate him one by one and left. Was it because his body was melting? Please, someone kill me. May God take my breath away.

The child's fear of being trapped in an eternity of emptiness soon turned to anger.

* * *

One day.

The child was so lonely.

“…What time is it now….”

I looked up at the sky in despair, but I couldn't tell what time it was.

Black sky. Black trees. Black monsters. Black flowers. Black weeds. Black earth. Black puddles. Everything was black.

‘If this continues, I might end up turning black too.’

The child crouched as much as possible and held his breath. He had learned how to avoid the monster's attention. He just had to pretend to be dead. But he was so lonely. He had no one to talk to, and no one to look after him.

'Have I done something so terrible that I deserve to be punished in a place like this?'

The child covered his small body with his wings covered with rich feathers as much as possible. His family screamed when they saw this. They should have hidden it as much as possible, and not bragged about having something cool.

'I was stupid.'

No one liked the only thing he had never wanted. His family was the same. He was left with regret. If he had kept it a secret, he could have been with his family. Now it seems like a dream.

"eww…."

It was cold, hot, dry, and humid. This forest, where the weather had gone mad, was not inhabited by any normal creatures. Soon, he himself would become one. Thinking about it made him feel depressed and like he was going to go crazy.

'I don't want to be alone.'

But the monster was scary.

'I want to get some sunlight. I want to see clouds and the starry sky.'

No, actually, anything was fine as long as it wasn't black.

'I'd like to talk to my friends in the village. If not, at least my family. I'd also like to talk to old people who are wandering the streets because they're bored.'

Well, actually, just anyone would be fine.

‘There’s nothing here… .’

It wasn't just the absence of color and people. It was also the absence of time and ease. Here, the child was rotting alive, like milk forgotten in a warehouse. Or like a broken object.

“…….”

The scared child hid for a very long time. He died in a very quiet place, avoiding the monster, without eating or drinking anything. And he missed a lot for a very long time.

The longing for the child whose existence had been erased soon turned into anger.

* * *

One day.

The child wanted to live somehow.

“ Everyone die!!”

“What are you doing, put it in quickly!”

“Do you think you can get away with this?! Cowards, hypocrites! When you serve me, how dare you treat me like trash?!”

“We have to throw that thing away in the Black Forest so we can survive…!”

“A curse will fall on you all, all of you!!”

He struggled to keep himself from entering the Black Forest. But it was no use. The adults were much bigger and stronger than the child. The door to the sturdy, massive wall surrounding the Black Forest was blocked. The child was abandoned.

“May God punish you, you evil spirits!!”

The child grumbled and insulted those who had abandoned him. But those on the other side of the wall did not even respond. Now, the only place the child could go was inside the forest. The child ground his teeth.

“…I will never die like this….”

I was scared. I shivered from the sense of betrayal, and my eyes were dizzy from the sense of hopelessness. But I didn’t want to die simply. I wanted to live. In order to do that, I had to become strong. I had to have courage.

The child desperately grew in strength. He learned skills and gained wisdom. Sometimes he ran away as a swift fox, and sometimes he flew in the sky as a bird to avoid monsters. It was a rare ability that made him abandoned by humans.

In this way, the child also found out small truths.

“Yes, you piece of trash! I am the Son of God who was sent down to save you!!”

It was a terrible truth that made me even angrier.

“If God had a conscience, he would punish the world…!”

So I decided to try becoming an adult in the Black Forest. The child was really diligent. I barely managed to survive in a world where everything wanted my death. Living meant becoming stronger. Those were rewarding days.

But in the end, the child died.

“…Ugh, ugh….”

There was no particular reason.

“…Ugh, ugh… Uweeeek….”

I was bitten by a poisonous mushroom spore while I was sleeping.

I woke up in a hurry, but it was already too late. The child was so wronged that he cried bloody tears. How could I have endured this far and died so meaninglessly? I hated it, I hated it so much that my insides twisted.

But death was slowly approaching.

“Ugh… euaaaah, uhaaaah…!!”

The child cried bitterly in extreme sadness.

He worked so hard. He really tried so hard, but no one recognized him. He would just be abandoned and forgotten by history, becoming nothing more than a speck of dust. It was an unbelievably miserable thing.

The child prayed to God.

“Please save me. My noble father…! Please, me…!!”

And during the prayer the child died.

The desperation of the once faithful child, as always, turned to anger.

* * *

“…….”

Good kid. Bad kid.

“…….”

Some children loved their families, and some did not. Sometimes they were boys, sometimes they were girls. Some were hungry, some were lonely, some were angry…

Some were eaten by the monster without even being able to scream once. Some were trampled to death by the monster while moving their feet in silence. Some felt a terrible sense of betrayal, and some felt only deep despair.

“…….”

Some children gave up on life, and some did not.

"…ah…."

But the results were all the same.

They died hating humanity and being angry at the world.

“It must have been scary.”

“…Yeah, that must have hurt a lot.”

“You look very young.”

“If we’re young, aren’t we young too…?”

“But that was our choice.”

“That too.”

The figures, shining like pure white moons, each added a word. There were not many of them. They were young or young silhouettes, gently sweeping away the memories of the bright red dragons.

They were in a huge library made of silver and marble.

“I hope my juniors don’t end up like this.”

“Honestly, me too….”

“…I didn’t mean for it to look like this.”

They, once the saints of the Dalnim Church, gathered the memories of the little dragons. They understood, remembered, analyzed them in their own way, and then carved them onto white, strong paper.

“So let’s remember.”

This wasn't sympathy.

“We can help each other.”

“The younger generations will learn a lot from the anger, sadness and pain of those children.”

“We who are inside here will also be extremely careful and walk more cautiously.”

“So, you must record it without making a single mistake, not a single letter, not a single second.”

“That’s courtesy towards the little dragons who taught us.”

“And thank you.”

One by one, pure white books were made. They were the precious records of their study, made by binding them with moon halos. The saints of the Dalnim Church memorized them by putting them in the Dalnim bookshelf. The huge bookshelf was soon filled to the brim.

The little moons spoke together.

“We will remember you.”

“You remember us too.”

“Let’s talk about what’s the right way.”

“You can do that as much as you want….”

One of the moons was hugging a pure white book.

“…Look at this, it’s warm.”

“Oh, it’s true.”

“Is it because it’s a dragon?”

Someone laughed.

“With so many dragons, the moon will soon get warmer, right?”

Their library was very cold and lonely. But it was full of all the knowledge and wisdom they loved. The moon saints loved their teacher, the moon. It was a pitiful and lovely being.

“Well, of course. Our junior is hugging the moon.”

“I wish you would hug me a little tighter.”

“I’m sure you’ll do that someday.”

“Because he seemed like a junior who was much smarter and kinder than us.”

“Let us trust Aram.”

The small white figures leaned against the dragons' bookshelf and sat down. The bookshelf was warm enough to make them feel hot when they were close to it, and it vibrated so faintly that it was difficult to detect.

“…It’s just like a living animal.”

“Oh, so that’s what it felt like?”

“I forgot everything so I can’t remember it well….”

“But yeah, I guess this is what it felt like to hug an animal like a cat.”

“Let’s each hold these kids.”

“That’s a good idea.”

The adults huddled around the book, laughing quietly.

“Ah, it’s warm….”

"I know."

They stroked the book.

"thank you."

Thanks for helping me.

* * *

The emotions that come after anger are very diverse.

So not all endings can be happy, but those who belong to nature and destiny instinctively know how to embrace that ending. Even the smallest and most foolish creatures in the universe.

The little dragons finally closed their eyes quietly.

“…….”

Among the dragons that had turned to clay, Aram simply remained silent.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (274)

274

Episode 274

The whole world became quiet.

The strange and beautiful fragments of the universe disappeared from the sky. All that remained in the 'Dream Park' were parts of a castle floating in the air and the ruined decorations of the park.

The curses that were eating away at my body and mind were nowhere to be found, and the air was clear… .

“…….”

The hunters were momentarily lost in the dreamy sight.

"…end…."

Someone opened their mouth.

“…Is it over…?”

“…I think so?”

“Fuck, I survived.”

Thud !

The middle-aged hunter sat down.

“I guess I’ll never fight an evil spirit again…!!”

“Honestly, this time it wasn’t us who fought the evil spirits, Captain.”

“Did you really have to say that now?”

“We basically just dealt with the dregs that came from the evil gods….”

“Wow, that kid can’t even read the mood.”

Thanks to the grumbling hunters, the atmosphere gradually eased up.

Hunters who seemed exhausted sat down on the ground one by one. They exhaled deeply. The air was refreshing and light, unlike before, and it was truly welcome. It felt like breathing was sweet.

“Ah, shit… I’m hungry….”

“…When I came to my senses, that’s what happened….”

“I really lived? Wow, I’m crazy.”

After a little more time had passed.

“…Oh, but wait a minute.”

Someone raised a question.

“Then why haven’t we received the attack message yet?”

“Please don’t do this.”

It was a very valid question.

* * *

Aram saw the dungeon transformed into a dreamlike sight. There was only the land barely floating in the air like an island, otherwise it was impossible to tell which was up or down.

Plus, there are bone graves of little dragons lying all over the place… .

“…….”

But it looked peaceful.

All the curses and poisons that had created a dangerous atmosphere were gone, and all that remained was peace. A peace that was like a dream.

“The fact that we defeated the evil spirit remains unchanged.”

Aram opened his mouth.

“…Most of what originally formed the evil spirit was anger, and that was the anger of the young dragons who had been sacrificed in the Black Forest. Thanks to the efforts of my seniors within the moon, I was able to release that anger.”

“Are you saying that all those dragons have let go of their anger and forgiven the humans?”

“No, the end of anger isn’t always forgiveness. It could be resignation, it could be liberation, it could be loss. But maybe… yes, it could be forgiveness.”

A lukewarm warmth was felt on the moon where the story of the little dragons was recorded.

“But that’s not what’s important right now. Well, it is, but everyone is probably wondering why the strategy message hasn’t appeared yet.”

“Yes, for some reason….”

Kang Eun-seong, the vice-guild leader of Justitia, who had been staring into space, continued speaking.

“…The system used to send a notification at this point, but it doesn’t now. I’ve even defeated the evil spirit, so isn’t it a bit strange that there’s no response like this?”

Then he said, “Ah.”

“Of course we didn’t destroy the evil spirits, right?”

“That is exactly what the evil spirit wanted, yes, but he did not destroy it.”

Aram, who held the moon in his arms, had great authority. This was because he had received permission from the seniors within the moon to use its divinity. And divinity can be killed by divinity. That was what the evil spirit wanted.

But that's why Aram started the uproar so that it wouldn't happen.

“The little dragons did not disappear from their own providence, but rather, they simply released their anger and returned to nature. The death of a divinity is nothing but annihilation… If that had happened, there would not have been any bones left behind like there are now.”

Aram saw the bones of dragons sleeping quietly on a small piece of land floating in the air. They were pure white and shone like marble in the dungeon sunlight. They were like the color of polished ivory, just like jewels.

And on the ground nearby, delicate flowers and grasses bloomed. Life is a matter of providence. It was a sight that meant that those who had fallen from wrath had returned to the providence of order. It was also beautiful.

“If I had continued the violent fight using the divinity of the moon, this result would not have been possible. However, I did not want to commit a tragedy like the one in this world, so….”

“You gave the people the strength to endure, used the animals here to gain the upper hand, and then made the warrior Ater a part of the evil spirit to guide the dragon back to order.”

“It was a risky plan that required the help and trust of many people. But in the end, it produced such good results. I think you also need the courage to try and see what happens.”

“Oh, yes….”

The guild leader looked at Aram with a subtle expression.

“But in the end, didn’t you defeat the final boss of this dungeon? It’s strange that you still haven’t finished conquering the dungeon. Usually, this happens when there’s more work to be done.”

“I think so too, and I can guess some of it. This was the dungeon of the evil god.”

“Well, yeah….”

Kang Eun-seong nodded as if he knew what was going on.

“There are times when the dungeons created by the Divine are not well-suited to the Earth’s systems. This is probably because they are great mysteries possessing separate providences, and the mysteries of order surrounding the Earth cannot handle them….”

“I had the same thought as Vice-Guild Leader Kang Eun-seong. In that case, even if the strategy is practically complete, the system notification may not arrive, or the notification may arrive a little late.”

“What do you think, Your Majesty? Either there are still conditions for the strategy that have not been solved, or the strategy has actually been completed but a system error has occurred. It seems to be one of the two.”

“I think it’s both….”

Aram stopped talking and stroked Dalnim. As the noble sphere shone faintly with light, Aram blinked once as if he was having a conversation. Then he opened his mouth again.

“…You’ll understand as we go further, will you follow along?”

“I will listen. What should I do?”

“Then first, let’s go to the ruins of the Black Forest in the Underworld and find the tomb of the evil god underneath….”

“Ah, wait a minute.”

The guild leader, adjusting his glasses, asked.

“…Didn’t we just fight the final boss?”

“Isn’t that so?”

“Is there going to be another battle?”

“I don’t think so, trust me, I’m a saint.”

“I will believe it as a prophecy from an adult.”

Seo Seo-hee, who had been listening to their conversation, approached them.

“Then I will never take up arms again, Your Majesty?”

“All the rage that has been corrupted has returned to the seat of Providence, so there will be no need for violent means any longer. The dragons here have already unleashed all their rage.”

“Then I guess we need to talk.”

"you're right."

Aram said, hugging the moon that had become much warmer.

“…If you don’t go, you might end up regretting it.”

They headed to the ruins of the Black Forest.

* * *

“W, Your Majesty….”

“I’m glad that you all were doing your own thing while I was away.”

“…Because it’s one of the things our priests of Dalnim Church do best.”

The priests of the Dalnim Church who were staying at the ruins happily welcomed Saint Aram.

“That is, perhaps….”

“It’s the moon.”

Aram showed Dalnim, whom he held in his arms like a baby.

“…….”

The elder of the Dalnim Church smiled awkwardly as if he was about to cry.

“…You don’t call me Master anymore.”

“The moon was merely a storehouse of knowledge and wisdom.”

“Yes, of course. But it’s warm now.”

“Because Dalnim wasn’t alone all this time.”

“…Is that so….”

The elder slowly bowed his head.

“…I see you, Master.”

“I see you, Master.”

Following the elder, all the priests of the Dalnim Church bowed their heads.

“Please take us in.”

It was towards their saint Aram.

“Would you please do that?”

“Of course, I hugged Dalnim for that.”

Aram smiled brightly.

“But it seems like there’s still work to be done.”

“Yes, the Earth’s system did not notify us that the conquest was complete. Did you come to this ruin to finish it?”

“Yes, only a few people want to join.”

“Our Dalnim Church will follow in the footsteps of our Master.”

“…Please only join us if you have some energy left, and the rest can rest.”

Seo Seo-hee called her friend, the leader of the guild, leaving Dalnim-gyo behind, who started a game of rock-paper-scissors full of trickery.

“Mr. Kang Eun-seong.”

"yes."

“It seems the saint has something to show you.”

“It does look like it’s gathering an audience.”

The two, both experienced and seasoned hunters, were gradually beginning to figure out something.

Some hunters who were still in the mood for something to happen got up from their seats. As the crowd grew larger, Aram nodded. This meant that there was no need to go any further.

“Then let’s move.”

When Aram raised the moon, it flew leisurely into the underground tomb.

“I'll follow you.”

“Oh, that’s really….”

“There won’t be any danger.”

The path to the underground tomb was smooth. All the curses and even magic that had long enveloped the relics had been lifted. Seo Seo-hee looked up at the ceiling of the relics.

And then I was amazed.

“It’s the night sky.”

The ruins where not even a torch burned were a night sky densely filled with stars. It was not as enchanting a sight as the universe that the saintess of Dalnim Church had shown me, but there was a tranquility that calmed a corner of my heart.

So they soon reached the underground tomb. The priests of the Dalnim Church looked a little surprised.

“It wasn’t such a peaceful sight just a moment ago….”

"…no…."

“The blood has also disappeared.”

The blood inside the tomb, which had formed a shallow lake, had now disappeared.

They were the priests of the Dalnim Church who had investigated the relics on behalf of the saint. They remembered how horrible this tomb had looked. It was a place filled with curses and irrationality. It was completely different from now.

But now, there was a calm and peaceful atmosphere here, something different from the silence. Those who first came here were surprised by the fact that this place, which was the tomb of an evil spirit, had such a stable atmosphere.

"…quiet."

“Yes, that’s right.”

The stone floor, stone walls, and stone ceiling were slightly worn and covered with moss. Between them, a torch flickered dimly, illuminating the tomb. Inside the huge coffin, which seemed gloomy, there were strange children sleeping one by one, on soft flower beds.

Dalnimgyo easily recognized them.

“They are young dragons.”

“…Fortunately, you have a calm face….”

“What a relief.”

They didn't look that old. Unless they stopped growing at a certain age like the adults in Dalnim Church, they would probably be the same age they looked. It seemed like more than half of them weren't even in their mid-teens.

And at the end of it all there was a man.

“…….”

“…….”

A very skinny man, wrapped in bandages so tightly that not a bit of skin was visible. He sat on the cold stone floor, his body as thin as a tree, and was caressing the carcass of a deer with its throat torn off.

He soon opened his mouth.

"…okay."

The man asked the visitors in a hoarse voice, clearly exhausted.

“Have you come to see me?”

“Yes, I came to see you.”

Aram continued, having seen the moon floating between the man and herself. She had to tell the story of this man in front of people.

Aram recited the man's story with tacit permission.

“You, the last dragon, knew how to forgive from the beginning.”

That's why I tried to forgive.

“And yet you were angry. You were consumed by the anger of the young dragons who had died before you, and you respected that anger. Above all, in that great anger, your forgiveness alone… would have made no difference to the mystery of the disaster.”

But things have changed.

“Well, for some reason, the seal that held the evil spirit of wrath tightly in place developed a crack.”

The next step was a sequence that Earthlings were familiar with.

“From there, the evil spirit of wrath began to influence the Earth. It had mermaids, humanoid monsters, and an evil spirit named Sankalut under its control. Fortunately, thanks to the help of the Black Cloak, all these disasters were quickly suppressed… but you alone would have remained.”

So the evil spirit came out in person.

“The evil god tried to reach out to the Earth. The black-cloaked disciple, Sergio Hunter, noticed this and embraced the evil god. In the midst of this, a variable arose as one saint was organizing and refining the evil god’s corrupted wrath.”

Ather, he was the culprit.

“A ghost brought about the disaster. One of the warriors who once sealed the evil god, named Ater. He had suffered for eternity due to the greed of the humans of this world. The warrior called upon the evil god’s name to end his suffering.”

The evil spirit called Jinmyeong gained power over the world.

“Because of that, Sergio Hunter was hit and went into hiding. His exact condition is known only to the Master of the Collector’s Guild, but at least… it’s not in good condition. And so the evil spirit of wrath began to use dreams to fully devour the Earth.”

What happened after that wasn't really a secret.

“A saint of a certain religion is kidnapped, she meets an ancient warrior and prepares to fight against an evil spirit, and countless people from Earth come to help them….”

Aram extended his hand.

“…….”

The moon gently took its place on her hand. It seemed as if the place where it should be was on the hand of a saint, not an evil spirit.

“…But in the end, all of this is just an illusion.”

“Why do you think so?”

“You just wanted the memorial service that those angry kids never had.”

"and?"

“You must have been hoping for your own end, too.”

Aram held Dalnim in his arms like a child.

“It was thanks to your help that I was able to dare to embrace Dalnim in a human body….”

It was the evil god Argio who made the moon so small and docile. If it had not been his will, how could he have snatched the moon from the bishop's bosom and treated it so well?

“You would have wanted me to kill your divinity with this power.”

“It was not the most miserable, cruel, or dirty ending.”

“But now all that anger has subsided and only you remain.”

“Yeah, that’s right….”

A rough voice laughed.

“I get angry when I want to.”

“And?”

“And forgive when you want.”

It was the dragon's last laugh.

“Anger is a weapon and a fortress to me. There is no way I can’t handle it.”

My young ancestors were angry, so I was angry with them. And when all this anger was over, my brothers fell asleep. The soft, gentle breathing gently enveloped this quiet underground cavity.

The men filled their coffins with flowers. They were filled with colorful, fragrant flowers, and they made soft beds.

“So the time has come for my anger to end.”

“You forgave humans a long time ago.”

“Anger is valuable when it can be forgiven.”

“You are truly the god of wrath.”

Aram lowered his head with his eyes closed.

“…It’s not like there’s an evil spirit.”

Anger was the noble master of emotions.

“I have come to tell you, mystic of wrath, that I wish to bid you farewell.”

“Yeah, I see. You’ve been asleep for a long time, haven’t you? Yeah, right, so… hmm.”

Even though his voice was very hoarse, a pleasant rhythm flowed out.

“Dreams are really good, aren’t they, my friends? No matter how hard or painful things you go through, when you wake up, your memories will fade and your thoughts will become deeper….”

“…It’s almost like anger.”

“That’s too much praise. You don’t have to define it as one. Joy, anger, sadness, pleasure, love, hate, and desire are all like a dream. You should enjoy life to the fullest.”

“And I will learn.”

“That’s why your value as a human being shines. How wonderful.”

The Hunters were quietly stirred by the conversation between the two. It was because they had read all of the evil god's thoughts and beliefs. It was completely different from what the evil god was commonly known as.

The man, free from the small commotion, smiled slowly.

"…good."

As the man waved his hand, the deer's corpse immediately turned to dirt and lay on the ground. What remained after sinking was the deer's skull. The man held it in both hands, shining like a pure jewel.

And then another hand lowered the sheep's skull, which had been on top of its head for some time.

“Yeah, I like it.”

Instead, a deer skull rises above its head.

“It’s a very peaceful day….”

The first hand holds the deer's head above the head. The second hand gently supports the sheep's head above it. The palm of the third hand faces the ceiling so that it can be seen up in the sky.

The deer's antlers grew green leaves like the branches of a budding tree.

『… Anger is a weapon, and it is valuable because there is forgiveness beneath the castle walls. I will always keep my eyes upward, so show me the sky you humans will make.』

“…….”

"On that day I will affirm you."

The middle-aged hunter held his breath.

“…How could the evil spirit….”

It was the face of someone who had witnessed an impossible miracle.

“…Captain. What is going on now?”

“…the evil spirit has returned to providence.”

The blue horns of a deer symbolizing life, the head of a sheep that can be lifted at any time but is now held in one's arms, and the golden eyes of a third hand that look up instead of down.

All of this was signaling that the fallen mystery had stabilized.

"I hope it was a painful dream."

The lips of the half-headed, bandaged head drew a large curve.

The Divine Fury, having completed the trials, returns to the natural order.

Dungeon: Completed the walkthrough for 'Dream Park¿'

Please check your receipt of compensation

"yes?"

Receipt of compensation

A gift for you who survived until the end, “Call our friend, the little dragon!”

They will grant just one simple wish for their friend and benefactor.

* * *

The conquest was completed, and all those who had not returned from the 'Dream Park' returned to reality.

“Wow, crazy.”

This included people who died in the dungeon.

“You said it was a dream, but it really was a dream….”

“No, so you’re saying I really died?”

“I said I didn’t remember.”

“Not that much, but my memories from right before I died are a bit blurry….”

“It’s okay, I haven’t completely forgotten.”

The hunters who returned safely breathed a sigh of relief.

“…It was really hard.”

Humans achieved peace.

maybe?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (275)

275

Episode 275

Despite the sudden appearance of an evil spirit, the world was peaceful.

“Uh… I’m glad everything ended well, right?”

“I guess so, I guess…?”

This was because there was very little for ordinary citizens to see and experience.

The only serious thing they knew was that 'there were many people who were addicted to dreams'. And no one died from it. If there were any injuries, it would be cases of taking too many sleeping pills.

People in the world didn't see that level of 'damage'.

“Didn’t you say that the evil spirit was the final boss of this dungeon break?”

“I heard that too, but wasn’t it just a strong monster pretending to be an evil spirit…?”

“If not, how could there be no damage like this?”

“You said no one died in the dungeon.”

“Hey, that’s not a lie. How can you run a dungeon and not have people die?”

“Actually, I don’t know because I just heard it from someone I know….”

Hunters had a greater sense of alertness than the citizens.

“Everyone must be so carefree until they are devoured from head to toe by the evil spirits. Don’t you think so?”

“The guild leader is right.”

“…But is that really the dungeon of the evil god?”

But even most of them, who had not directly participated in the battle, found it difficult to believe.

“It definitely seems like a dangerous dungeon since there are two symbols of eternity, but even so, how can there be this much damage while fighting an evil spirit?”

The only thing that made me believe that the danger of the dungeon was not a fabricated lie was the value of the names of the 'Symbols of Eternity'. They did not go out anywhere. It was because they knew the weight of their names.

But why is the evil spirit's notoriety so high? Any hunter of any age knew the danger of the evil spirit. If humans were unlucky, they could be wiped out with a single glance, not even a breath.

“Compared to the past, it didn’t really feel that way… right? No, I don’t think that many people are conspiring to do this now….”

“I’ve heard that there are definitely conspiracy theories coming out in some quarters.”

“What? You really don’t know how scary the association president is, and you keep saying things like that.”

“Doesn’t that mean that it’s an exceptional situation? It’s almost impossible for something to end peacefully like this when it’s intertwined with a divinity. Even traditional divinities cause minor disasters….”

“Yes, it was none other than the work of the evil spirits. You know that? The disgust they have for humans, the little creatures of Providence….”

“How could I not know?”

"…hmm…."

So most people had no choice but to realize the direction in which they were flowing. There had only been one instance in which the damage caused by a being called an evil spirit was this small.

“…Is it like death?”

“You mean the god of death? That’s what I think too.”

“Actually, anger isn’t always a bad thing.”

The direction of the mystery was perceived as negative from a human's perspective, so it was called 'the evil spirit'. This situation could have been created if it was not a simple traitor. Very rarely, such cases occurred.

Evil that simply exists without hatred or corruption.

“But according to the information you shared this time, wasn’t it a fallen dragon?”

“It seems like there are more details that are not yet known.”

“Hey, that’s why the president is scary. He doesn’t tell you anything.”

“If you don’t mind, would you like to ask the association for their cooperation? I will make a polite request."

"No, no. There's a chance that sparks will fly this way."

People with such good brains came to their own conclusions.

"I guess this was some trick from the evil god."

"They say we almost all died, but I wonder if you still call it a trial…."

"Does that change the essence? It's closer to just being nice than a trial, and at least he's a good-natured evil spirit. I heard that the gods of various religions also added a word…."

"…I don't know about the God of Death, but I didn't know that the divinity of the Sun Church would be involved in the pranks of the evil god."

"That's the scary thing about evil spirits, they make even traditional gods who love providence lie. Well, the fact that the evil spirits committed atrocities that were actually condemnable probably played a part."

"Well, to that extent, I guess it's hard to call it a lie… Hmm, I thought they were being passive, even though they only said a few words each."

"It's a miracle that humans have stopped at this point, even though they've been playing into the hands of the gods. Most of the time, when evil spirits play tricks, it's hard not to have deaths. If that's fortunate, then it's fortunate."

I'm not grateful at all, but it was something to be thankful for.

"…Actually, at this point, it's a bit odd to even say it was just a joke."

The guild leader of a certain guild squinted his eyes at the sight he was seeing beyond the glass wall.

“Do you see that?”

“Yes, I heard it was a protest related to the revision of the labor law.”

Most office workers go to work at 7 a.m. and leave at 9 a.m. Among them, there were many who worked overtime. Some started to claim that this tight work environment had a big impact on the recent 'Dream Park' incident.

Moreover, they went to the government building and the headquarters of the Korean Hunter Association to protest. Many people were afraid of expressing their opinions directly, but many also agreed. This dungeon incident was like a beehive bursting.

“It’s been a really long time since I’ve seen that.”

“Are you talking about protests?”

“Whether it’s a protest or something, people are saying what they want to say.”

The guild leader laughed heartily.

“The way the world goes around will be less frustrating now.”

“Just because the guild leader is angry, doesn’t mean we should make others angry too….”

“Tseup, you’re like that because you’re young. Back in my day, everyone lived like that! People need to be a little angry and live like that!”

“That’s because the guild leader only gets angry.”

And in fact, the labor laws were changed.

The government and the association accepted the citizens' demands as if they had been waiting for it. They drastically reduced the maximum weekly working hours. In short, the main content was to start work at 9 a.m. and finish work at 6 p.m.

Of course, it was not applied right away. What does it mean when we are already creating a society by grinding down one of our resources, humans? In a way, it was like legally banning one of the usable resources.

“No matter how much I think about it, doesn’t this seem a bit wrong? If this continues, the company might find a way to replace its workforce.”

“Won’t that lead to fewer jobs? It’s already hard to get a job because the population is so low….”

So, this labor standards law was only revised, and it was decided to go through a pilot application period first. Some companies that received support from the government and associations decided to try this out.

Afterwards, it was decided to gradually expand the scope of application after review. So, nothing has changed right away, but the citizens’ circumstances were different. They were dumbfounded.

“…This worked…?”

“…Really? That’s ridiculous.”

I couldn't believe that first class citizens listened to them.

But the government and the association did not change their words. Companies that realized their intentions took care of themselves. If they were hated by these two in Korea, there would be no place to emigrate.

“Oh, then shouldn’t we protest this too?”

“Hey, since I got one, I think it would be good to buy some….”

“I see… Well, if you go against my will, you might end up with your neck cut off on your way home at night.”

“…What were you trying to say?”

“Re-implement compulsory education…. They said there was something like that before the great disaster.”

"…ah…."

The old man who was one of the protesters nodded, thinking that it was a reasonable opinion. He was from the time when compulsory education was available. He may not know for sure, but he knew that it was better when there was school than when there was no school.

But since they had already secured a guaranteed rest, people were worried rather than angry. They were worried that if they raised their voices again after having done everything they could, they would be hated.

“…Then how about this?”

“Huh? What?”

“Ha, protesting isn’t the only way to let the higher-ups know that you want to do something.”

“…Oh, that’s right. That’s right.”

I felt like they would never listen, so I resorted to the method of protest. It was also because I was so angry after experiencing something so big that almost turned the world upside down. But I was angry enough, and they needed some real compensation.

And then one day, the president of the association, Dan Hae-ra, laughed.

"oh."

She waved the paper she had received from her secretary.

“It’s not a protest this time?”

“Yes, just a suggestion in the purest sense.”

“It’s time to revive the National Archives. We should push for it during this meeting.”

“I’ll add it to the schedule.”

“By the way, that’s fortunate. I was worried that I would get excited once I tasted the sweetness of protesting….”

Dan Hae-ra carefully placed the citizens' petitions down, as if she were handling them as a precious gift.

“Is it okay to expect this much from people now?”

Dan Hae-ra, who spoke like that, smiled for a very long time with a rare gentle smile. The secretary was genuinely delighted by that sight. It was rare for my boss to be in such a good mood.

“It seems that the Black Cloak followers also helped a lot.”

“Yes, it’s a group with tremendous driving force and capital. The direction is also plausible.”

Among the so-called 'Black Cloak Enthusiasts', quite a few were first-class citizens. Most of them approached it as a hobby to appreciate mystical works, but ended up opening their eyes to social service.

They worked together with one mind and one purpose to protect the Earth that Black Cloak loved. The same was true in the outskirts outside the city. Thanks to this, the citizens gradually began to recognize each other as 'neighbors'.

“Even when things were really noisy because of the dungeon, I received a lot of help….”

The government and associations also used carrots and sticks to get people out of their dreams. However, the fact that they were able to shake off the temptation of dreams and return to reality was largely due to their connections in reality.

No matter how good the dream was, they could not abandon their families, friends, and lovers in reality. With their faith in their neighbors revived by the activities of their enthusiasts, they returned to their daily lives to pursue real relationships.

“At this point, it would be better to recognize the Black Cloak as an official religion.”

“Is any action needed?”

“Let us adjust it so that it can be like the time of the last God of Death.”

“Yes, Mr. Chairman.”

“If we were to build a temple, well….”

Danhae-ra tilted her head.

“I’m sure the Visabal Guild Leader will take care of it.”

I thought it would be better not to interfere.

* * *

The Dalnim Church closed the temple doors, leaving only a small number of people there.

“Dalnim Church will not be accepting new brothers for a certain period of time. Instead, we have decided to focus on internal reorganization. We will show our face again when Dalnim Church can stand before everyone as a priest worthy of being called a priest.”

The bishop appeared at the official event with a haggard face and reported the situation of the Dalnim Church. The atrocities that had occurred, and the events in the dungeon.

But people had a hard time figuring out whether to get angry, be scared, or just let it go since it wasn't their problem.

“It would be nice if we could be a negative example for the Earth.”

Dalnimgyo really locked its doors like that. Since it was originally operated under research commissions from the government, associations, or other places, there was no problem even if it disappeared for a long time.

Of course, that's the official situation.

“ Teacher!!”

“Aram.”

Aram visited the collector unofficially.

“Are you feeling okay?!”

“I am always healthy.”

“And even after causing something like that?”

“This teacher’s specialty is accomplishing big things with a healthy body and mind.”

“It’s a little scary when you say it like that.”

“What would you have been like then?”

Sergio Hunter's platinum blonde hair was dyed a deep red.

“But, yeah.”

He smiled, caressing Aram's cheek.

“Was it worth it?”

“…….”

Immediately afterwards, Aram's scream rang out.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (276)

276

Episode 276

After a few hours, Aram came to terms with the situation.

“Is this some kind of side effect…? A personality being superimposed….”

“Strictly speaking, they are all the same being, so you don’t have to be that surprised.”

“…Don’t you get dizzy when things change so quickly like that, teacher?”

“Isn’t it difficult to use both your left and right eyes as you go through life?”

“I understand what you mean.”

She seemed to think that Sergio Hunter had merged with the evil spirits in the process. In fact, it wasn't a completely wrong statement, and Geo simply agreed. As expected, his disciple was smart.

But Aram still seemed to have many questions.

“So, in reality, aren’t you using the power of two divine beings together…?”

"…hmm…."

1. Black Cloak, known as the Sun God. 2. Argio, known as the Divine of Wrath.

“…That’s right!”

This wasn't wrong either. Geo didn't lie. He was innocent.

“But don’t worry. Through this process, we have become one whole. There will be no harm caused by not being able to control our strength or willpower, so please rest assured, Saint.”

“But I hope you don’t overdo it….”

“Aram is the same. I heard you closed the temple doors this time. You must have made a big decision. Well, you have to solve the problems that arose internally before you can look forward to the future. You made a good choice.”

“Ahem, thank you. However, it is unprecedented to use different divine powers in one body. I know you are not an ordinary adult, but I am worried.”

Officially, 'Sergio Hunter' was in seclusion due to health reasons. Aram had a similar guess and came to visit him, not just to see him. She nodded after observing the teacher's condition a little more.

“But you’re not the one who will be affected by what I say.”

“Was I really that indifferent to my students as a teacher?”

“I know you are a very stubborn person.”

Since he was that kind of person, it would be the saint of the Dalnim Church who had healed him. Aram accepted this and raised another question. It was a question directed at the divine being of wrath who was sharing the same body with him.

“…Then, by any chance, Mr. Argio….”

“That too, I am. Because the Black Cloak has taken away the divine power of wrath.”

“I guess I’ll be able to see your face often like before.”

“I’m glad I made a good friend.”

Today, Geo's friends continued to grow.

“Now that it has stabilized safely, you will be able to meet the Divine Fury often in Korea. The ‘Dream Park’ that was created before is currently closed. It may be disappointing for the hunters who have worked hard, but it will be difficult to expect to obtain resources from there right away.”

Aram smiled as if he had expected this.

“Usually it’s hard to get something real in a virtual dungeon.”

“I see, I think you said that if you get a reward, it’s something like learning a skill….”

“And this time, the system rewarded us really generously.”

The hunters didn't even know what the so-called 'Little Dragon Call Ticket' was. It was said to grant 'simple wishes', but no matter how they looked at it, it didn't look simple. So they gathered opinions and asked the association for advice.

“Probably no hunter will act rashly until the association responds, but thanks to that, it seems like there aren’t many people who hold ill feelings about the recent ‘Dream Park’ incident.”

“That’s amazing.”

“The fact that it ended without anyone actually dying was significant. In a world where everyone risks their lives, this was a truly peaceful ending. Given that the opponent was an evil spirit, it seemed like they would treat it as a mild disaster.”

“I thought everyone would be upset.”

“There are some who give, but no one stands out in particular. Not only the system compensation, but also the government and the association have provided a lot of help in recovery and restoration.”

Aram played with the ends of his long hair.

“…there were many people who welcomed a society that had become a little more honest.”

She asked cautiously.

“Will there ever come a day when the Divine Fury will reside in this dimension?”

“I still do that.”

“I don’t think he’ll build a temple, but I hope he settles down. He was a mean and annoying person, but he helped me out more than that.”

“Even after seeing so much suffering and death?”

“…I guess you don’t like the God of Wrath, Teacher?”

Aram smiled awkwardly.

“I’ve been through a lot, but in the end, nothing bad happened. Besides, people in today’s world wouldn’t have been able to change this quickly just by gently coaxing them.”

“…have you forgiven him?”

“…Maybe? I just felt a little angry at some point. I must have gathered all my strength and threw a shooting star party, so I might have just lost all my energy.”

“I guess so too.”

Giovanni smiled his characteristic smile.

“I’m glad you look healthy.”

“…Is the teacher angry with him?”

“I also got released at some point, so you don’t have to worry.”

“Then that’s good.”

Aram got up from his seat.

“Next time, teacher, please visit our school.”

“Okay, I’ll do that.”

“Stay healthy.”

Aram bowed his head and left Geo's private room.

“…….”

Giovanni smiled with narrowed eyes on the bed in the private room that Visabal had decorated luxuriously.

“…I guess I should have been angry.”

Giovanni just couldn't do it, so he didn't do it.

It was his fault for being lazy, as he was not born with anger.

* * *

"so…."

Yoo Seong-un asked, rubbing his neck.

“It’s completely merged, now?”

“Yes, ‘Argio’ was satisfied.”

The man in the portrait continued.

“If you are looking for an easy-to-understand metaphor, the word ‘becoming Buddha’ would be a good fit.”

“That doesn’t mean I’ve truly left this world or disappeared, but it definitely feels real.”

“I felt a great sense of satisfaction. I don’t want to be angry anymore. I just want to enjoy the peace it brings.”

“Oh, good, peace, everything is good….”

Yoo Seong-un took his hand off her neck and asked carefully.

“…Hasn’t your speech become stiff again?”

“Please understand, Mr. Yoo Seong-un. I have completed all the assimilation with the humans included in this portrait, so I cannot act as I used to. Does it feel unnatural to me?”

“It just feels like an urban legend that allows for easy conversation? It doesn’t seem like a person at all, but it’s a good idea to keep this in mind if you plan on returning to human society later.”

“Yes, I understand. I will try not to make things awkward for the people around me this time. I just often forget what I should do, what I should say, and what I should look like. I will do it.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was worried.

'If I tell you that even just from what you're saying now, it seems like you can't do it at all, you'll get mad.'

Now his portrait had even taken on the divine wrath. He could not hope to remain as gentle as before. Yoo Seong-un decided to refrain from saying anything that he didn't need to say. He didn't want to offend the portrait.

Yoo Seong-un smiled his characteristically innocent smile.

"But that means, that's right. So you're not going to look for a new… um, 'Geo' for the time being? Didn't you say that it would be easier to act like a normal person if you received help from them?"

"What Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is correct. But from my experience, I can tell you that if we proceed with the fairy tale with the help of 'Geo', a huge event will occur on Earth."

By the way, the part where he said, "I can tell you that something big is going to happen on Earth" was an example of Geo's language being mistranslated as it passed through the portrait. Geo simply said, "Every time I unite with 'Geo', it seems like something big is going to happen on Earth."

However, due to nuances in translation, Geo ended up acting like a prophet.

"What happened during that time was traumatic for me."

"Oh, really?"

And Yoo Seong-un thought. Could it be that he misunderstood the meaning of the word trauma?

'I'm not sure if I'm mistaken, but I still think I'm using it wrong.'

But I understood what he was saying.

"It was inconvenient to create something on Earth."

“I understand you well.”

“Should I thank you for caring for our fragile planet…?”

The Bisabal who participated in this dungeon conquest spoke frankly about his feelings. He said that 'Geo's Portrait' seemed to be educating Earth in the way it wanted to be. Thinking about that, it made sense.

'I think Geo also knows that he can't properly educate them if he just pushes them too hard.'

Perhaps Geo wanted to give Earth a break. The big events had already thrown a fuse, and the straw was slowly burning, so he probably wanted to watch until it was completely burned down.

“…….”

A sudden thought occurred to Yoo Seong-un and he smiled broadly.

“You are definitely a teacher.”

“I told you the same thing before, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“No, it’s just that I feel like I’m finally starting to understand what it means.”

As expected from what the source had planned, it was both creepy and delightful.

“Oh, right. You know what? The Association has recognized the Black Cloak as an official religion.”

“Doesn’t a formal religion need proper institutions, buildings, and capital? I don’t have any of that. I don’t have any doctrines or a Bible, which is what a religion should have.”

“You’re suddenly talking too fast. What’s that… Your fans should know how to make it themselves?”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“You, the teacher of the Earth, thought of the religions before the Great Disaster, but modern religions are much more diverse and light. If it can be recognized by the state, then it is a religion.”

“It’s a huge burden, please take it away.”

“I told you it’s not something I can take away. After all, religion is something that has divinity and followers. The rest will come into being over time. The systems, buildings, and capital that you mentioned.”

“I know very well how religions were created. But I don’t think the ‘black cloak’ is enough to be the object of religion. I hope you don’t include me in that noisy and extravagant party.”

“Doesn’t it matter? It’s not common for the gods of most religions to show up in person, give awards, or speak to people. Even if you disappear for a century or so, the religions that have been created now won’t disappear, right?”

“I hope you don’t include me in that noisy, extravagant party….”

“There’s nothing wrong with making friends, Geo.”

I couldn't tell if it was friendly or not. It was probably just imitating humans, but it also seemed like it was shy, but it wasn't. And that was proof that Geo wasn't human.

'I guess it's just a matter of taking whatever attitude you want at the time.'

As expected from a being of origin, it had a light yet heavy, contradictory aspect.

“So what are you going to do now? Our timid portrait must be exhausted from this incident, so will he take a rest as usual? Or will he go see the power of an official religion recognized by the association?"

"No, I plan to go to the dungeon."

"…That's surprising, but if it's a dungeon, it's called the 'Dream Park'? Well, it's a natural choice since there are animals that you cherish there too. You even said they were Argio's children."

"Good idea, but no, that's not it. I'm going to visit the four-legged rainforest underground."

"… Are you talking about the 'Underground Four-legged Rainforest'? Of course, you can visit it as Sergio Hunter, or even as a portrait… but why there all of a sudden?"

When Yoo Seong-un asked about the unexpected destination, the portrait answered through the black paint.

"That is my brother."

"Um, yeah."

Yoo Seong-un opened a piece of candy, chewed it, swallowed it, and asked.

"If you ask for an explanation, what should I offer?"

"If you give me some delicious strawberries, Mr. Yoo Seong-un will be at ease."

"Strawberries are great, they're at their peak of flavor."

"I'm joking."

"Now even breathing is a lie."

Geo explained to Yoo Seong-un, who seemed dizzy and resigned.

“It was another world created by Argio’s father.”

The Creator who abandoned the red dragon.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (277)

277

Episode 277

Yoo Seong-un checked again after hearing Geo's explanation.

“…So the original creator of the ‘Dream Park’ was kicked out and created the ‘Underground Four-legged Rainforest’?”

“In summary, yes.”

“I thought it was a similar space, but….”

The fact that it's a forest. The existence of all kinds of dangerous poisons and creatures. The selfishness of humans. And so on... There were many similarities that could be recalled. But wasn't history completely different?

So, I thought that although the meteor clouds were very similar, they were separate spaces.

'I'm sure Geo said that too... Ah.'

In the past, Geo only said things like, "It's a separate dimension," and "It's not my hometown." He never said that they were not related at all. Maybe "Geo's Portrait" is something he only recently noticed.

Anyway, it was a surprising and embarrassing situation.

“…So how are you feeling, Geo?”

“I feel a little bit of responsibility.”

“Responsibility? Why?”

“Because we need to prepare to welcome a new family.”

“That’s why you said we were brothers.”

“I didn’t recognize them back then.”

“Because I hadn’t completely merged with ‘Argio’?”

“But maybe they recognized me.”

“Oh, right….”

Yoo Seong-un blinked. He thought of the flower dragon that was only friendly to Geo. At that time, the content of 'Argio' was high, so Geo's words could be right.

"uh…."

But I didn't know what to say.

“…Have a nice trip?”

“I will do that.”

The portrait greeted him bluntly, as always.

‘… something… .’

Yoo Seong-un's eyes rolled in all directions.

'It's like nothing happened.'

I felt like I was back to normal life.

Since then, the Dragon of Wrath has been frequently found in the 'Underground Four-Legged Forest'.

* * *

“In that sense, I’m going to try eating rice today.”

At Geo's words, the teddy bear sitting on the dining table tilted its head.

“Huh?”

“Isn’t it a happy day when a new family member joins?”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

The doll clapped its hands with its fluffy cotton pads. Of course, it didn't matter if Geo liked it. The reactions of the other family members were not much different.

First, Honey was looking at Geo with eyes that said, 'So what about food?' Dana was walking around nearby, squirming, as if she liked the baby dragons. The dragons were sniffing around the unfamiliar house, exploring it.

It was overall cute.

'As expected, leaving home is a real struggle.'

If it weren't for Mr. 'Argio's' stubbornness, this wouldn't have happened.

'I really need to rest now.'

In fact, he was busy because he was doing the work himself. Anyway, Geo realized that 'if I'm not careful, my precious and lazy life could fall apart' due to the Argio incident. He decided to be more careful.

'For the time being, the fairy tale is sealed.'

Who knows if the next Geo will be a workaholic?

“Kuku? Kuku?”

“Yes? Oh, yes.”

Geo nodded to his father's question.

“Your parents are here with you too, so I don’t think you need to worry.”

By the way, the giant water dragon that was supporting the 'underground four-legged rainforest', or the dungeon itself, was also present in Geo's cabin. Geo took out a small flowerpot from inside his cloak.

"…? dream?"

"yes."

“Kyuu….”

“This is Woorim.”

"dream."

“My sense of naming has always been poor, Father. There’s nothing I can do about it. You can tell just by looking at the fact that your first grandson’s name is Honey. It must be miserable, but please accept the reality.”

"dream…."

“I think it would be better to eat outside today, since there are flowers and rainforests. This table is too human-centered and uncomfortable to eat at. The weather is nice and bright, so it will make for a great lunch.”

Geo placed Woorim on the table to facilitate smooth conversation.

“…….”

Woorim looked uncomfortable somewhere.

“Is something wrong, Woorim?”

“…….”

“Huh? I don’t know what you mean. How could I eat Mr. Woorim?”

“…….”

“Just because you put it on the table doesn’t mean you’re going to eat it all, right?”

It was the same as the old Sankalut. Woorim asked if the reason he was put on the table was to eat him. Geo strongly denied it. He was not that kind of person.

“I am not a weakling like Mr. Woorim who eats weak trees.”

“…….”

“Mr. Woorim? Why aren’t you saying anything?”

“…….”

“…Do you eat trees that aren’t weak? I said it without much meaning, believe me.”

“…….”

“I said that because small trees are often good for medicine or a type of tea, but I didn’t mean to say that I was going to eat them. I mean, how can you eat a part of their tiny, newborn bodies….”

The current potted rainforest was more like grass that was just starting to take the shape of a tree.

“First of all, there’s no way I could feed my family.”

Woorim did not take his eyes off him with suspicion. No, he did not have eyes. However, he did not take his suspicions off him. Argio was not a traditional deity, so he could have lied at any time.

“I was so sad that you didn’t trust your family like this, and I just wanted to sprinkle water on you.”

“…….”

“I’m glad you like it. Today, Mr. Woorim’s meal will be the spring water of the forest.”

“…! …!!”

“What on earth are you doing! How sweet and refreshing this water is! I swear on my three meals a day, you will be healthy in no time!”

“……!!!”

“You have to be strong, Woorim, to protect those little friends in this harsh world…!!”

Dana watched with interest the rare sight of the young tree desperately writhing its entire body. It was a remarkable sight not seen in the cave where no plants grew.

In the end, Geo compromised with Urim's meal as iced tea. He said that all that would be used would be water made by melting the ice pearls in the ice storage. Geo was very sorry that he couldn't prepare a perfect meal.

“I can really feed you well….”

“Kung, kung, kung.”

“You don’t trust your father either.”

“Kung….”

Honey looked up at Geo as if to say, 'This can't be helped.' She was full of affection, but there was no trust. Geo was saddened by the truly painful truth. He wanted to turn everyone in the world into pigs.

“…Then I’ll suggest the next meal.”

Fortunately, the flower dragon had a mouth and could eat.

“Mr. Woorim could eat it if I pierced his mouth, but he refused.”

“Kuk kuk kuk.”

The teddy bear smiled as if it was worth it. Beings born from the fate of providence were in pain from change. It was a similar case to humans who, when their original hand was cut off, suffered severe mental pain in addition to physical pain.

It would have been the same for the tree, whose heart was loved by God. So his creator would have cursed him to turn into a dragon. That would have been a very effective punishment.

“Well then, let’s see. First of all, stew doesn’t seem like it’s for me.”

“Oh my.”

“Dana thought so too. Right, we ate it too often. Of course, Dad can make 340 delicious stews without getting tired of it even if he eats it that often, but it’s kind of… no matter how I think about it, it’s just horrible.”

“Ugh.”

“Thank you for your agreement, daughter.”

The stew was a very good meal, but it was not the only thing I could do, so why have stew again? Again? Once more? As Sergio the Pig said, that was against the rules.

“Then, the Dongpa Pork made with the power of father….”

“Kung.”

“You ate that last time when you were giving it to the moon.”

Dalnim was surprisingly greedy. Maybe it was because he had a lot of family members inside.

“But if you look at it that way, there’s nothing we can eat.”

It was recognized that food and its accompanying gastronomy were also a kind of sweet knowledge. Dalnim continued to harass Geo. To taste more diverse foods. Geo had to make and offer all the foods he knew.

'There must have been a terrible deal behind the moon becoming small enough for a person to carry.'

That's why I couldn't find any food that I hadn't fed to Dalnim.

“But Dongpa Pork is definitely a food that I ate quite recently. Let’s go back a little bit. For example, tacos. It’s a kind of wrap made with corn flour tortillas with various meats and vegetables.”

“Yeah.”

“Well, that would be inconvenient for Dana to eat. Seeing how much weight she’s lost while Dad wasn’t paying attention to her, I need to feed her something right away, but a small portion won’t do. What should I do? For now, I think meat would be good….”

Geo, who had been standing still, tilted his head.

"barbecue?"

It wasn't bad.

“This dad is really amazing at making folded pork. Of course, the taste of grilled pork will be different from that of low-temperature cooked folded pork, but trust this dad, the son of the sun and the benefactor of the sea. He is confident in controlling the temperature and the juice.”

“Gurrrr.”

“You can look forward to a chewy grilled tofu like soft tofu.”

Geo headed to the 'Animal Kingdom'.

* * *

“So you came here to hunt?”

“Do you have any complaints?”

“That can’t exist.”

The fox tribe chief, Rami, laughed, rubbing his hands together.

“I asked because I thought you might need more workers. Fortunately, things have stabilized a lot since the war thanks to your mercy. Look, isn’t it beautiful?”

As Rami said, the 'dream park' boasted a dreamlike beauty. The ground floated in the air like clouds, and on each of the large and small cloud islands, various plants and animals grew.

But that wasn't all. Fragments of a luxurious amusement park were flying and glittering in the air. There were carousels, sweet candies and chocolates, and bright ivory rails that connected here and there.

“Oh, of course, I’m also diligently managing the surface and underground world. The Black Forest and the ruins are still maintained. The wild beasts there seem to have stabilized a lot, as they don’t come out of their own territory.”

“Then what should I hunt…?”

“Anything but one of our foxes, master!”

The fox smiled brightly, wagging its tail. Rami, who had been imitating a human for the first time in a long while, pointed at the wolf with his finger.

“If you’re big enough, even a wolf can beat you, so how about you?”

"hey."

The wolf that returned to greet its owner who had returned after a long time made a face as if it had chewed shit.

“Don’t suddenly sacrifice yourself to others.”

“You don’t even have that much loyalty…?”

“Why don’t you mature as you age?”

“Isn’t that the story about wolves with small brains?”

“That one bite keeps going….”

The wolf tribe chieftain, Gargal, gnashed his teeth and then let out a sigh.

“…If it is all right, I will go down and bring you some good game. If it is known that you wish, all the beasts will help. How much meat do you need?”

“…Well, well….”

Argio said after thinking about it.

“I think five plump sheep would be enough.”

“? Who are you going to catch and eat that?”

The wolves, whose bodies were as big as houses, basically ate a lot.

“I know you call me a substitute, but I have a question.”

“Tell me, buddy.”

“What will happen to this world now?”

“You have become my property. Don’t you remember our promise?”

“I remember, but I was wondering if you plan on using it again.”

“There will never be another battlefield here.”

“It’s reassuring, but… also disappointing.”

“What do I regret when I will never leave?”

This is Argio's hometown, so they could never be separated.

“But when I think about it this way, I’m worried about Ater….”

“…Ater? Wasn’t he dead?”

“Oh, it’s a little different. But I still need to rest, so let’s leave it alone.”

“Um, uh, yes. Okay….”

Gargal nodded.

“Let’s go hunting.”

* * *

So Geo returned with 58 sheep, 42 cows, 10 pigs and 95 chickens.

They were all alive and healthy.

“…….”

“…Ta-da.”

Geo added as if making an excuse.

“It’s okay, most of them will put us in. Or they can just release us into the forest.”

“…Kkuu?”

“Yes, they are all quite large. If we catch one, we can expect to get quite a lot of meat, but we also have to eat to live, right? We can do it.”

"dream."

“If you make any leftovers, you can share them with Yoo Seong-un and Joo Hyun.”

As always, it was a peaceful ending.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (278)

278

Episode 278

The public opinion was that this 'Dream Park' incident was a prank by the gods, and the world returned to its daily life as usual. The incident at that time became a minor topic of conversation.

“Some say that it was helpful to Korea because it was able to inform people of the dangers of the sacred after a long time. However, since damage is still damage, such opinions seem to be criticized….”

“Even if I was out of my mind when the incident happened, if people had a sense of humor, they would have known. If the divine had not been watching over me, I wouldn’t have been able to get away with it without much damage.”

“Well, it was our guild leader who came to visit… well, he was so….”

"…yes…."

And the collector tried hard to ignore all these facts.

“…….”

“…….”

If you pretend to know, it's extra work.

“…Is there anyone else who wants to say something?”

“…What were we talking about just now?”

“This person is good at socializing.”

"thank you."

I knew that this 'Dream Park' incident was related to their black portrait. Even if I wasn't informed, I had a clue.

Yet the collection staff managed to erase all these truths from their minds.

'I'm already busy.'

'If you get entangled, it's hell.'

The staff of the collection store had a good immunity. Not only against diseases and curses, but also against the mental realm. Things happened dozens of times a day, and they were so surprised that they couldn't do their work.

“Oh, lunch time is over.”

“See you later.”

That doesn't mean I wasn't surprised at all by this incident.

‘… Considering the number of cases so far, this time the scale was large.’

'Fuck, this fucking world. Guild Leader, I believe you…'

'I trust you, really. I believe you have some thoughts.'

They were simply relying on the guild leader, Bisabal.

'He is not the kind of person who would plan anything that would damage his collection.'

'I'm not the type of person to let such a disaster happen, you can trust me on that.'

The members of the Collector's Guild knew about the collector's irrational obsession. They believed in it. And as if to repay their trust, they returned to their daily lives like this. The employees' 'pretend not to know' was based on that trust.

However, it was not possible to pretend not to know about 'Sergio Hunter'.

"……."

"Hello, Mr. Binary."

"…Yes, hello."

"It's been a while."

"Long time no see, I win…."

Binary, a Grade A Hunter and Curator who had become a regular employee of the collection store, held back a deep sigh. It was a sigh that was about to come out due to extreme tension, but he barely held it back. He couldn't go against the other person's wishes.

Binary's gaze fell on a blond man wearing a black cloak.

'…I don't know what to say.'

There was a limit to brainwashing him into thinking that he was just a 'good person'. In the past, he was at the level of a monster, but now it's been officially recognized as a divine being. His attitude naturally became timid.

'It's certainly a bit disappointing that the situation has gotten to that point and they still let this being go free. Well, there's probably no way to limit the actions of the divine in the first place... .'

I couldn't help but be more careful.

'What if a disaster strikes because of the nonsense I unknowingly uttered?'

That coincided with the concerns that Yoo Seong-un once had. These mysterious beings would cause disaster if they deviated from even one standard. Standards that humans could not even understand.

Binary thought for a moment and then said.

“…I heard you haven’t been feeling well lately.”

Guild Leader, I believe you.

“Are you feeling better now?”

“Thank you for your concern, I’m fine.”

“I asked because I don’t think I’ve seen Sergio Hunter in the company recently.”

“Did you find me? I was doing some soul-searching.”

“Ah, self-reflection… I see….”

Fortunately, the world didn't end up collapsing after exchanging a few words.

'... Yes, if there were going to be any problems with communication, you would have given notice in advance. Right now, the only rule regarding this entity in the building is a notice that is either a joke or something. This should be fine.'

There is no way to stop a being as big as a god. However, it is possible to control people. The fact that it did not do even that would mean that it was okay to interact as before.

“I think this was a good time for self-reflection…?”

“It was a truly meaningful time for me.”

The blond man smiled and waved.

“Would you like to talk to me?”

“…….”

Somehow, human imitation seems to have become more crude than before.

"…uh…."

I guess I shouldn't point it out.

'I don't know how you plan on living in human society again with this level of imitation, but it's not my problem to get involved in. If you really thought this would cause problems, you seniors would have intervened a long time ago.'

Binary tried hard to suppress the intense discomfort. He wanted to treat this precious work with respect.

“…Excuse me, but I have a Sweet Tea Party scheduled for 30 minutes, at 4 AM sharp.”

“Sweet porcelain girls, I know. Do you still care?”

“Yes, I am still working on that job.”

Perhaps the opponent had remembered something from the past. It was an unbelievable miracle that such a being could remember such a humble human being. He even remembered the name.

'We didn't even sign a contract.'

Binary saw the black cloak.

“…….”

He was still looking at Binary with a friendly smile. The stuffed smile that befitted the nature of a portrait gave a living human being a sense of alienation that he could not shake off.

Still, a favor is a favor, so I couldn't bring myself to refuse.

“…So, after I finish work at 4 o’clock, yes, I can talk to you whenever I want. Is that okay with you?”

“I’m worried that I might be interfering with your work.”

“To tell you the truth, it’s not that it’s not a nuisance….”

It was crazy to me, but I couldn't lie. Those who are entangled in such a strong mystery often hate lies. I had to muster up the courage to be honest.

“…but I have a personal curiosity and a goodwill towards you. I would be lying if I said I didn’t feel fear towards Sergio, but I didn’t feel the need to force myself to interact with you for that reason. Sergio is kind to all of us and would leave if we asked politely.”

So this was Binary's intention.

“So, please wait a moment. I would like to talk to you after I finish work. When we first met, I was so confused… There were many things I couldn’t ask you.”

“You are kind.”

“…Mr. Sergio too.”

“I will accept your offer.”

"thank you."

“That goes for me too.”

Mr. Sergio, who was standing in the hallway 1 on the 3rd floor, gave directions.

“Would you like to go with me?”

“…If that’s okay with you.”

“Of course I’m happy, Mr. Binary.”

“…….”

Binary cursed himself inwardly.

'Even if I end up taking on additional work, I have nothing to say.'

But what could he do, he really had a lot to be curious about. Things were different than when he was a rookie.

Binary had adapted to being a collector and was a proper curator. It was only natural that he would be curious about the being he was in charge of, the Sweet Tea Party, calling it the 'godfather'.

Binary followed behind the hem of the black cloak, holding back a sigh.

“…….”

There was no shadow and no sound of footsteps.

Only the faint sound of dry grass could be heard.

* * *

“Oh my god.”

Garasani greeted Sergio and Binary with a bright smile.

“Your Majesty has walked.”

“Hello, Mr. Garasani.”

“It’s been a long time, Sergio Hunter. I’m sorry I couldn’t meet you in person in that magnificent dungeon last time. I understand that you must have been very busy.”

“I was sick at the time, so I couldn’t come see you, teacher. Could you please be generous and understand?”

“What are you talking about… It’s really nice to see you again like this.”

At that conversation, Binari took a step back. It wasn't just because of the cold-blooded butler's unfamiliar smile.

Binary thought behind her expressionless face.

'This is a conversation I don't want to get involved in.'

A perfect work imitating a courteous priest and a deacon who respects and loves him. It was a conversation that was truly uncomfortable, one that made me feel an instinctive rejection as a human being.

Binary looked at his wristwatch.

'It's exactly 11 minutes and 4 seconds from now... .'

Then the curator asked him,

“Were you preparing for work?”

“…Yes, I am in charge of ‘Sweet Tea Party’.”

“Oh, I know that. They’re the cute porcelain ladies who have to set up the tea table within a margin of error of five seconds every hour at 4 AM. I think they were sixth grade. According to the report, today’s tea was macaroons.”

“Yes, we have prepared blueberry, yuzu, and pistachio macarons for each of your preferences.”

“Since we have a large dessert today, the tea party will take a little longer.”

Garasani asked, rubbing his chin.

“Where did you meet ‘Mr. Sergio’?”

“We met in hallway 1 on the third floor.”

“Did you agree to talk to this person?”

“Yes, after I finish work….”

"aha."

Garasani nodded and looked at 'Sergio' again with a smile.

“Did that young friend cause any inconvenience?”

“No, he was kind to me.”

“Well, that’s good. However, there’s still time until four o’clock sharp. If it’s okay with you, Sergio Hunter, I think we could talk together until then.”

Garasani spoke in a tone like that of a caring old man.

“That guy is brave and capable, but he doesn’t have enough experience to handle such a noble person along with the work he has been assigned.”

It was only then that Binary realized that the 5th floor leader was trying to help him.

'Does this mean I should just do my work without any pressure?'

It was certainly nerve-wracking to work under the watchful eye of the black cloak. Binary glanced at 'Mr. Sergio'. At that glance, 'Mr. Sergio' smiled gently.

“Then I’ll see you after 4 o’clock.”

“…Yes, I’ll see you then.”

As Binary lowered his head, Garasani escorted 'Sergio'. As the two disappeared beyond another wall, Binary raised his head. Then he let out a very faint sigh.

Although it was a companion I chose myself, I was still a bit nervous.

“…….”

But it was a more positive feeling than I had imagined. The fullness of having briefly contained something huge.

‘… Is this why there are people in this world who enjoy thrills… ?’

Soon, at 4 o'clock, Binary placed a purple, yellow, and green macaron in front of each of the porcelain dolls. It took a little longer, perhaps because they were larger than the usual size of the snacks.

“It’s a nice crunch.”

“It’s a nice moisturizing effect.”

“It was a good time.”

Binary was nervous about the words that predicted today's fortune.

'This time, another abnormality may occur. Prepare to receive it in advance and be fully prepared so as not to miss it… .'

As expected, there was additional comment.

“It smelled good.”

“It was a nice snack.”

“It was a good decision.”

“The lighting is nice.”

“It was a nice consideration.”

A total of 5 positive comments.

“It’s going to be a bad day.”

Just one negative comment.

“Godfather.”

“The godfather has arrived.”

“Please give me a hug.”

And the dolls closed their eyes as usual.

“…….”

Binary sighed deeply.

‘… I think I know what the bad fortune that came out at the end means.’

I've spent quite a bit of time with these porcelain dolls. They didn't die from one or two bad fortunes. If you add in additional good fortunes, the bad fortunes they were talking about would be minor misfortunes.

'I guess it's bearable if it's just breaking a leg or an arm, but I wonder what it'll be like.'

That's when Binary turned his head.

“…….”

“Are you done with work?”

“…Yes, Manager of the 5th floor.”

“Then thank you for your hard work.”

For a moment, he doubted my gaze.

It wasn't surprising that he approached without a sound. The problem, or rather, I don't know if I should call it a problem, was that Garasani was holding something in his hand. A piece of paper that was freshly stained with bright red blood. And something thick wrapped in that thin paper... .

No matter how I looked at it, it was a chunk of meat that had just been slaughtered.

“Then I will go now.”

“I look forward to seeing you again next time.”

“Oh, please call me….”

The fifth floor manager bowed politely to Mr. Sergio and left, holding a handful of meat in both hands.

“…….”

“Did you finish your work well?”

“…Oh, yes.”

Suddenly, Binary began to wonder if her 'bad luck' was just beginning.

* * *

And the curator who was working the early morning shift on the third floor witnessed Binari walking around the gallery, dripping blood and holding a piece of meat wrapped in paper in his hand.

“Oh, sir, are you crazy?”

“Are you done screaming?”

“I thought it was one of your works.”

“I was hit by the piece….”

“Ah, it was a piece.”

After that, a warning that 'Mr. Sergio' had started his activities again appeared on the homepage of the regular employees of the collection company. They praised Binary's courage in personally confronting 'Mr. Sergio'.

And Binary was called to the Visabal.

“You said you got meat. Was it lamb? Cow? Chicken? Pork?”

“Please, why are you doing this to me?”

“Or something else?”

“I want to leave work.”

“I became the guild leader to prevent that from happening.”

“I really want to get off work….”

The fortune telling of the porcelain girls was excellent.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (279)

279

Episode 279

When the first news of the portrait that had resumed its activities after a long time was that it was a 'bloody raw meat gift', Yoo Seong-woon went straight to see Geo.

“Geoya.”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“Do you have any ill feelings about our company’s policy?”

“Not at all. And you came at just the right time. Mr. Yoo Seong-un, I have a gift for you. You will be very happy to receive it.”

“Now you just let it go like a breath? What did I do wrong? What kind of warning is this? No, before that, did my words even reach your ears?”

“I became stronger.”

“Yeah, I see.”

It was a portrait of Geo, who had adapted well to human society in a strange place. Yoo Seong-un quickly stopped the portrait that was moving as if it was lifting something.

“Hey, wait a minute. Before we start lifting meat again, let’s talk first.”

Yoo Seong-un was terrified. He had no idea what he had done wrong or where things had gone wrong. If possible, he had to resolve the situation through dialogue.

And fortunately, Geo was a portrait that could be interacted with in a moderate manner. If he was good, he could even persuade him. Yoo Seong-un desperately tried to refuse.

“I’m not as talented at cooking as you are, so I can’t make anything with meat that hasn’t had its blood drained. More importantly, I didn’t give you anything, so how can I repay you for giving me a gift like this…?”

“Is Mr. Yoo Seong-un my friend?”

“…Friends, then?”

“You paid every price necessary to get here through it.”

“I’m really sorry, but did I unknowingly sign some kind of slave contract? Or a body waiver? What did I give to deserve such a gift?”

A great terror has struck.

“Geo, I always tell you that if you want to make a contract with someone, you should at least give them some notice beforehand. Am I really a human and can’t die? Am I immortal? Am I immortal? Or was that a joke about being friends with you in the next life?”

Geo ignored it cleanly.

“Luckily for you, Mr. Yoo Seong-un, this time you have a choice. Choose between a sheep and a chicken.”

"…chicken?"

“You are a good adult for making such an obedient choice. I will give you these two things as a reward.”

“Please don’t do this.”

Nevertheless, Yoo Seong-un ended up holding a large chunk of meat in both hands.

“…I have a question. You clearly said they were sheep and chicken, but why are they both so heavy? Aside from their size, why are they all so red? Isn’t one of them chicken? Why is the blood dripping down? More importantly, why wasn’t the blood drained when they were slaughtered? Are you sure you’re not angry? I’m really scared.”

“That is your misunderstanding. This is the best blood, so I cleaned it up to the minimum. When grilled, the meat density increases, and when boiled, the savory taste increases. You can separate the blood and eat it separately, but I like it best when cooked like this, so I gave it to you as a gift.”

It meant that, contrary to what Yoo Seong-un had worried about, there was a valid reason.

“You can find the answer to the size and color of this gift in my portrait. May I invite you, Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“Unfortunately, I just got back from working overtime. There are a lot of areas I need to check right now, but I put everything aside and came to see you. I wondered if this was one of your protest methods.”

It was a portrait that always presented high-quality ingredients and food to humans. I couldn't help but feel a chill down my spine when I suddenly saw him giving away raw meat that hadn't even been cleaned of blood.

It is not uncommon for works to give such obscure warnings.

The portrait seemed to have only just realized the fear of humans. There, Yoo Sung-woon could recall that he had made a similar mistake in the early days when his work was exhibited.

Although the portrait still had a gloomy and blunt atmosphere, he tried to reassure Yoo Seong-un with his own kindness.

"…you and all the staff of this company were very kind to me. I had no complaints and I had no intention of complaining. I apologize for the lack of gift wrapping. I wrapped it in paper to absorb as little blood as possible, but I didn't expect you to be so surprised."

"I wonder if it's just a packaging issue…."

"I will try to be more moderate in my actions from now on. If the other person is not afraid of me, I will also explain the gift."

"…Well, okay, if you have no complaints, then that's fine. I was wondering if you were angry because you couldn't build the Temple of Wrath or something."

"We don't need a temple of wrath. Don't you think so?"

"My opinion is not that important…."

Yoo Seong-un let out a sigh that was either relief or confusion.

'… I didn't say anything to the guild leader or the 5th floor leader, so I thought it wouldn't be a very serious situation… but it was really less problematic than I imagined.'

He wrapped the neatly wrapped raw meat, which was slightly stained with blood, in a ziplock bag again. He then wiped the blood off the outside with a handkerchief.

Yoo Seong-un returned to his usual innocent smile after putting the meat in his work bag.

"Anyway, I'll eat this well too."

“You’ve lost a lot of weight. Don’t you eat properly?”

“I always say, Geo. Hunters should die when they become pigs. If you don’t have a good reason to fatten them up, you’re not worthy of being a hunter.”

“But Mr. Yoo Seong-un is thinner than average.”

“I’m average, you know? I eat twice a day, so don’t worry.”

“Twice?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un handled it like a professional.

“It’s going to be the fourth time.”

"great."

The portrait nodded.

“If it’s not my imagination, you seem to have been particularly busy lately.”

“Oh, what should I say? The world has been in a lot of chaos lately.”

“Is it because of what I did?”

“That may have had some influence, but… The Earth was already quite creaky, it was truly a castle built on sand. With the mystery so disturbed in such a situation, it’s only natural that the gardens would become noisy.”

"aha."

'Portrait of Geo' said as if he understood.

“There have been a lot of little commotions lately. I’ve seen friends big and small walking around the city. I remember Mr. Yoo Seong-un referring to them as the Children of Origin."

"Children, what a cute expression."

To Geo, the Eye of Origin, it would feel like a child.

"That's right, it's because the mysterious organs and blood vessels surrounding the Earth are stirring. That's why the snowfield I'm in these days isn't quiet. Do you remember the therapist Jeong Yeong-won you met last time? I heard he's completely secluded too… It's one of the events you can't help but experience if you live on Earth."

Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently.

"It's not like it's your fault."

"I apologize for the inconvenience."

"It's a natural phenomenon, so you don't have to feel responsible. The Earth naturally has this kind of midnight phenomenon. It causes big and small disturbances like this and then returns to its original place."

"Sometimes I wonder about Mr. Yoo Seong-un's garden."

"…okay?"

It was a slightly happy remark, so Yoo Seong-un smiled with his eyes wide open.

"But unfortunately, I don't have the authority to invite others to the garden like you. If you were to step forward, things might be different, but for now, that's fine by me."

It would be strange if a mere gardener had the authority to do whatever he wanted with the garden.

"Would you like to see my eyes instead?"

“Did you recommend Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s eyes?”

“The part that shows off a garden the most is the snow.”

“Snow….”

“…….”

Even though it was covered in black paint, I felt eyes on it.

“…….”

As expected, it's scary.

‘… It’s been a long time since I’ve felt this creepy.’

There was a coolness as if my heart, my brain, and my marrow were touching the air.

If the portrait's gaze had not been obscured by that paint, Yoo Seong-un would not have been able to endure it. Rather, as a gardener, there were many things he could feel more clearly.

Soon after, the portrait finished admiring the garden.

“It’s cold.”

It was a plain assessment.

“I will knit you a scarf soon.”

“Oh… I appreciate that, but I’m not really going to be stuffed like that, am I?”

“Since Mr. Yoo Seong-un has accepted me as a friend, there is no need for such a price.”

“So in the end, was it my opinion that mattered?”

“Isn’t being friends always about what each other thinks?”

“Sometimes I think you really like your friends, don’t you?”

“I like it.”

The portrait was positive.

“I like friends I can hang out with, promises I don’t break, and punishments that are necessary when the time comes.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth for a moment, then closed it.

"…I see?"

I thought it would be better not to stir it up.

“Are you curious about my current situation? Or the current state of society? Since you’ve been staying in the portrait these days, I thought you might want to hear about this as well.”

“I wonder if the collectors’ staff are okay.”

“As for you, uh, there was a new notice recently. It said that you were giving us bloody meat as gifts these days, so be careful. We didn’t know exactly what that meant.”

“I apologize for the poor wrapping of the gift I gave you.”

“You don’t have to be so sorry.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled refreshingly.

“Everyone is familiar with this kind of thing.”

For example, a pitch-black portrait gives you an unidentified piece of meat.

This was Geo's first time, but as I thought when Yoo Seong-un came, it was not uncommon for works to try to warn of something in this strange way.

If you were a collection store employee, you would have to be very alert at times like that.

Usually, such things were expressions of discomfort or ominous curses, warnings, or prophecies. The curators also judged it to be a type of 'art piece'. It wasn't for nothing that it came to Geo like a meteor shower.

“As for other perceptions, are you a little surprised that you have been officially recognized as a deity? I guess that’s about it. In a world overflowing with deities, there are only a few religions recognized by the state.”

“That must mean there are a lot of people who play pranks.”

“That’s right. If you rashly acknowledge divinity, its mysterious power will become enormous. And too much power can be a disaster to humans. Unless divinity itself has some self-control, it should not be acknowledged as a religion.”

“But you did it for me.”

“You… because it’s you… yeah….”

Yoo Seong-un had nothing else to say.

“Do you know what your followers are doing these days?”

“They are not believers, they are enthusiasts who like my paintings.”

“Yeah, enthusiasts. You know what they’re doing?”

“They have been visiting people in need recently and providing them with appropriate assistance.”

“That’s it. Look at how much positive influence the believers, who still don’t have proper doctrine, temples, or even uniforms, are having on society. The association and the government made the right decision.”

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.”

“What if you call him….”

He was powerless to help Geo.

“If you’re a collector, don’t worry. They’re all just anxious to make you feel better. Right now, collectors fall into one of three categories.”

“I am listening.”

“People who like you, people who respect you, people who fear you.”

“I will choose the second one.”

“Unfortunately, you have to choose all three. Even if you demolish the house in this collection, it’s the same. What the members of the collection guild think of you is, well… yeah.”

Yoo Seong-un came to a conclusion.

“It’s a natural phenomenon.”

“Natural phenomenon.”

“It’s like the fog that often covers a lake.”

"fog."

“Fog that allows conversation and interaction.”

It was already that way, but it became even stronger after I became convinced that the Black Cloak was something more than divine. It wasn't an ordinary reaction, but it couldn't be helped since it was a collection of extraordinary collectibles.

The portrait asked that question.

“Everyone, stay calm.”

“Everyone knows that’s wise.”

Yoo Seong-un knew very well what his colleagues were thinking.

“We are a collection, Geo. The status quo is essential. The guild master never forced it, but only those who want to do so are left here now. What can such excellent service workers do if they are constantly swayed by their emotions?”

So I had to be polite.

“I should be polite to you as well.”

It didn't matter whether their feelings toward him were awe, respect, or fear. They just had to follow the manual. Appreciation was theirs alone. It wasn't something the cogs of society had to show off.

“So don’t worry, our thoughts and feelings don’t matter. All the staff at the collection are there to serve you. But whatever they have, they will turn away of their own accord. Then you will know that it will be very, very tiring.”

“I see that that is your way.”

The portrait's answer was, as expected, blunt and plain.

“I respect that.”

“Really? You’re not offended?”

Yoo Seong-un wiped the corners of his mouth with an embarrassed smile.

“You’re, um, a person…? I guess it feels wrong to treat a being that thinks they’re a person this way. It’s a bit late to ask, but I wonder if it’s really okay.”

“I know that’s one way you see me. I affirm all of those ways. What I think about myself doesn’t matter to you.”

“Like we are?”

“And as I am.”

The portrait was briefly summarized.

“We respect each other.”

“That’s cool.”

“I like it too.”

“Yeah, that’s right. That’s right….”

I could understand what was being said.

Humans interpret this existence as a 'portrait'. And this existence also interprets the humans beyond the frame as 'paintings'. There was no reason not to respect each other, since they were each other's works of art.

Suddenly I got goosebumps.

“…A sudden thought occurred to me, you seem to be changing, but you don’t change at all.”

How is that possible?

'... he became the son of the sun, and the god of wrath. One day he became a man, and another day he became a dragon. And then he returned at the end and became a painting that claimed to be human.'

This being was capable of interaction. And to interact meant to mix. If you put paint in a river, it would naturally become cloudy, but it stayed in the same place. It was truly a stuffed painting.

It was an incredibly strange thing.

"hmm…."

However, if you show too much of this, you might feel uncomfortable. 'Portrait of Geo' thinks of itself as a human being, so it's better to go along with its pace as much as possible.

Yoo Seong-un spoke as if he had just remembered something.

“Yeah, I think I’ll have time soon.”

“Are you on vacation?”

“I rolled around in front of the guild leader. I cleaned the floor with my whole body.”

“I don’t think you were embarrassed.”

“I hope you enjoyed it and took a vacation. This is how I live, Geoya.”

It was worth it to take the shame and show some flair.

“I have the whole day off this Friday. If I add it to the weekend, I think I can go somewhere to have fun. If it’s okay with you, how about going on a nice overseas trip? It’s a total mess, but the US is pretty organized, so I think it’ll be okay.”

“I can help you move.”

“Oh, that’s right. That’s right. Anyway, tell Joohyun-ssi that I said that. I’m going to be very busy until Friday, so please take note. If you want to go out before then, bring Joohyun-ssi with you. Don’t forget.”

“Joohyun and I are one body.”

“When you say that, it doesn’t sound like a metaphor.”

“We are separated like one body.”

The portrait answered after a moment of thought.

“I will wait.”

“Wait a minute, I just had a feeling. You’re not going to sit around and wait. What are you going to do while you wait?”

“I have to farm first.”

“I don’t know what it is, but I’m looking forward to it.”

“Please look forward to it.”

* * *

And so it became Friday.

“So this is Geo-ssi’s fried popcorn?”

“For today, I selected corn that would be successfully fried.”

“Oh my god….”

This is the first time I've seen popcorn the size of a baseball. It was fluffy and soft, just like a slightly hard marshmallow.

Joo-hyun picked up a popcorn container neatly folded out of paper. Then he sat down next to Geo. Next to Geo, Yoo Seong-un was sitting, covered with a blanket made of the skin of a golden-footed sheep.

There were also Danawa Honey, a teddy bear, a water dragon, and an unidentified flower pot.

“……?”

Joo-hyun, who had been hesitating, asked in front of the huge TV.

“But why do we sit on the floor instead of this big sofa?”

"ah."

"ah…."

Yoo Seong-un offered a plausible answer.

“Because your legs are comfortable?”

Geo added a word.

“It’s okay to drop food on the floor.”

Joohyun nodded.

“I know you all know there’s no deep meaning to it, so let’s just put on a movie.”

So on Friday evenings, they would have discussions where they would put on a horror movie and deeply analyze the occult phenomena it featured.

In particular, Yoo Seong-un was satisfied, saying, “I’m learning a lot.”

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (280)

280

Episode 280

Geo also met Sanarae.

“Hello, how have you been?”

“Wow, that’s a really typical greeting.”

“I hope you are doing well.”

“At this point, I’m starting to get a little scared….”

Sanarae greeted Geo with a slightly awkward expression.

“Why did our precious Sergio Hunter visit our guild?”

“I came to see Ms. Sanarae.”

“Somehow that ‘see’ really sounds like it came to see, um, well, maybe it’s just my imagination.”

“It must be because of your mood.”

“Why on earth did you come here, did I do something wrong??”

He was afraid of Geo, unlike before. To be exact, he seemed very reluctant. It wasn't a bad feeling of rejection, Geo just had a feeling of pure curiosity.

“Are you scared?”

“Um, okay… how much say do I have?”

“You can say anything.”

“I know the world can’t be that kind to me. And I also know now that Sergio Hunter is quite a good liar. In the end, I guess I’ll have to be careful.”

“That’s an exaggeration.”

“If you listen to what Sergio Hunter says, it doesn’t seem like that at all….”

Sanarae hesitated for a moment and then asked.

“…How can you not create that kind of atmosphere?”

“I'm doing my best.”

“I heard that you possessed a couple of our guild members on the way here. I don’t know if it was intentional or not, but I’d like you to let them go on the way out. I’ll show off my skills.”

“I didn’t mean to. I would have done that even if you didn’t show off. It’s so sad to see, so please don’t worry.”

“It’s strange, I don’t think it’s ever been this awkward before.”

“To put it simply, the trial period for a tool that has arbitrarily helped me make my life easier has ended. I expect to remain like this until I find a new tool.”

“Oh, then, that….”

On rare occasions, Sanarae hesitated.

“…It’s not easy to say anything. I suddenly feel like talking somewhere more private.”

“It doesn’t seem to be like that here.”

“Yes, to be honest, that’s not really the case. My family is such a rough bunch that there’s always a bugging device installed in this kind of reception room. Did you hear it when you came in? It’s a measure to make sure we know for sure if something happened or not.”

“Then shall we go to the place you want?”

“… Now that I think about it, that’s scary in its own right, so let’s stop talking here. Like I said before, I’ll filter it out myself. Even if there’s a wiretapping device, we can delete it if we both agree. You probably got notified about this, so why did you come looking for me while being treated like this… Ha, no….”

Sanarae just gave up.

'There is nothing more foolish than measuring a non-human by human standards.'

That was the reason.

“Is that really the only reason you came here? You came to see me?”

“I was wondering if you were well.”

“It’s a bit scary when Sergio Hunter says that.”

“It seems like you’re still being too harsh.”

“Thanks to you for taking care of me, I’m in very good health. I’m curious about Hunter Sergio’s recent situation. Do you know? I think you probably know, but I was one of the hunters who participated in the recent ‘Dream Park’ subjugation.”

“I don’t think I’ve seen you.”

“Haha, that’s funny.”

Sergio Hunter did not participate in this 'Dream Park' incident. He was not someone who could be hidden by hiding his activities. However, if he said something like 'Oh, I was there too', I couldn't help but imagine something.

“…….”

Why did that evil spirit smell similar?

“…I don’t know anything, you know? Right?”

“Of course, Sanarae doesn’t know anything.”

“Anyway, that kind of thing happened, so I was really worried. Listening to what Sergio Hunter said just now, it seems like your physical condition isn’t what it used to be.”

“Are you scared?”

“It’s the same question as before.”

Well, he didn't answer.

'It's amazing how such a being can coexist among humans.'

For a moment, I felt envious.

"…scared."

That was his honest feeling.

“I know that Sergio Hunter is a good ‘person’. I know that he is a good ‘priest’, and I also know that he is a good ‘hunter’. Who wouldn’t have bad thoughts behind their backs? But Sergio Hunter is not one of those cases.”

Isn't that truly an ideal being?

“But maybe it’s because I’m so uneducated, but I become afraid of people I can’t bite. Sergio Hunter is like that to me. He’s so idealistic.”

“I am not perfect.”

“No, it’s just to make it look that way. Sergio Hunter wanted it that way. Can I beat you with my brain? Or with my brute force? Skill? Intrigue? Politics? Power? Money?”

“Do you always want to win?”

“I learned that I had to do that to survive. As I said before, I was so poorly educated. That’s probably why I’m scared of Hunter Sergio. Honestly, I don’t even know what he’s thinking.”

It wouldn't make any difference if he were human.

“Does Sergio Hunter know about the symbol of eternity?”

“I hear it often.”

“They created a system on Earth. From what I understand, they did. They limited outside interference, like divinity, and helped people deal with the monsters and anomalies of the cataclysm. And they gave them destiny.”

“It’s fate.”

“It’s the fate of being human. That’s why the symbol of eternity never grows old or dies. That’s why it’s easy to handle that enormous power… but I personally think that’s too much.”

It was terrible.

“A person is only human when his time comes and he dies.”

Sanarae's eyes widened like a crescent moon.

“…That’s why I don’t like the symbol of eternity that much. It’s not human. If you can’t die when the time comes, don’t age with time, and have excessive power, but you have to deal with it, how can you be human? Aren’t you just a natural disaster with a will and inclination?”

He shrugged.

“Oh, of course I don’t like most people in the world that much.”

“Do you hate humans?”

“I hate humans and I’m afraid of natural disasters. I can’t trust anyone unless they become my family. Humans are fickle and I can’t stand natural disasters….”

“It seems like you have a lot of fears.”

“…What do I look like to you?”

“…….”

'Sergio Hunter' made eye contact.

“It looks like Mr. Sanarae.”

"…and?"

“Nothing more, nothing less.”

“Then how can you describe me? Why did your daughter show her friendliness towards me?”

“Unfortunately, I have no reason to blame you.”

“Yes, indeed… you are so merciful.”

Even Sanarae admitted it, he was a coward.

“Please understand that I am so scared. If you don’t know, you will know, and if you don’t, you will hate to see me, but I was born so pitifully. I am a beggar who desperately needs a little mercy from Sergio Hunter.”

“You seem angry, and contrary to what you just said, you don’t need help. And most importantly, aren’t you still afraid of me?”

“…This is what’s scary. No matter how much I sarcastically try to cover up the outside, it won’t work. No matter how hard I try to cover up the outside, they only see the inside and judge and react. Why do you have to be so scary?”

You are God.

“…….”

And the gods were all cruel. Just by existing, they were cruel.

“…As I said before, I know that Sergio Hunter is a good person. He probably has no ill intentions, and judging by his actions, I don’t think he would be that fickle. Yes, he really is a good adult.”

But it wasn't trustworthy.

“I wish it weren’t so strong.”

“Do I look like that?”

“You can’t be weak, so it would have been great if you were someone who gets hurt and breaks easily. Then I could have trusted you. I know very well how a being with a weak side tries to live… I can understand that…”

“Can I help you understand?”

“…No, my family is enough here for now.”

“I want to be friends with Sanarae.”

“…….”

Ah, as expected.

“…Don’t be scared….”

I'm scared.

My sensitive senses scream.

Your eyes, your nose, your ears, your parched tongue, and your intuition of your chapped skin are all screaming at you to run away. That you are not an opponent you can defeat. That kindness is malice, and mercy is disaster.

Even though there is a ‘person’ sitting right in front of me, all I can feel is the huge forest and the throbbing pulse… .

“…….”

Disasters mimic humans.

“…I’m sorry, please listen to me without getting angry. I just….”

“I know very well that Ms. Sanarae is a very timid person.”

“…Okay, I’m sorry.”

“I also know that I am a bit greedy.”

“…….”

When Sanarae raised her head and looked at the other person, he was smiling with his eyes down. It was the same smile as when she first saw him in the reception room, but Sanarae could find something a little different.

It was a human smile.

“Poor thing.”

It was sad and full of love.

“Then shall we do it like this, Sanarae?”

“…What and how?”

“I’ll make a candy house soon.”

“A candy house? Oh, that’s what I told you back in the dungeon… Are you really going to make it?”

“And then I call you.”

The priest who resembled the sun smiled kindly.

“Is it okay if I send you an invitation?”

“…I’ll think about it.”

Sanarae also laughed along, albeit awkwardly.

Because I really thought he was a good person.

* * *

“They say with power comes responsibility.”

Geo touched the sunlight coming into the attic. Following his gesture, the sunlight found its place elegantly like silk threads. It became a single surface and curved like an aurora.

I caressed the fluttering sunlight like butterflies and flower petals, like black tea and frills.

“I don’t think that power should be taken for granted. That’s unfair. But there are definitely things that come along with power. People call it… responsibility.”

The sunlight is fading. It resembles the cellophane that children draw and play on. The sunlight, gently rippling like a layer of trees, soon covers the attic like a blanket. Slowly, very quietly.

“So it’s not like I’m responsible just because I’m strong. If that were the case, why did my mermaid friends have to be so twisted? Just because they were a disaster?”

It didn't seem like that would be the case.

“It might be a pretty idealistic society where the strong take responsibility. Those who have more give, and those who have more to spare help others. But that inevitably requires more sacrifice.”

Geo felt really bad for the strong people.

“It’s a shame.”

How many people in this chaotic world are there who were forced to choose something because they could? Maybe Geo was one of them, but I didn't want to think about it that way.

He was always free.

“What do you think, Mr. Ater?”

“…….”

“You too were called a hero….”

Geo asked, looking at the clean sleeping body.

“It must have been hard, right?”

The right strong person takes responsibility.

Ather was a righteous man. He valued life, was angry at injustice, and tried to help the weak. He tried hard even though he felt wronged by the unfairness that was poured on him.

It's not something that anyone can do. That's why I'm thankful and affectionate. I love him. Geo was a person who really liked people. People who do great things seem even more amazing.

“It must have been hard.”

So that's why you've been sleeping for so long.

“You can sleep longer. This is my home, your castle. Sleep for a long time in this cozy attic where no birds or cats come. I will cover you with sunlight. When the moon rises, I will cover you with moonlight.”

“…….”

“And when you all wake up, tell me what you want to do. I really like people like you. Aren’t we friends? If a friend tells you what he wants to do, then being there to help him can also be considered friendship….”

Then he went back to black hair again.

“…….”

“…….”

I quietly close my eyes as the sunlight sparkles and breaks down.

“…I wish it could be simpler.”

The world is still so complicated.

* * *

A few days later.

Geo met Seo Seo-hee Hunter.

“…Over there, what is this…?”

“It's a gift.”

I'm talking about galbijjim.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (281)

281

Episode 281

A few days ago, Justitia requested an interview.

“Emergency!!! Emergency—!!!”

Naturally, the collector was put on emergency alert.

“What the hell, what’s going on all of a sudden! Did Black Cloak finally summon Cthulhu?!”

“Mr. Sergio, weren’t you Cthulhu yourself? Did you suddenly reveal your true colors? No, you’re such a gentleman. You said the meat gift you gave me last time was purely a favor. Then how could you suddenly do something like that?”

“Excuse me, but everyone, shut up so I can hear what’s going on. So why are you doing this?”

The employee who asked about the shocking news briefly summarized it.

“Seo Seo-hee Hunter wants to meet Sergio Hunter.”

“…Emergency—!!!”

They were nervous.

“Oh, Black Cloak’s condition isn’t very good these days.”

“You must have been through a lot and still haven’t fully recovered….”

“So you weren’t resting at the time?”

It was because I knew the state of their portraits well these days. In the past, they would at least try to imitate humans, but recently, they either got tired of it or they didn't have the energy to do even that.

“Does anyone know the details of Sergio’s recent condition?”

Witnesses quickly squeezed out their testimony.

“You walk around with a shadowy face. If I don’t tell you, you walk around without it. If you point it out, it’s fortunate that you don’t get angry.”

“It’s not like it’s something that can be solved just by fixing the puncture wound. There are shadows, but sometimes they’re strange deer or sheep shadows. And there are also many times when something like a mermaid sways within them.”

“You haven’t been paying much attention to human sounds lately. You might hear the rustling of grass or the sound of hooves, but no matter how much I think about it, it doesn’t sound like a human presence.”

“You don’t have any sense of weight. You’re also quite high-class. Maybe you don’t want to bother with things, or, um, yeah, well, maybe you just don’t have any energy. I heard you’re an introvert….”

“I think it’s funny to be called an introvert, but I’ve also heard that from Yoo Seong-woon and Joo Hyun. The fact that I speak in a stiff manner is just cute.”

It was a bit of a tricky situation.

“Oh my, why is my precious flower pot so wilted….”

“But what is a flowerpot to someone who still communicates with me, a flowerpot?”

“This is a headache. If it’s a request from the symbol of eternity itself, it’s difficult to refuse.”

“Can I refuse?”

“If this news gets out, our Seo Hunter will become even more famous, so that’s not good.”

“I guess you don’t like it….”

Joo-hyun, who was caught in the middle of it, was very embarrassed.

“I’m sorry to have to tell you this news so suddenly. I know it won’t be of much help, but is there anything I can do to help you?”

"there is."

“Oh, if you could tell me, I would do my best….”

“Please give Sergio Hunter some human lessons.”

“Excuse me, but I don’t think that would be possible.”

"shit."

They tried their best to restore the condition of their portraits.

“How about trying a quick lesson? You might get angry, but I think it’s worth a try….”

“Can’t you just send him back because he’s sick? He might be famous, but it’s a bit much to send Black Cloak out in his current state.”

“It’s not like we can avoid it. It’s something that Black Cloak wanted, so Joohyun came to tell us. How about giving us a human user manual instead?”

“Ha, this is really tricky….”

At that point, Joo-hyun revealed the cruel truth.

“I think you’ve already thought about it that way, but I can’t just cancel this interview. It’s true that we haven’t set a formal schedule yet, but, um, Mr. Geo is… preparing to make galbijjim right now.”

“What else are you slaughtering?”

“This time, you are making it using materials from the Earth. Since the barn is already full of meat, I don’t think there will be any slaughtering for a while.”

“Oh my, for a second I thought you caught a person.”

“Mr. Geo doesn’t eat people.”

“I know that too, but I feel uneasy when you mention words like slaughter… Anyway, since they’re already in the process of making the gift, I guess I can’t stop it. It’s too bad.”

The mysterious being bound by rules is said to be preparing a 'gift', and a gift for humans at that. If he were to stop it, he didn't know what kind of trouble would come. Shinbi's own feelings would also be considerably upset.

“Hey, I can’t help it.”

The conclusion came quickly.

“Sergio, unless you want to end your human life, you will take care of things well.”

“He’s not someone we can nag at, so I wonder what the point is.”

“I’ll just let you go. Since it’s a symbol of eternity, you probably know about our portrait, right? If there aren't any major issues along the way, it'll be resolved quietly."

"By the way, how did this request come about… Does this have anything to do with the reaction of Hunter Seo-hee that Joo-hyun mentioned last time?"

Joohyun nodded.

"Yes, I know you were quite friendly last time. I didn't know you would go as far as to make an official schedule like this… If what Curator Yoo Seong-un said is true, he must be someone who knows Geo's situation well, so you don't have to worry too much."

Of course, Joo-hyun, who said this, didn't know that Geo would come carrying a huge jar. Joo-hyun had to bring in numerous cases and hypotheses from the human world in order to limit it to a realistic size of galbijjim.

It was a meeting that was made possible through everyone's efforts.

* * *

"……."

"……."

And on the day of the interview, Hunter Seo Hee-hee was captivated by a wondrous sight.

"…So this is galbijjim?"

"Yes, I wanted to bring a little more, but I reduced the amount because people kept stopping me."

"It seems like enough, but no, that's not it."

What caught Seo Seo-hee's attention was the silk and container that wrapped the braised ribs.

“Why do I feel the energy of regeneration in this silk?”

“Regeneration. Come to think of it, it was silk made from the wool of sheep that had the power of regeneration.”

“Did you make it yourself? There’s a certain nuance to it….”

“I wanted to make it look fancy since the quantity has decreased, so I knitted it myself.”

“Then what is this container? Mother-of-pearl lacquerware? Something else.”

“The last time I was at the beach, I found some pretty shells and tried them out.”

“Yes, you made this yourself too.”

Even this container that can feel the energy of the moon and the sun.

“……?”

Seo Seo-hee felt a slight sense of confusion for the first time in a long time.

“Excuse me, but Justitia is a person who does not accept bribes….”

“I don’t have anything to ask of you, Hunter Seo Seo-hee?”

“Then is this a gift born of pure kindness?”

“I am so glad that you understand my feelings.”

“I’m really sorry to ask this, but, we….”

Seo Seo-hee, who had been hesitating, asked cautiously for a rare moment.

“…Were we this close?”

“You forgot our deep friendship.”

“I can see you’re pretending to cry. But please don’t cry, it’ll be embarrassing.”

“I apologize if I caused any inconvenience.”

Sergio Hunter smiled softly as if to say, “When did you ever pretend to cry?”

“I was excited to see Hunter Seo Seo-hee after such a long time. I was concerned that she had lost a lot of weight the last time I saw her, so I wanted to prepare a simple side dish, but I was told that the portion was too much, so I reduced it like this… I think she tried to make up for it in other ways.”

At those words, Seo Seo-hee saw a pentagonal container.

“…….”

And then I saw Sergio again.

“I have a lot to say right now.”

“Nobody stopped me.”

“Well first of all, I’m not skinny….”

Seo Seo-hee's smile was empty.

“Isn’t that something you can tell just by looking at my muscle mass? I’ve been managing my body in a way that’s not too much, and I’ve always prided myself on being above average, but it’s a little embarrassing to hear people say I’m skinny.”

“…….”

“…It seems like Sergio Hunter has a lot to say, so I won’t stop him. Whatever you say, I will take it into account and listen to it, so please speak. I am listening.”

“You can only see bones.”

“Do you have clairvoyance?”

It couldn't have been like this unless it was really 'only' showing bones. No one in the world would say that Seo Seo-hee was thin. Above all, the nuance of Sergio Hunter was, well, a little… .

It was like something said while looking at a child who was very skinny.

“I eat well and go out.”

It was to the point where excuses just came out naturally.

“To be healthy, you need to eat three meals a day. That’s how I live. I eat well, sleep well, exercise hard, and study hard. No, I don’t know why I’m making excuses for this… but I just wanted to tell you that I’m living really well.”

Seo Seo-hee suddenly had a gut feeling that the old 'relationship' he had forgotten must have been like this.

“…Was it unexpectedly the case that I was the one receiving the care?”

“Do you remember even that much?”

“Ah. Rather than that, data has been accumulated in various ways. In this way, there are times when we forget good and bad relationships… and times when we meet them again.”

“I understand.”

“Yes, I’m also accepting this situation without much difficulty. It’s strange. Why does this feel familiar? I didn’t think I would hear such things anywhere.”

Seo Seo-hee's expression became a little awkward.

“Or maybe we met when I wasn’t eating well….”

“…….”

"…okay."

It was still embarrassing.

'It must have been quite a while ago.'

I'm sorry and I was anxious.

'I don't know exactly when this story was, but when I didn't eat well... I don't think I was a very good person.'

Seo Seo-hee didn't live this kind of life with this kind of personality from the beginning. When there was a lot going on on Earth, she was even more miserable. It seems like she met Sergio Hunter around that time.

“As expected, forgetting memories is such a troublesome thing.”

“I think there must have been a good reason for that.”

“Thank you for your understanding.”

I felt a little dizzy.

“…….”

Was it a relationship where such a gift would not be a big deal?

'Oh no, of course, but even so, a gift of this level would be a bit surprising.'

Still, it would have been an acceptable gift. Sergio Hunter said he was 'excited to see you again after such a long time', so that would mean they were very close.

I couldn't help feeling this anxious feeling that was tickling my toes.

'It had to be a promise worth it, but I'm not sure.'

After we make a promise, we usually don't remember its contents.

'Where did I spend this good fortune?'

I just hope that it is one of the precious pillars that support the Earth.

"…And there's something else I want to say."

"I am listening, Hunter Seo Seo-hee."

"You said you reduced the amount, but it doesn't look like much at all."

"I was worried because you've been so few in number, but surely it's still…."

"Who said there were too few sheep? If you blame me for this, Sergio Hunter, it will be a problem."

Seo Seo-hee let out a strange laugh.

"I guess you are a big eater, Hunter."

"Yes, I hear that a lot."

"To someone like that, most people in the world must look like they're starving. I eat more than average, but this is a little more than that."

"I will keep that in mind."

"It really seems like you should just take note…."

Apart from the self-reproach that was building up in my lungs, I found this conversation awkward and not unpleasant.

“And you made this yourself? This silk and the container? I don’t know how that was possible, but even if you bought it somewhere, I feel bad. It’s such a big gift.”

“I’m telling you this out of concern, but it really wasn’t a bribe….”

“Yes, I know you’re not lying. It’s probably one of two things. Either we were that close, or Sergio Hunter has a very unique perspective on the world. Maybe it’s both….”

Dare I say, it was a little bit cheerful.

“…Ah, this is interesting.”

It's been a very long time.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (282)

282

Episode 282

After the visit, the guild leader approached and asked.

“Are you okay?”

“In what sense are you asking?”

“…I’m asking because you seem to like Sergio Hunter more than I imagined. You even ate the food Sergio Hunter gave you without any inspection, and you even accepted his overly extravagant gifts.”

“Is that because I’m not like my usual self?”

“To be honest, yes.”

The leader of the guild, Hunter Kang Eun-seong, has been assisting my superior for quite some time. He has a good-natured face, but he is a very cautious person. The symbol of eternity cannot trust anyone but each other.

They say that all elders who have experienced a great disaster are like that. Kang Eun-seong also understood. But in the midst of all this, Sergio Hunter intervened. It would be a lie to say that he was not flustered.

“I think you’re seeing that person as quite the exception.”

“I didn’t intend to go that far either.”

Seo Seo-hee smiled and shrugged.

“People were so funny that I let my guard down.”

“What nonsense….”

“Really? Your way of thinking is really unique.”

And, what should I say?

“He seems like a person who really likes people.”

I felt a deep sense of goodwill toward the world. No matter what form or direction this world took, it seemed as if that affection would not change.

“It’s a separate issue from sociability. I just like people themselves. I try to give them as much as I can.”

“I held back because I thought it was just a joke, but it could really be a bribe. The guild leader is also human. If he accepts such a gift, the process could be shaken.”

“I don’t seem like the kind of person who would plan something like that… Well, don’t think of it that way. No matter how good a gift I receive, I’m not the kind of person who would shake up the process.”

It was also largely because the opponent was the opponent.

“Sergio Hunter has nothing to gain from me.”

“I don’t know, the guild leader is the symbol of eternity.”

“Of course I am. I am one of the symbols of eternity, the head of the number one guild in South Korea, and one of the strongest hunters in the world. I have a lot of money, a lot of friends, a lot of power….”

“Do I have to keep hearing that story?”

“But Sergio Hunter, those are all things you don’t need.”

Isn't that right?

“As the son of a collector, he will never be in need of money, as he is loved by no one else. Sergio Hunter, who likes people but prefers narrow and deep relationships, will not ask for a wide network of connections. Power? Does he seem like the kind of person who likes that?”

The only time Sergio Hunter showed himself to the world was when he had to be introduced. Since then, Sergio Hunter has tried to hide himself whenever possible.

“First of all, you are a priest.”

“There is talk of him being a saint, but it is not officially recognized. And although a saint is a person of great character and will not harbor personal greed, he may try to infringe upon the authority of the guild master for the sake of a greater cause.”

“Isn’t that something I should be thankful for?”

“Who knows if that is really the right cause? No… Yes, that is right. From Justitia’s perspective, it is something to discuss. To be honest, I am worried about the guild leader’s attitude of making such an exception.”

What on earth do you see in him?

“…It’s unlikely that he would be so friendly with you just because of your abilities or personality, so he must be one of the people the guild master has forgotten. But what if he tries to exploit that person’s forgotten memories?”

“Haewoon was worried about that too.”

“There must have been many such cases. The guild leader was particularly concerned about such connections, so he almost suffered several times already. It was thanks to the help of other friends that we were able to block the danger in advance.”

“I should do that much for them too. The Earth is able to survive thanks to those forgotten people. Compared to that, being deceived is a good price to pay.”

“My heart sinks every time you say that, Master. If you are wrong, what will happen to Justitia? And what about the Earth?”

“I won’t die.”

Seo Seo-hee spoke leisurely but firmly.

“I won’t die, I won’t age, and I’ll stay like this until the end of the Earth.”

"…sorry."

“It’s not something Mr. Kang Eun-seong should feel sorry about.”

It was simply the most cost-effective price they could offer, our fate. The fate that we, as humans, deserved to have. Time, memories. They gave it up and gained a precarious peace.

“By the way, Sergio Hunter. How old do you think he is?”

“…I heard you were 29. Now that the year has changed, you must be 30. Even if you lied about your age, you must be in your late twenties to early thirties.”

“Mr. Kang Eun-seong, did Sergio Hunter seem like an ordinary person to you?”

“…It seems like there’s some information I don’t know….”

“That person probably died once. Now, he seems to have been resurrected as an apostle by the choice of the Black Cloak, so he may not be half human.”

“…….”

“So I wonder, when on earth did we meet?”

Seo Seo-hee muttered while caressing the soft silk to the guild leader who was unable to continue speaking and could only open his mouth.

“I think we met a long time ago.”

That could have been certain.

“I remember when I didn’t eat well. I could have just assumed it, but I could tell just by looking at his eyes. They were the eyes of someone who truly felt sorry for me.”

“…As I live, I sometimes see people who sympathize with the guild leader.”

“It was closer to affection than sympathy. Kang Eun-seong, you wouldn’t feel good if I ran out and got hurt. That kind of face? That kind of gaze? But you talk about friendship, but I don’t think you think of me as a friend.”

“Oh, no way.”

Kang Eun-seong was embarrassed.

“Did you acknowledge him as your friend?”

“Well… Honestly, I think that way because I’m a greedy person.”

Seo Seo-hee nodded.

“The food you made was really delicious.”

“…Shall I make a restaurant reservation?”

“I heard that there was a taste of grandma’s cooking that couldn’t be replicated with something like that?”

“Grandma? You’re going that far? You went too far?”

“You knew everything I liked….”

“You can’t be sure of that, there are so many good cooks out there.”

“Did you know I like galbijjim?”

“…….”

Kang Eun-seong shook his head.

"…no."

“Really? I like galbijjim.”

“The guild leader never reveals his likes and dislikes.”

“You knew that?”

“That’s a fact that you can know, even if it’s a bad relationship, a good relationship that has deteriorated, or a relationship that has fallen and is being exploited. Aren’t you worried?”

“I wasn’t worried even if I tried.”

Seo Seo-hee spoke quietly.

“There was quite a lot of ginkgo nuts in the galbijjim. It was barely stewed, so it was more like a soup than a sauce. You know? It was rich and light, like sagol soup… Yes, it really was like sagol soup. Should I call it a slightly strong galbitang?”

“…….”

“It wasn’t too sweet. It wasn’t too salty either. There were probably about six chestnuts soaked in the broth. The sweetness of the chestnuts remained, but the galbijjim sauce tasted refreshing. It was that kind of chestnut. It melted in your mouth.”

“…….”

“I cooked the jujubes, which were just big enough to give off a fragrance, and the white stems of the leeks, which I left intact. I think they were meant to be eaten rather than used in soup, so I lightly grilled them and boiled them just enough to give them the flavor of the soup. I really like eating the stems of leeks.”

He laughed.

“Do you know what I'm saying?”

That wasn't something I could make just by telling you.

“Each dish was tailored to my taste. It wasn’t a common taste that I could share with someone else. It was bland like an old person’s taste, and the ribs were cooked thoroughly and tender.”

"hmm…."

“Do you know, Mr. Kang Eun-seong? I eat everything that is given to me without any worries. I’m not obsessed with gourmet food. But Sergio Hunter knew all about it. If we weren’t very close, how could he know such trivial things?”

“…What about skills?”

“I’m not so stupid as to not notice that. If that were possible, it would be more powerful than the Symbol of Eternity, so I’d just have to fool you. What kind of disaster are you trying to cause on Earth?”

“I guess I was being unreasonable.”

Kang Eun-seong let out a soft sigh.

“Excuse me, but there’s no way you’d do something like that out of spite. You didn’t seem to have any ill intentions either. You didn’t seem like the type of person who would bribe the guild leader, and you weren’t someone so needy that you had to beg for help.”

“That's what I said.”

Seo Seo-hee smiled brightly with her eyes downcast.

“This is just a gift from a friend who couldn’t contain his joy and sadness.”

But one question still remained.

“So… how old do you think Sergio Hunter is? His homepage profile keeps saying he’s 29, so maybe the leader of the Bisabal guild is playing a prank on him. That means he’s already dead.”

“… Then it would be unnecessary to actually consider the actual age. What the guild leader is curious about is exactly when the relationship began, when it was forgotten, and what was gained in return… things like that.”

“Right, I don’t know exactly what I owe or how.”

Seo Seo-hee began to think seriously.

“According to Sergio Hunter, he never agreed to be forgotten, so it seems like the promise was made after the person died… Then when was that?”

“It must have been around the time when the system on Earth was well-integrated that the guild leader started eating properly. And the collector is quite old… well, if he has a son….”

“Let’s assume that she was born when she was young. The current leader of the Bisabae Guild is about eighty years old. It’s not known before the Great Disaster, but she may have been married before. Isn’t that right?”

It was a world where almost all records before that day had disappeared. No matter how famous the collector was, if he didn't tell you directly, you couldn't know whether he was married or not.

And the catastrophe broke out 32 years ago. The exact age of Bisabal is unknown, but it is estimated to be around 80. When the catastrophe occurred, Bisabal was in his late 40s to early 50s.

“What age do children of parents in their 40s and 50s usually have?”

“…I don’t know about the standards before the catastrophe….”

“I made a mistake. Wait a minute. Let me think about it. By then, considering my surroundings….”

“…….”

“…About 20 years old?”

Whether it was in the early or late 20s varied depending on the family. However, the children of parents of that age would have been around that age. Anyway, around 20s.

"…ah…."

If you think about it that way, you can guess Sergio Hunter's situation.

“Maybe he was older than me…?”

"oh my god."

“This is a bit surprising.”

Even Seo Seo-hee, the person involved, couldn't help but be surprised. She acted so maturely that she thought she was no ordinary person, but she never imagined that Seo Seo-hee would be younger.

Because he had become the world's adult on Earth.

"…No matter how much the Bisabal Guildmaster enjoys the world, he is not the type of person to have children during a time of great disaster. And after stabilization, the Bisabal Guildmaster said that he would never start a family."

"Could it be that it was a lie?"

"But Sergio Hunter himself said he was 29. There's a high probability that he died at the age of 29. The great disaster happened 32 years ago. The person who declared with his own mouth that he 'won't have a family because I don't have the confidence to protect them' was the leader of the Bisabal Guild."

"Then, could he really be the child of the pre-Calamity? Sergio Hunter? The leader of the Bisabal Guild?"

"And if the leader of the Visabal Guild had children at a normal age before the Great Calamity, he would have been older than me, Sergio Hunter. I was 19 on the day the Great Calamity broke out…."

My mind was blank, but on the other hand, I felt convinced.

"So that's why you didn't think of me as a friend."

"Because he's my younger sibling?"

"Somehow it felt like I was the one being cared for."

"You were in a position to be taken care of by the guild leader…?"

"It seemed so familiar to me that you were taking care of me."

And my breathing became increasingly heavy.

“…Ah, what should I do?”

Seo Seo-hee was definitely not a good person at that time.

At that time, he and they were not in their right minds. The world was even crazier. The only people they could trust were a few of their friends, and even if they were lucky enough to have good abilities, it was hard because of that. They resented the world.

At that time, he was an older adult who took care of me and us.

“What can you do if you forget someone like that?”

“…Guild Leader.”

“I don’t even remember how I took care of it.”

The guilt I had been holding back was welling up inside me.

“…I don’t even remember what I got in return for that person….”

Why did he die in the first place?

“…….”

“…….”

Only then did I feel completely out of breath.

“…It’s a bit of a mess, isn’t it? Just a moment ago, I was happy because I felt like I had found a good friend again, but now the atmosphere has become so gloomy. I feel bad for Kang Eun-seong.”

“…I understand your feelings, Guild Leader, and there are days like this. I was worried that you might be a threat, so I tried to dissuade you, but if it’s such a good relationship, there’s no reason for me to stop you.”

Kang Eun-seong, who had been hesitating, asked.

“Should I ask you to come back again soon?”

“No, that person is probably busy too. I can’t do that for my own good.”

“Judging from the expression on his face when he brought me the gift, it seemed that Sergio Hunter had also been looking forward to today’s visit. When he returned home, he had a look on his face like he was glad that you had enjoyed the meal.”

“Let’s not be selfish.”

“…I was presumptuous, I apologize.”

I couldn't call a busy person to try to ease my boss's mind. That would be too selfish. Kang Eun-sung knew that and suggested it, but he was rejected. Seo Seo-hee couldn't possibly allow it.

“If you receive a request for collaboration or a visit, how about considering it in the most positive way possible? There will never be any harsh words from the collector or anyone else.”

“To that extent, I should be grateful.”

Seo Seo-hee, who wiped her face, smiled in vain.

“Wow… Am I really going through menopause?”

“You’re talking about menopause with such a plump face….”

“I suddenly feel a surge of emotions.”

“As I said before, there have to be days like this.”

I felt sorry for his superior.

“…The guild leader is also human.”

Those who were too strong could not even show their humanity. That was the price they had to pay to maintain this world. It was the price paid by the few strong who were the symbols of eternity.

Kang Eun-seong thought to himself.

'I hope that since it has come to this, it will be a really good relationship.'

Kang Eun-seong wished Sergio Hunter would meet his superior more often. He was one of the few people he trusted, and there were few people he would make exceptions for, especially someone he felt indebted to.

‘I rarely get involved with collectors, but this is… .’

I felt regretful that I had kept my distance from them because of the visa issue. If the guilds had been close, there would have been more opportunities to collaborate and the two would have had more opportunities to meet.

But now it was impossible to create it.

“…….”

Still, I hope that Seo Seo-hee will have more days where she can smile and feel safe.

Is it too selfish to live under his cozy shadow?

* * *

“……?”

This time, Geo, who was making tofu, raised his head.

“I can hear my student digging the ground.”

“Oh, can you hear that? Are your ears good?”

“The tofu will be ready soon.”

“It’s been a long time since I’ve had Sondubu. I’m really looking forward to it.”

“The old kimchi is well-cooked. It would be heavenly to eat it with grilled pork belly on the lid of the pot. Look forward to it.”

“I was already looking forward to it. This is spectacular, isn’t it?”

Geo, Yoo Seong-un, and Joo-hyun were preparing a tofu party inside the portrait.

“…….”

“Mr. Geo, what are you thinking?”

“I’m thinking about feeding you….”

“Oh, that’s something I always think about.”

“Yes.”

Geo came to a conclusion in his mind, thinking of his disciple who seemed to be digging the ground somewhere.

‘… Well, one time won’t fill you up, right?’

It's all because I'm not full.

'Become a pig, yap.'

Geo was prepared.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (283)

283

Episode 283

Geo was a man who would do anything.

“Hunter Seo Seo-hee.”

“Ah, Sergio Hunter.”

He has since visited Justitia a total of 21 more times.

“You don’t have to come here every time.”

In less than a month.

“At this point, it seems like Hunter is a member of the Justitia Guild.”

“I couldn’t help but come because I thought you were still hungry.”

“Where on earth do you look at me to always say things like that…?”

“You can’t avoid my eyes.”

At first, they were surprised, embarrassed, and even felt burdened, but Sergio Hunter's friendliness was amazing. In less than a month, he became friends with all the members of Justitia's guild.

Literally, 'all' guild members.

“Sergio Hunter?”

“It’s been a while, Hunter Kang Eunseong. I brought you a packed lunch.”

“It already smells delicious.”

At first, Kang Eun-seong kept his distance, saying, “What kind of person is he?” Seo Seo-hee laughed awkwardly at the sight of the guild leader suddenly disappearing after naturally receiving his share of lunch boxes.

“There’s no stopping it anymore.”

“The risk assessment was done on the first floor.”

“I’m the guild leader, so I heard that news, of course. But I’m afraid that if Hunter Sergio puts poison in our lunch boxes one day, we’ll be completely helpless and fall apart….”

“I believe that will not happen.”

“Then I guess I will have to be more thorough in protecting security as you trust me.”

Seo Seo-hee smiled brightly.

'I'm glad you don't take offense.'

Sergio Hunter always visited quietly and disappeared quietly. He was more proactive than anyone else in essential security checks. The guild members of Justitia, who were initially embarrassed, were able to regain peace thanks to him.

Usually, there were many hunters who felt 'unpleasant' or 'rude' during such a process. They were treated coldly. However, Sergio Hunter showed no such signs even though he visited frequently.

'Even though I'm not human.'

Seo Seo-hee maintained a faint smile.

“…Thank you for always packing me a lunch box. Honestly, I’m a little embarrassed, I might turn into a pig soon. I guess you give me a good nutritional balance, so my digestion is good….”

“But I think you’re still hungry.”

“So, I don’t know exactly where you are looking when you say that.”

On the topic of what I said, when I actually opened the lunch box lid, the story was different.

“It’s tteokgalbi.”

“This is tteokgalbi with pine nuts.”

“How did you know that I like tteokgalbi?”

“I know quite a bit about Hunter Seo Seo-hee.”

“Why does it smell so good….”

This menu consisted of tteokgalbi, grilled scallops, and various side dishes. The white rice was so full of grains that you could feel the grains, and the texture was exquisite.

I think it was probably rice cooked in a pot, but I didn’t have to chew much and the rich and sweet flavors came quickly. They always give me a generous amount, so I try to eat a little less every time… .

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee gave up and accepted the violence from the food.

'Just increase the training time.'

Yes, that will work.

“…It’s delicious.”

“Isn’t that so?”

“To tell you the truth, my pride is a little hurt.”

“I learned that you shouldn’t be proud when it comes to food.”

“Well, I guess pride is of no use at the dinner table, ha….”

“You can do it by exercising.”

“That’s right.”

It was just a little disappointing.

'This is just how good my self-control is.'

I thought I didn't enjoy gourmet food, but all that was in vain in front of Sergio Hunter's shocking cooking skills. I never got tired of eating no matter how much I ate, because he knew my taste buds so well and planned a harmoniously balanced diet.

'Mr. Kang Eun-seong's situation seems similar.'

It's so blessed to be eating so well.

'It's Western style over there again today. It looks greasy.'

Kang Eun-sung returned to his secretary's seat and had a good time with his lunch box. He had been like that for a week. It was thanks to Sergio Hunter, who had asked about his preferred diet, that he had also taken care of Kang Eun-sung's share.

Seo Seo-hee smiled awkwardly at the already half-empty lunchbox.

“Isn’t it hard to pack lunches like this every time?”

“I think I say this every time you come here, but I hope you don’t take away my fun.”

“Oh, what is it? I have a strange feeling about this… What is it really…?”

They seemed like old people who enjoyed taking care of their grandchildren in their later years.

“How old are you this year?”

“Is it important?”

“That’s not it.”

In fact, it was a person with whom it was meaningless to discuss actual age. Seo Seo-hee quickly accepted and finished emptying her lunch box. The pickled tomatoes piled up in the small side dish compartment whetted her appetite.

The strong scent of plum is felt, while the refreshing alcohol only makes its presence known and disappears cleanly. The mouth, once refreshed, once again demands oily meat and chewy seafood.

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee couldn't help but think.

'I wish you would sell it.'

I wonder if you're thinking of opening a side dish restaurant.

“…You said it wouldn’t be a hassle, but I’m not sure if it really would be okay.”

He shrugged slightly.

Seo Seo-hee was also a person who knew a lot about origins and mysteries. He was known to have played a part in creating the Earth's system, so there was no way he wouldn't know. That's why I couldn't help but worry even more.

“…….”

After thinking for a moment, he opened his mouth.

“I believe you are acting in a way that does not burden Sergio Hunter.”

Seo Hee-hee and Sergio both knew that the 'Sergio Hunter' was the source being. However, this was the first time they had said something like that directly. They didn't want to provoke the source being who wanted to pretend to be human.

But I felt it for a few days. There was no such 'rule' for this being. And it was a 'person' who embraced and acknowledged all gazes. Seo Seo-hee spoke, empowered by a feeling that was difficult to call certainty or trust.

“On the other hand, I also know that you are someone who would never do anything that would harm me. However, how should I put it….”

“Are you still worried about me?”

“I’m not an expert in this field, so I don’t know what to ask.”

As expected, there was no disadvantage to pretending to know. Seo Seo-hee smiled lightly and continued talking.

“Well, don’t you think the price is too low? It seems like you’re not getting anything in return for what you give.”

There are some mysteries that can only be shared very rarely. But even then, it only seems like that, and in reality, there is definitely a give and take. Balance is important to mystical beings.

'So, Sergio Hunter will receive something in return for what I receive. Or maybe he will receive something in the future. However, it is not in keeping with Sergio Hunter's personality to receive such a price without prior notice… .'

So I was worried, and more than that, I was just curious.

“What do you want from me?”

“You don’t have to give anything to Hunter Seo Seo-hee.”

“Then… are you receiving it from those around me?”

“No, I’m paying.”

“…….”

This was an amazing story.

“…Was that even possible?”

“Of course I can, since I’m packing your lunch.”

“No, that’s not what I was asking… That’s true, but….”

“Aha, I see what you’re worried about.”

Sergio, who had been watching Seo Seo-hee eat the whole time, said with a smile.

“I received a nice gift from a friend as a reward for my hard work in the past.”

“…I want to analyze each sentence and ask questions. Is it a reward for hard work? A friend? A nice gift?”

“Thanks to you, I was able to pack lunch without any worries. Do you see the stamp on the lunch box container?”

“Oh, yes. It’s the pattern I’ve seen every time you brought me a lunch box.”

“This stamp is what created that pattern.”

Sergio Hunter was suddenly holding a seal in his hand.

'How long have you been holding it?'

It was surprising that he didn't notice.

Seo Seo-hee stared at the stamp, her emotions in her eyes. It was a harmless shape that could barely be pressed with wax. It was unusual in that it was transparent, as if it was made of a mineral similar to marble.

As I was watching, Sergio Hunter asked, placing a stamp on the table.

“Would you like to try using your skill?”

“…It’s not my area of expertise….”

Even as she said that, Seo Seo-hee blinked.

Reward: Seal

It was a short and simple explanation.

“…Was this a seal you received as a system reward?”

“Yes, it is. I have been using it usefully since I first received it.”

“I can’t read anything beyond that.”

“Is that so?”

“As I said before, it’s not my area of expertise.”

Of all the symbols of eternity, he was the one most remote from mystery.

Next was the association president, Dan Hae-ra, and then another guild leader, Jeong Hae-un. Jeong Hae-un, in particular, had extensive knowledge of these mysteries as he worked a lot on work related to the source.

"hmm…."

Seo Seo-hee smiled awkwardly.

“Thank you for your permission, but I have difficulty reading it.”

“It’s a shame we didn’t share the same vision.”

“Then, could you please allow me a little bit of your vision, Sergio Hunter?”

“Of course, since it was Seo Seo-hee’s request.”

Reward: Seal_“Compassion and Attunement”

“…Another name for the seal is mercy and harmony.”

Grab the small pillar and pay the price

“I’m telling you to pay the price.”

Seo Seo-hee looked at Sergio Hunter, who was smiling unchangingly.

“Is Sergio Hunter paying the price I deserve?”

“To be honest, I was a little surprised, I didn’t think you’d read that far.”

“Does this mean that it wasn’t Sergio Hunter’s intention?”

“I think my friend was playing a prank.”

“Now I know who the ‘friend’ Sergio Hunter was talking about is.”

A hollow laugh came out.

“It was a system.”

The relationship before my eyes seemed to be closer to the source than I could have imagined.

“…….”

A ghost intertwined with the system.

‘Ah, as expected… .’

Or really.

Suddenly, Seo Seo-hee felt her stomach churning. She was a little out of her mind because of the constant thoughts that kept coming up even though she tried not to think about them.

He tried to smile. And fortunately, he was confident in one thing: smiling.

“…How can I eat in peace after reading this, Sergio Hunter? May I ask what price you paid to pack this lunch?”

“I think I’ve already paid the price.”

“What do you mean? You’ve already paid the price.”

“I don’t know either.”

"but…."

It was a difficult story.

“Then how do you know whether a price was paid or not?”

“There must have been something I should have given, but I didn’t give anything. And yet, you packed me a lunch today. So, isn’t it like the price has already been paid?”

A being that was once human smiled.

“I don’t think it’s something you necessarily have to know in depth.”

“Then you could get in big trouble. If it’s not a price that has already been paid, but a debt that will have to be paid in the future, especially for someone like Sergio Hunter… wouldn’t that be a big blow?”

“If you live simply, the world seems beautiful.”

“So you want to see the world as beautiful? That’s great.”

It seemed like I couldn't ask any more.

‘…he is a difficult person to read.’

Sergio really had no regrets, no obsessions.

'It's really about accepting everything as it is.'

He had no deeper interest or curiosity than to notice the existence of the price. He just let it go as it was, as it was not worth keeping it in his eyes and recalling it in his brain. That is why Seo Seo-hee, who was not the person involved, could not know about it.

'Is this a reaction that can only be seen because it is not human?'

For some reason, she had a feeling that it probably wouldn't be the case. Sergio probably wasn't an ordinary person even when he was alive. Seo Seo-hee laughed as she thought that without any real evidence.

“I wonder if I’m causing trouble.”

“Do you think it’s a nuisance if your parents prepare meals for you, Hunter Seo Seo-hee?”

“Oh, now even my parents are going? Oh my god….”

I really don't know how much I owe you.

Finally, Seo Seo-hee couldn't hold it in any longer and asked.

“What do I owe you?”

“You played with me.”

“Oh, that’s right….”

A blunt voice.

“…….”

For a moment, the world seemed quiet.

When I looked up at Sergio, I saw a calm face that was hard to call an expression. There was something cold and gloomy about it, but the gaze that was staring at me was so straight that it almost felt arrogant.

Suddenly, it occurred to me that it might be a face we know.

“So I was good.”

The eyes are squinted so narrowly that it is difficult to call it a smile.

“It was fun.”

“…Sergio Hunter?”

“It's here.”

A familiar smile was suddenly drawn on his face.

“I've always been here.”

“…….”

But even then, I felt like it was 'strange'.

It was a smile that Seo Seo-hee was very familiar with, but it was still the same. She wanted to see the face from just a moment ago, which could not be called gentle, once again. It was a weak impulse that she could not explain.

“So please don’t worry and accept my favor.”

“…Are you happiest when that happens?”

“You know a lot, you are indeed Hunter Seo Seo-hee.”

“You can treat me like you used to, really.”

“I think you forgot, but I’m a very shy person.”

“You don’t look like that at all.”

“Don’t we all need some time?”

“…….”

A little late, he nodded.

“…That could be the case.”

Seo Seo-hee finished eating the remaining rice.

“It’s still… warm.”

“Because I brought it in a container filled with the power of the sun.”

“I understand now why the collectors were so desperate to keep Sergio Hunter locked up in the gallery. I think I would have locked him up too.”

“I think everyone is saying really interesting things.”

“I’m worried that you might really get caught and taken away. Have you ever thought that your kindness is too generous?”

“If I want to do something and can do it, is there really any reason why I shouldn’t do it?”

“That’s really clear logic.”

I couldn't handle it.

“What would you like me to call you, Sergio Hunter?”

“I think it’s okay to call me like that now.”

“You packed such a delicious lunch box for me, so I deserve special treatment.”

“If that’s the price that Hunter Seo Seo-hee came up with….”

The dead man asked for his opinion.

“What about you, teacher?”

“…Hmm, that sounds good.”

teacher.

‘… What a pity.’

Because they are teachers who are like parents to me.

It must have been a fun time, but I still don't remember it.

* * *

“…….”

I think I'm getting it with a slightly different feeling.

‘… It doesn’t matter because it’s fun.’

Geo's ultimate positive mind shined today as well.

I thought it would be okay because I understood the context similarly. Of course, that was natural. The world won't end or anything if you get a couple of past truths wrong.

Geo nodded inwardly.

'Taran.'

I guess I should ask Visabal if he had any formal plans to adopt.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (284)

284

Episode 284

“Ahhh, this doesn’t seem right.”

Joohyun strongly opposed it.

“Why on earth would you think that?”

“I don’t know exactly where you are getting such a strong reaction.”

“I’m sorry, I was a little rude. But no matter what, I just can’t accept the idea of being adopted by the leader of the Visabal Guild.”

"okay."

Geo looked back at the meteor cloud.

“What do you think, Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“I want to respect everything about you as much as possible, but this might be difficult, Geo. Even I, who has been through all sorts of disasters and trials, have limits that I cannot endure.”

“I didn’t know you would react like this.”

At the hallway meeting after a long time, Geo was faced with opposition from his friends.

“But I’m sure there are many people who already think that way. Those who are a bit quick-witted will probably think I’m the son of the leader of the Bisabal guild.”

“Just thinking about it and actually putting your name on the family register are two completely different things. In that case, I don’t know how you and the guild leader will change.”

For the being of the origin, 'justification' was extremely important. Justification was, in other words, a story. It was impossible for the 'family' that Shinbi had personally acknowledged not to be affected. Even Shinbi himself.

“The guild leader is already a burden to humanity. Thinking about him evolving any further sends shivers down my spine and chills down my spine. I… I’m really against it.”

“Thank you for your active opinion.”

“No, I’m the one who really appreciates you calling us here before things get worse. If you had quietly carried out the work and then informed us of the situation, we would have been helpless and had to watch the tragedy unfold….”

“I was half joking, don’t worry.”

“You were half-serious, right? It’s okay, I know that.”

Geo often pretended not to have such unique tastes.

“That may be true from the perspective of a gardener and curator, but, um. I think it wouldn’t be much different from the thoughts of Hyun-ssi, who is the most ordinary among us.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-woon is right. I’m not talking about objective risks like Mr. Yoo Seong-woon, because changes due to one’s own choices are always something one must bear.”

He had something else to worry about.

“The Visabal Guild Leader is not a very… good family.”

“Oh, I admit that. Our guild leader enjoys his life too much.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“The guild leader has been openly saying that he has no intention of having a family. It is true that he is too weak to protect his family, but the bigger reason is that he lacks the confidence to fulfill his responsibilities and manners towards that family.”

He was the kind of person who would rather watch his work than spend time with his family.

“You know that if you had to choose between your work and your family, you would choose your work. But the guild leader isn’t that cruel.”

“In some ways, I think it was a wise decision. That’s why it’s even harder to ignore Geo-ssi being registered under the guild leader’s family register. Above all, the guild leader….”

Joohyun, who had been hesitating, said.

“…I think you’ll really like it.”

“…Honestly, that was the biggest reason I opposed it.”

Joo-hyun and Yoo-seong-woon made tired expressions. He was also a person who liked the rumor that Sergio Hunter was the son of Bisabal, which was secretly floating around. How much more of a fuss would it be if he was officially registered?

“No, of course, there’s absolutely no chance that our guild master’s family register will be leaked. I know that the guild master’s power is powerful enough to make even a bird fall, but in the first place, records from before the great disaster are practically nonexistent. Besides, if it's a family register of someone around the same age as the guild master, it's not very credible no matter what you show…."

"It seems like you're quite worried since the story is getting longer."

"If the guild leader himself were to blow it up in any way, it would be different. Ah, that's not it. What I meant to say was… Since the real family register won't be revealed anyway, is there really a need to officially list the name?"

"That's true too."

Joohyun continued, smiling awkwardly.

"I also know that the leader of the Bisabal Guild is someone who doesn't cross the line. However, what worries me is that he enjoys everything he can within the limits."

"Geo, you're a bit uneasy about that. From our perspective, if you don't cross the line, if you think it's fun, and if there's no reason not to… I think you'll definitely join in. The Earth is already in danger without it."

"I'm also a little concerned that Guild Leader Bisabal would see Geo as a 'work called family.' Of course, this is just my personal opinion, but I don't think other people would see it as a proper relationship."

"In the same vein, it's not a good thing for the guild leader's reputation. As I said before, public rumors and official recognition are completely different things. I'm asking you to think about our guild's image as well."

The portrait, which had been listening to their conversation, spoke.

"It's fun because everyone is desperate."

"Okay, as long as you enjoy it."

“…I apologize for my rude remark.”

Joo-hyun asked Geo's words.

“I think you’ve been having trouble controlling yourself lately. Are you okay?”

“That’s right. These days, there are many times when I don’t keep basic manners in mind. I try to be careful, but it’s not easy for me either.”

“Um… If this continues, you will often have difficulties living in society. I know that Mr. Geo is not using another ‘Geo’ because of various circumstances, but wouldn’t you like to reconsider?”

Yoo Seong-woon thought to himself at Joo-hyun's words.

'People are so consistently brave.'

At this point, it was amazing.

The Eye of Origin has decided. Ju-hyeon was not in his right mind to urge him to change it. Of course, this kind portrait will not get angry or bring about disaster, but isn't there a limit?

And as always, the portrait ignored those words.

“I won’t do that for the time being until things are sorted out. However, I understand your concerns, Joohyun, and I will take them into consideration as much as possible.”

“If that’s what Mr. Geo says, then that must be it.”

Joo-hyun also just let it go. His role was to help Geo with his life and choices, not to guide him. Geo wasn't even a child who had yet to become an adult.

The portrait nodded.

“Let me think about adoption a little more.”

“Why did you bring that up in the first place? It seemed like you were enjoying playing the role of the son of the leader of the Bisabae guild before, but you didn’t feel the need for official confirmation, did you?”

“Because Hunter Seo Seo-hee knows me as the son of the leader of the Bisabal guild.”

“Wasn’t that the case before too…?”

“I think I’m sure now.”

He stroked his chin.

“I also know that I was Seo Seo-hee’s teacher. Whether it was fate before or after the Great Disaster is still open to possibility… but that’s it for now.”

“Oh, you’re telling me the truth? You were just pretending like you were going to let it go.”

“It’s a little different from the truth, Seo Seo-hee knows me as the son of the leader of the Bisabyeol guild. That’s why I wanted to make it a real story so that I wouldn’t feel embarrassed later.”

“Uh… I wonder if it’ll be embarrassing….”

I thought it would be a bit heavier than that. That is, if Hunter Seo-hee finds out the truth.

“…Listening to what you have to say, it seems like you’re going to tell the whole truth someday, so why don’t you tell me in advance? Are you going to wait until Seo Seo-hee Hunter or the other students find out the truth themselves?”

“There are several reasons.”

The portrait answered bluntly.

“First of all, it’s fun.”

“What exactly?”

“A kind of role-playing?”

“…….”

Soon Joo-hyun smiled.

"…okay!"

“Listen to me a little more.”

Geo added as an excuse.

“I was their teacher. Their personalities may have changed a lot since then, but the fact remains that I was an adult and they were their wards.”

“Is that… something you didn’t like?”

“I like my current relationship a little more. Those friends back then saw me as too perfect.”

“Honestly, I think that’s still the case now.”

“I misspoke. I wanted to say that I felt a little uncomfortable with the way they treated me, even though I wasn’t really that great of a person.”

“…You said you served him?”

Joohyun was embarrassed.

“It’s a story that’s hard to imagine now. It’s a bit strange that a symbol of eternity would treat someone like that…."

"Why did it turn out like that? Even now, being a teacher is a job that is respected by students, but what you're talking about doesn't seem to be at that level."

Geo, who had been pondering Yoo Seong-un's question for a moment, answered.

"…there was something I needed to do to help those kids."

"What kind of help did you give?"

"Just because you're young doesn't mean you won't get sick or have a hard time."

"I don't think it's something I should ask in detail about, but…."

Yoo Seong-un shrugged and asked.

"Did you hate those kinds of reactions because they were burdensome?"

"It wasn't something I could say no to."

The portrait shook its head.

"It's just that they thought I was too idealistic of a teacher. I appreciate that they think well of me, but it's embarrassing that they think of me as more than I really am."

"What kind of image did you have as a teacher?"

"Anyway, that's all. I think he's helped me and received help from me often, and the results were always good, so he must have had some kind of illusion. Since it was an illusion, I don't think it would have been a big deal if I disappeared."

"oh."

I don't think so.

'If I say this, will you get angry?'

Yoo Seong-un held back, but Joo-hyun did not hold back.

“I don’t think so.”

“I am sometimes amazed by Joohyun’s courage.”

“Oh, no… It takes a lot of courage to just say that.”

“If you experience any physical or mental changes in the near future, please contact me and I will ask the temple for help.”

“This is driving me crazy, I told you it’s not like that?”

Joo-Hyeon, who had roughly harassed and passed over Yoo Seong-Un, looked at Geo again.

“I know the relationship between teachers and students before the Great Disaster. As Mr. Geo said, it wasn’t that great of a relationship. It wasn’t a relationship that guaranteed anything other than learning.”

“Yes.”

“But if the students had respected him beyond respect, he would have been a really good teacher. Mr. Geo to those students. I don’t think it was a typical teacher-student relationship.”

“If you’re talking about dependence or obsession, it didn’t lead to that kind of relationship.”

The portrait nodded.

“Eventually, everyone found their place. The role of a teacher is to help students fit in well and stand strong in society.”

“Just from what you say, I think you would have been an ideal teacher. I think you probably helped him a lot in private as well. Am I right?”

“Yes, the roles assigned by the school alone were not enough to fill the gaps in those children’s lives. Fortunately, as a teacher, the scope of my help was not limited.”

“…I feel a little sad.”

I felt upset even though it wasn't my job.

“I think I know why they say ‘served and served.’”

Even Joohyun would have done the same.

I don't remember exactly what the world was like before the Great Calamity, but in any era, there was pain and condemnation, and it was hard to find a solid pillar to support me when I was young and wavering.

‘It may be a useless compensation mentality since I’ve lived a tiring life…’

It was natural that he did not want to lose that support.

“But, Mr. Geo, were you uncomfortable with those students’ reactions?”

“To be honest, yes. I wish they had been more open with me. It was probably a very unscrupulous thought for a teacher to have.”

“It’s hard to expect comfort in a vertical relationship.”

“Fortunately, those kids forgot about me back then.”

Geo was calm as always.

“If we were to build a relationship again now, it would be closer to horizontal than vertical. So I hope that Seo Seo-hee Hunter will remain ignorant of the deep truth for a long time.”

“Then what will change?”

“You forgot about me. It’s more of a cognitive thing than an emotional thing. It will take time to accept and adjust to the fact that there was such a relationship. And it will take a step-by-step process.”

“To Mr. Geo too?”

“Of course. I’ll say it again, I like our current relationship. I like it when you just enjoy eating my lunch box. I think people and the world run the happiest when they’re simple.”

"but…."

Geo said as if he was reading a book.

“If you had kept remembering me, you would have found your own way to enjoy yourself, but that doesn’t mean you need to ignore and slander the pleasure you have now, right?”

“…That’s true too.”

Yoo Seong-woon said to Joo-hyun, who nodded slowly, while rubbing his neck.

“You must have been embarrassed too. There were students who liked you that much. Even though your name was known to the world, there was no reaction at all. You probably simply thought it was because you had become ‘completely independent’….”

“You can’t really call it independence. They weren’t that dependent or obsessed with me. It’s true that we had a good relationship that I didn’t want to lose, but it wasn’t a situation where it would be ruined if one person disappeared.”

“So what did you think?”

“What Mr. Yoo Seong-woon said is right. I thought everyone was doing well without any problems. As I said before, it wasn’t a situation that would be ruined just because I disappeared.”

They were students who knew how to live well on their own.

“I didn’t know you had completely forgotten….”

The portrait added bluntly.

“I expected you to become a normal member of society.”

“How would it feel to see a student you were teaching become the savior of the Earth?”

“I thought you were having a hard time.”

“That’s your typical sentiment.”

Yoo Seong-un took his hands off his neck and stared at the portrait.

“…….”

“Why are you doing that?”

“…Don’t you think your speech has become a little looser?”

"oh."

The portrait nodded.

“Whenever I talk to students, this is what happens.”

“Good. When are you planning on giving me lunch again?”

I just hope that he can adapt well back into human society.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (285)

285

Episode 285

After the hallway meeting.

“Huh?”

The teddy bear asked Geo a question.

“…Are you asking if my students are in the same situation as the mermaids?”

“Kuk kuk kuk.”

“No, it’s completely different. What you’re worried about won’t happen.”

Giovanni laughed as he sat the teddy bear on his lap.

“I didn’t know my father was worried about that.”

“Kyuu….”

“I’m not really lying, they’re not that weak of students. In many ways, they’re friends who are different from our mermaid students.”

"dream?"

“The mermaid disciples couldn’t live without me, right?”

The teddy bear was left speechless by Giovanni's refreshing remark.

“…….”

“…You knew and yet you died like that? Well, I don’t know. I thought it would be a big blow, but I didn’t know it would be to the extent of going around and eating planets in the ocean. I really didn’t know that.”

“Kuuuk….”

“Of course, I admit that it was an immature breakup.”

The mermaid in the shadows shimmered faintly.

“But it was the best choice for me.”

The cloudy shadow soon subsides.

“So, in many ways, we should see the students on Earth and the mermaid students as being different. First of all, they were not that dependent on me. Their lives were not greatly affected by my disappearance.”

“Kuku?”

“Yes, they were much more mature students than the mermaids. They were ready to stand up on their own, and I was just there to give them a little foothold.”

"dream…."

“Of course, my mermaid disciples and I were also preparing for such a mature farewell. But don’t mermaids live for such a long time? Those children regarded me as their parent, and almost as their only friend.”

So, the obsession was bound to be severe.

“Mermaids, above all else, are a bit….”

“…….”

“…because there’s a side to him that’s annoyingly persistent.”

“Kuk kuk kuk.”

Crunch!

The mermaid's tail in the shadow hit the floor.

“Oh, you look angry.”

Giovanni laughed teasingly.

“Then I will live a good life.”

Thud thud thud thud thud-!!

“Who do you take after to have such a stubborn personality?”

First of all, it didn't seem to be Giovanni himself.

“Anyway, what Father is worried about won’t happen again. The mermaid disciples probably didn’t think much of me. Of course, we got along really well, but… well, no matter how much I think about it, we weren’t on the same level as these guys.”

Affection beyond a certain level can turn into obsession and possessiveness. Giovanni may have had no choice because of the mermaids' environment and characteristics, but Mr. Sergio was not the type to let that happen.

His students have always been excellent independent individuals.

“Huh?”

Because you want to?

“…What if?”

“Kku, kku.”

“How can you blame me for this? There are people who take the lead in relationships everywhere. As a teacher, I have to prevent my students from going down an unhealthy path.”

"dream?"

“Didn’t I tell you that mermaids have different environments and characteristics? Our students, as I keep saying, are completely different. You can’t put the two on the same level.”

To begin with, 'Giovanni' and 'Sergio' were completely different people. They had similar fates and trajectories, but they were complete strangers. It was only natural that their attitudes toward those they taught were different.

“So even if the disciples of Earth regain their memories, it won’t turn the world upside down. They love their roots and know how to embrace me and others.”

They were mature adults.

“The reason I’m taking such a cautious approach is because of those guys and my position. Especially because of my position. No matter how I think about it, I like our current relationship. Their attitude no longer burdens me.”

“Kukukuu?”

“Oh, even thinking about it now makes me dizzy.”

Sergio looked devastated.

“Everyone thought I was such a great person.”

“Kyuu….”

“I wasn’t much different back then. I was just a fashion terrorist who couldn’t smile or even wear clothes because my facial expressions were stiff. I remember kids calling me the Grim Reaper.”

"dream."

“Yes, it suits you well, thank you. I remember running into students walking around at night and hearing them scream. I was scared back then too….”

Sergio's impression was somewhat scary, so the students had a hard time looking at him.

“I gave them candy, chocolate, cookies, potatoes, sweet potatoes, and corn… Maybe it was because I was young, but the students often thought of me as something special.”

"dream?"

“No, where in the world would you find a grim reaper who gives sweet potatoes? To be honest, when the ‘sad story of the mafia boss’s successor’ came out, I enjoyed it a bit, and it was definitely funny, but apart from that, I felt a little burdened.”

“…….”

The teddy bear tilted its head as if it was puzzled.

“It was burdensome.”

really?

“Oh really.”

I could say this on the honor of the gods of heaven and earth. The gods of heaven and earth passing by might have felt a little wronged, but it meant that Geo was sincere. People can like something and also dislike it.

“… Well, if teachers and students could become close, how close could they be? After all, I was an adult and strong, and the students were children and weak. But no matter what, that distance was a bit…”

I thought of the students who had been expecting something from me with sparkling eyes. Even the blunt Seo Seo-hee was no different. They seemed to regard Sergio as something perfect that would solve anything as soon as he stepped out.

“He wasn’t as good a person as you might expect.”

Dependence and obsession can be shaken off, but there is nothing that can be done about such simple expectations.

I would be lying if I said I didn't have fun, but that was a separate thing. The relationship back then was good, but the relationship now is just too good to throw away.

“…So my complaints have nothing to do with the fate of the Earth.”

“Huh?”

“This time, you can really trust me, they are not students who would do bad things. The reason I am cautious is simply because I want to maintain this equal relationship. It is a kind of role-playing.”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

“If my father likes it, then this son is also good.”

Giovanni smiled brightly.

“There is nothing to worry about.”

There's nothing serious about him.

* * *

Geo in the studio was fiddling with the stamps.

“…….”

“Oh my.”

“Your daughter is here.”

“Ugh.”

“Welcome.”

Dana naturally climbed onto Geo's lap and took her place. Honey, who was sitting by the window, flew over and got into Geo's hood. Either way, it was a cute sight.

Geo stared at the stamp while stroking the plump Dana.

“How far will this guy evolve?”

I received this seal after completing 'Giovanni's' quest. After completing 'Argio's' quest, the seal was upgraded.

At first, stamps were only accepted for letters, but now they were easily exempted from payment for food and containers, big and small.

'But it's not like there's really no price to pay.'

Maybe it had something to do with Geo's forgotten memories.

'Where is the price being paid that I have not paid now?'

Past or future?

“Either way is fine.”

“Gulp?”

“If it’s a price for the past, then it’s a price I’ve already paid, so it doesn't concern me now. If it's a price for the future, then I can't pay it now, so it doesn't concern me either. There's no reason for me to worry right now."

"Kung…."

"But I wonder how far we can go with this."

I wanted to give a bigger gift.

"……."

Geo opened his lips as he looked at the pure white canvas.

"…I tried to draw a picture for the first time in a long time, but I can't remember what to do."

"Gulp."

"I think it would be better to rest for the time being."

"Cur."

"How about visiting the school for the first time in a while?"

Geo tilted his head.

"I like it."

It was a peaceful day.

* * *

The school I visited after a long time was still in ruins.

"……."

widely.

The shoes touched the floor.

“…I feel like a ghost is coming out.”

But there was also a little pride.

“This is the haunted house school version.”

“Kung kkung kkung kkung kkung.”

“Honey, this is where my dad used to work.”

“Gulp….”

“Well, maybe it’s not your taste.”

It was a completely different atmosphere from the 'Jewelry' where Dana lived. It was still full of ashes, and dust was piled up on top of it. The school, where the traces of the fire were still clearly visible, had an eerie air.

The place he was was a storage room attached to the art room.

“I guess I’ll take a look around after a long time.”

Even though it was still 5 p.m., the school was dark. The trees had grown so thickly that their shadows covered the entire school. If you didn’t look closely, you wouldn’t even know there was a building here.

'It looks like a secret base.'

He remembered the secret bases he had built in the forest when he was young. They weren't built in dangerous places like they are now, but even in such a small space, Sergio could have fun playing as a child.

‘Then I ran into a wild boar… .’

It was a good memory.

“There might be wild boars here now.”

“Kung…?”

“It was originally a school built in a remote place, but after the great disaster, it became a ruin that no one could find. I don’t even know how the people who were looking for me at that time got in.”

“Gulp.”

“Well, when I first came to my senses, it took me a really long time to find a place where people were. Now, it seems like there are monsters living there instead of wild boars.”

Although, I never saw anything like it while I was staying here.

“Maybe my scary impression worked on the monsters too.”

It was a reasonable guess.

“When I first woke up, I was so out of it that I couldn’t even think about making any decisions. I was overwhelmed just by the things in the portrait. What on earth was I thinking about….”

As he headed past the broken door, he saw a few desks. They were almost like pieces of wood that were so charred that only the shape of the desk remained. Geo lightly swept them and then moved his feet again.

An empty hallway appeared.

“…….”

Wouldn't it be polite to have a ghost pop out at this point?

'Oh, well.'

They're like unprofessional ghosts.

I saw trees that had grown through the building. I saw ivy that almost covered the inside and outside of the school, and I saw flowers that bloomed on warm days. However, they gave off a more disgusting impression than a refreshing one.

Geo gently stroked his chin.

“…Do these guys also assert themselves?”

Geo looked around the school, feeling a bit uneasy.

'Maybe it's because the atmosphere is so ominous, but no matter how you look at it, it feels like a scene from a horror movie. If you were to make a movie here, even if you don't know the story, the directing would be perfect. The mere existence of it is great material.'

It looked like a typical 'long-abandoned school'.

'I was wondering if I would remember anything if I came here.'

Geo stopped and leaned his back against the hallway wall.

“Nothing comes to mind other than what I thought.”

“Gulp?”

“That’s all I remember….”

No matter how hard he tried to recall, his last memory was that he was 'backing away from the fire and ended up in a painting.' He wondered, 'Did he forget something?' but that was all.

“Where did the fire start?”

The fire started on the first floor. The family room on the first floor. A cigarette got into the oven that was being used, causing a huge fire. Perhaps because there was also cooking oil and other oils in the area, the fire spread quickly, almost blocking escape to the outside.

Sergio sent all the students out before that happened. He looked around to see if there were any students left, but that was all. However, it was too late to escape. So he headed to the art warehouse.

“I wish there had been curtains, but there weren’t, so it failed.”

Then he ran away to the warehouse and became a painting.

“…….”

“…….”

"ah."

Come to think of it.

“How did I know there was a cigarette in it?”

I finally found the hole.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (286)

286

Episode 286

“Remember that? A cigarette?”

“Are you talking about the cigarette that went into the oven?”

“Yeah, that one.”

Dan Hae-ra tilted her head at Seo Seo-hee's words.

“Surprisingly, isn’t this the first time you’ve started a conversation on that topic?”

“I was reminiscing after a long time.”

“That wasn’t really a memory.”

“Then should I just say it’s an old memory?”

About that time a man came into the room.

“What are you two talking about?”

“Oh, Jeong Hae-woon.”

Seo Seo-hee called out to a man with a middle-aged face.

“Are you a little late?”

“Fuck, do you think gardens these days are shit and that’s why you’re saying that? Huh? I told you to think 30 times before you speak.”

“I don’t know why this crazy guy is causing a ruckus as soon as he gets here.”

“You should try being a gardener. Anyway, you little brats with dirty hair, don’t even talk dirty. Anyway, what were you talking about?”

“Story of cigarettes.”

“…? Did you have a drink during the day?”

Jeong Hae-woon, who was sitting down, looked at Seo Seo-hee with a strange expression.

“It’s been a while since we gathered for a meal together, and we were talking about how the food was losing its appetite.”

“I just happened to be thinking back to old times.”

“If you do that, there are times when promises are broken. If you’re not going to fix it, just live as if you forgot about it.”

“I guess it’s because I’ve met someone I hadn’t seen in a long time that I’m becoming emotional.”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon asked, leaning back in his chair.

“Sergio Hunter?”

“Yeah, that guy.”

“You said you were eating a packed lunch.”

“It was delicious.”

“You crazy kid.”

Seo Seo-hee nodded with a faint smile.

“Be sure to say that in front of your followers too.”

“Not believers, but customers, people. Please don’t call our precious investors that.”

Jeong Hae-woon raised his middle finger and looked at Dan Hae-ra.

“What about grace?”

“I’m a little late today.”

“That’s understandable, the state of the country is really a mess these days.”

“Oh my, what is the point of saying something like that in front of the president of the association?”

“I think I could run it well if I were given a little more capital.”

“Then shall we discuss the rest through documents?”

“Friends are all heartless, we only have Eunhye, really.”

“Let’s date.”

“Why do you say that?”

Jeong Hae-un's middle fingers on both hands went up.

“You might as well kill me.”

“Haewoon, when will you grow up?”

“Al Baim?”

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been clicking his tongue, finally put his hand down and crossed his arms.

“It’s not just you, but seeing that Ha-ra and Kang Eun-seong are like that too, I can see that Sergio Hunter is a pretty good person. I get it, but let’s be careful so that we don’t end up breaking our promise.”

“So there was something else I was looking back on.”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon looked back at Seo Seo-hee.

“…Is that really him?”

“I thought it was possible.”

“We built a system based on the memory of one person? Is that possible with just one person?”

Long ago, they committed what was called the 'Promise of Eternity'. They created the Earth's system. The three of them were deprived of their fate as humans and became immortal. This was the price of that promise, but it was also a side effect.

So, as the price for the 'Promise of Eternity', there must be a memory that is the most central, but once a memory is forgotten, it cannot be recalled. They tried for a while to find the identity of the memory that became the price, but ultimately failed.

“You said you were 29 years old.”

“And then he died and came back to life.”

“Damn you guys, you guys must have already finished talking amongst yourselves without me. What do you mean by coming back from the dead? You guys were bickering and arguing while I was going around the garden, right?”

“We’re going to have to see these same faces for a long time, so please don’t make it any less tiresome….”

Seo Seo-hee was very tired.

“I thought you had received the report too.”

“It’s not that noisy these days, so I haven’t had time to hear reports about that.”

“Then I’ll listen to the explanation later with Eunhye. Anyway, I guess Sergio Hunter is someone who was either right before or right after the Great Disaster. And I also heard that he was our teacher.”

“Teacher? What the hell, isn’t this another scammer with a tooth in his mouth?”

Jeong Hae-woon was disgusted.

“I’ve never met a good teacher in my life. But why a teacher? When we were students? Teacher and student, adult and minor, guardian and ward. Wow, that’s really good.”

At that time, they needed him so much. That's why Jeong Hae-woon had strong doubts. There was no way this world could be that kind to them.

“It’s so idealistic, it’s ridiculous.”

“It’s not like I can convince you by saying anything here, so whatever. Just live like that.”

“Then I’ll get hit in the head again.”

“Honestly, if I was fooled this time, I think I should just let it be.”

“…I’m going to go back….”

Jeong Hae-woon let out a deep sigh and lifted his glass.

“What did you do without everyone?”

“Eunhye hasn’t even come yet and you’re already drinking?”

“He can’t even drink alcohol because his liver is weak.”

“You speak so nicely, you punk.”

“Eunhye, it seems like her ability to detoxify alcohol is getting worse as the days go by.”

“After all, he’s a C-class hunter….”

Seo Seo-hee shrugged and snatched the bottle. Then she filled Jeong Hae-woon and Dan Hae-ra’s glasses. They’ve seen everything, but the count was a bit like that.

“Anyway, the timing seems plausible.”

“He is also an apostle of the black cloak.”

He nodded as if to say that he would at least half agree with it.

“So, Haeun, don’t be so hard on me either.”

“Since you guys aren’t building it, we have to build a country too.”

“You know, I have so many empty holes in my memory. I’ve only recently started filling them in little by little. To be honest, I can’t be your ‘standard’ anymore.”

“…No, sir, why are you saying that….”

“So, be friendly with Seohee.”

Dan Hae-ra smiled brightly and lifted her glass.

“Okay, shall we do it?”

“…Good.”

The three of them lightly clinked their glasses.

“I feel sorry for Eunhye.”

“He’s drinking orange juice anyway.”

“No, I drink kale juice to manage it.”

“Fuck, that’s right there. That’s fucking funny.”

Jeong Hae-woon shook his glass as if he was annoyed.

“No matter what, why are you talking about cigarettes on such a nice day, Seo Seo-hee? This kid really can’t read the mood. Do you think things will get better if you live another 50 years?”

“No, it just… I suddenly had a thought.”

“What are you going to do by thinking about those unlucky kids?”

“I was unlucky, though.”

Seo Seo-hee smiled brightly.

“I still think they were crazy to open the oven while it was running and throw a cigarette in it….”

“Thanks to you, the cookies that you and Eunhye were baking turned to ash along with the cigarette.”

Danhae-ra shrugged.

“It’s too bad, you said you were going to give it to me.”

“Because that was a time when you were having a really hard time.”

“As expected, Seohee is really kind.”

“The first thing I wanted to create was a favor.”

Seo Seo-hee laughed in vain.

“It wasn’t like the oven exploded or anything, right? When I came to my senses, it was a sea of fire.”

“That’s right. The fire probably spread faster in the living room because there was cooking oil and gas there. They also said they had a hard time escaping.”

“How did you escape from that?”

“…….”

“You know, the back door to the family room was locked.”

There are two entrances to the first floor of the school. The back door and the main door. The back door, which is closest to the homeroom, is always locked and full of all sorts of luggage. I think they blocked it because they thought students would sneak out there and dodge.

And it was far from the main gate. It was not a situation where one could go out through the window. The windows of the old school were stiff and did not open well, and the cooking oil placed on the window sill caught fire and spread.

“Haewoon also had a broken leg….”

“You carried me out.”

“I just thought it might have been slow.”

Seo Seo-hee shrugged.

“I don’t know if you remember, but we were completely out of our minds at that time. Nana and Eunhye were badly injured when the ovens exploded one after another, and because of those guys who were there pushing us out… we got stabbed by the oven shards. It hurt. The smoke was acrid.”

It was because the school management was not good at all. If they had managed and repaired it on time, it wouldn't have gotten to that point. At least the fire would have spread at a slower rate.

And at that time, they were not mature enough to calmly evacuate in such a situation.

“I was wondering if someone might have helped me.”

"who."

Jeong Hae-woon tilted his head to the side.

“Sergio Hunter?”

"well?"

“Isn’t that an absurd idea?”

“That could be the case.”

“That might be the case, but….”

Jeong Hae-woon's face distorted.

“Even so, it was only the first floor. The main gate was far away, but it wasn’t that far. Even if the fire had spread quickly, it would have been faster if we had escaped. We were a little late because we were running around shouting that there was a fire, but still….”

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been muttering, soon looked at Dan Hae-ra.

“…Where were you then?”

“Music room.”

“How did it come out?”

“I think I walked out.”

“Did you say 'same'?"

“Well, let’s see… I was out of my mind at the time.”

I never thought it was that important. At the time, and even now, what mattered to them was all the disasters they had to endure after leaving school. The school fire caused by those idiots wasn't important.

Just living was so overwhelming that I couldn't even think about the past I had survived.

“…That’s right, I walked out. I remember you guys welcoming me when I came out the front gate.”

“…You didn’t come out the window, but through the front door? Wait, was that it?”

“That’s what I remember.”

“How did a kid who was in the music room on the top floor of the school walk out the front gate?”

“Now that I hear you say it, that’s true.”

Danhae-ra tilted her head.

“But I woke up that day. I thought it was because of that. I could use my skills and my physical abilities had improved, so I could leisurely walk out of a fire scene.”

“Skill… That’s right, you said you used a skill back then. That’s why you were able to escape….”

Jeong Hae-woon frowned as if something was bothering him.

“…How did we become friends?”

“…I don’t remember very well.”

“But this alone is not enough to prove a connection with Sergio Hunter.”

“That’s right, most friends don’t remember their first meeting a long time ago.”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon sighed.

“Hey, when is Eunhye coming?”

“Oh, you wanted to ask?”

“No one else would remember him.”

“If it’s someone related to a promise, it might be better not to ask.”

“Fuck, of course. I just said it once, and it was fucking bullshit.”

Their 'promise' becomes void the moment they receive their payment. If Sergio Hunter is really related to the 'Promise of Eternity', it would be better not to remember him.

And this price, once paid, never disappeared. If there was a chance, it would come back. The person who was responsible for the 'chance' here was none other than 'Cha Eun-hye', one of their classmates.

“…….”

The burden they were carrying was too heavy for them to act as they pleased.

“…Still, he’s a good person, teacher.”

“…When did I see you, you fucking teacher?”

“I just decided to call it that.”

“You’re not even human anymore, so aren’t you a monster?”

“Can a gardener say something so ignorant?”

“Now that kid is wagging his tongue, I’m scared.”

Jeong Hae-woon drank his alcohol while laughing loudly.

“What kind of alcohol is this bitter?”

“It’s your personality that’s Mingming, Jeong Hae-woon.”

“You fucking punk.”

Jeong Hae-woon clicked his tongue and put down his glass.

“…Okay, let’s just pretend not to know. I don’t know exactly what his intentions are, but it doesn’t seem like he has any intention of telling me.”

It wasn't long ago that the 'Sergio Hunter' made his name known. Sergio himself would have had every opportunity to make himself known. But not doing so would have meant respecting the weight of their burden.

“Cha Eun-hye, she’s a pretty good actress, but right now she’s the only one who remembers everything. If it’s a really important memory and Eun-hye can’t control her mouth or facial expressions, the world could really end.”

“Eunhye isn’t that inexperienced of a friend.”

“Despite being experienced, the burden would still be the same. We don’t remember, so it’s a jackpot, but what if he was really important? What if he was a really good person? Wouldn’t he be doing something he wouldn’t do to Eunhye?”

Jeong Hae-woon added a beat later.

“…to Sergio Hunter himself.”

Besides, didn't you say he was already dead?

“This is an insult to the deceased.”

“They talk all sorts of nonsense.”

“I feel like I’m digging a grave with a shovel, damn it. It makes me feel uncomfortable.”

If things continue like this, Sergio will die, be forgotten, and become the manure of the earth, but he will now return as a ghost. Jeong Hae-woon became tired in an instant. He felt sick to his stomach and wanted to vomit.

Didn't he become a ghost, unable to die as a human and tied to the source?

'It's like a dog.'

I felt dirty.

“…….”

“Every time you feel sorry for someone, your expression gets so dirty.”

“…Because I feel dirty, my impression also becomes dirty. It’s proof that my inside and outside are the same, so what can I do?”

“That’s self-defense, you little punk.”

“You fucking punk, you don’t have any nerves for me, do you?”

“It’s hard enough to handle Korea alone, so do I have to handle you too?”

“You… you should respect the gardener….”

Jeong Hae-woon wiped his face.

“Oh, I really hate this feeling.”

“Who lives like this because they like it?”

“When will we be able to train our juniors?”

“Can that happen already? We’ll have to wait another 100 years.”

“I’m going back, for real.”

Only when the Earth stabilizes as soon as possible will they be able to live their lives. Only then will they be able to bear the guilt and sorrow for those they have forgotten, at least not now.

Between them, the door opened and a person came in.

“Oh, what the….”

“…….”

“Are you guys already drinking?”

The president who was called the president of the Republic of Korea was Cha Eun-hye.

“What is this atmosphere, why is it like this? Did someone die?”

“He did die.”

“Okay, let me guess. Basil? Boksul? Dorongi? Cyanide? Ragnarok III?”

“No, I’m not talking about the dog raised in our guild….”

“Then is it a cat? No, all the Justitia owners are in a good mood right now.”

“It was just a story about someone who died a few years ago.”

“Is the atmosphere like this?”

Cha Eun-hye sat down with an awkward expression.

“Jeong Hae-woon, why is your face like that again?”

Danhae called her like that.

“Eunhye.”

"huh?"

“I have a question.”

Dan Hae-ra asked while filling the glass.

“Isn’t that Sergio?”

“Huh? Yeah… I know.”

Cha Eun-hye raised her glass and smiled proudly.

“He’s a famous hunter.”

Looking at her hands like that, Dan Hae-ra smiled.

“He seemed like a good person.”

“It looks the same to me.”

“I heard that Seohee even prepares meals for you. I’m jealous.”

"aha…."

“Eunhye.”

“…….”

“Did you ask for nothing?”

Cha Eun-hye answered with a smile.

"well."

It was a peaceful drinking party.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (287)

287

Episode 287

Cha Eun-hye, President of the Republic of Korea.

“AKA the Korean pants president.”

It was a dishonorable title, but now everyone accepts it and lives with it.

There was a reason for everything. After the great disaster, the president and politician's head was blown off. Korea was in danger just as much as the head that was blown off. The symbol of eternity sought cooperation and repeatedly consulted, and finally put Cha Eun-hye, the only friend they could trust, in the president's seat.

She had an amazing history.

“He is also famous as the Idol President.”

“Idol?”

“To be exact, I was a trainee.”

There was a lot of criticism, but it gradually died down. Not only was his administrative ability excellent, but he was also supported by the symbol of eternity. In addition, he had an excellent ability to capture the public's heart.

“He is also known as a president who is active. Unlike previous politicians, he handles most administrative work quietly without informing others. He goes out and personally goes on business trips to the provinces, rather than doing volunteer work for publicity purposes….”

As a C-class hunter, he would take a lot of hunters with him when going to dangerous places. It was good for job creation. The citizens liked him because he didn't neglect his work while going out to the field. Wherever he went, an honest politician was trusted.

“More than anything, the symbol of eternity is a being that watches over each other. That being is a person who guarantees and watches over them. Since there is absolutely no chance of them doing something foolish, that means they are trusted to that extent.”

“It’s amazing.”

“Me too. I didn’t know he was one of the students you were talking about, Geo.”

“That impudent king of Joseon….”

“The King of Joseon? What are you talking about?”

“It’s shocking.”

Geo recalled the day he first visited Gyeongbokgung Palace with Yoo Seong-un. That day, Geo was reminiscing about Cha Eun-hye, who was an aspiring idol. Who would have thought that she would become the president?

It was much more shocking than just a symbol of eternity.

“That’s ridiculous.”

“No, where did the idea of the King of Joseon come from? Were you a king in your past life?”

"yes."

“I asked, but I didn’t expect a positive answer.”

“There was a student who cried while looking at Gyeongbokgung Palace and then said something nonsensical, ‘I must have been the king of Joseon in my past life because I’m crying for no reason.’”

“That was the President? Wow, this is crazy. Am I allowed to know this?”

“The Republic of Korea is really going through a tangled mess these days.”

I thought he was quick-witted and smart, but he didn't have the inclination to get involved in politics. If he had to use idol trainees, then the situation must have been really bad. Geo felt quite sorry for his students.

“Have you all eaten and are walking around…?”

“I hope you are eating well. I even packed a lunch for Hunter Seo Seo-hee.”

“This world really needs to be turned upside down.”

“I knew that this would come up someday, so I prepared a contract. Now, Geo, here is the contract for the development of Earth. It’s not finished yet, but if you read a sample and tell me what you think, I’ll consult with the guild leader and collect as much as possible…”

“It was a joke.”

Geo felt wronged.

“I can’t even joke.”

“Oh, you were joking? I guess you need to exercise some self-control.”

Yoo Seong-woon smiled and put the documents back in his coat. Aside from the feeling of injustice, it was a very interesting sight. It wasn’t a resignation letter, but a contract that could be carried around like that.

'Are all office workers like that these days?'

Yoo Seong-un, unaware of Geo's thoughts, shrugged his shoulders.

“And what else did you ask?”

“I asked if there was anyone who was close to the symbol of eternity.”

“Actually, aside from the President, there’s no one I’m close with. Hunter Seo Seo-hee is said to be the most sociable, but honestly, aside from the Vice Guild Leader, there’s no one he actually hangs out with.”

“I wasn’t raised that way.”

“You raised it… Yeah, you raised it.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“Among the symbols of eternity, you must have met Hunter Seo Seo-hee and President Dan Hae-ra. Now, the student you haven’t seen in person is Hunter Jeong Hae-woon, right? You haven’t met him yet, right?”

“There was no reason to go see it.”

“As expected, he’s strangely cold-hearted. Well, Hunter Jeong Hae-woon must be very busy these days. In fact, all gardeners are busy these days. Gardener Jeong Hae-woon in particular is involved in many places….”

"gardener?"

“…You didn’t know?”

I didn't know that the guy who could have known anything if he wanted to would have let this go unnoticed. It was a bit interesting that he seemed so absorbed in imitating humans, but Yoo Seong-un didn't show it and soon did his job.

“Yes, you are a gardener. But you are a little different from other gardeners. Maybe it is because you are one of the senior gardeners on Earth… How should I put it, you are someone who can deal with gardens?”

“Did you say it was a grab?”

Is this guy still fighting?

“I guess that bad temper has gone somewhere.”

“…I don’t think you have a personality that can be called rough-tempered…?”

“I’m surprised. Are you acting all coy about your age?”

“…….”

Come to think of it, Geo once referred to Guild Leader Jeong Hae-woon as a ‘bad boy.’ Yoo Seong-woon thought about it for a moment and nodded.

“Let’s pretend we didn’t hear it.”

Yoo Seong-un neatly erased the conversation just now from his memory.

“Gardener Jeong Hae-un is the first person on Earth to make contact with the Source. That alone is quite amazing, but he is able to visit multiple gardens even though he doesn't have a garden he is in charge of."

"What exactly does that mean?"

"Uh… You just barge into a private property where the landlord doesn't live, decorate the garden however you want, and then leisurely disappear? I heard you sometimes get into fights with the landlord, but judging from how you're still alive…."

"I don't know what the garden usually looks like."

"You are a very picky master."

The average gardener had to adapt to the garden. There are various ways to treat a garden, but the gardener is basically in the position of the gardener. However, Jeong Hae-un was different. He knew how to manipulate a garden.

"I heard that Hunter Jeong Hae-un also gets tired around this time of year because it must be a burden. I haven't seen it myself, but he takes care of all the gardens that the gardeners don't take care of or the gardens that are abandoned…"

"You must be working overtime every day."

"He is a steady man. I heard that he works without sleeping even in his dreams. They say that he is one of the reasons why the Earth does not perish, even though the number of gardeners is ridiculously small compared to the number of the source of existence."

"Is there any other reason?"

"I heard that the Earth's system is partially responsible. I don't know the details, but there is a lot of knowledge that only those in the know know… If you hide it or ask, it can happen."

Yoo Seong-un was proud.

“The person who knows the most about the existence of the source on Earth is probably Hunter Jeong Hae-un. The only good thing is that he is very kind to his juniors and talks to them often, so I can ask him questions when I don’t know something.”

"for a moment."

Geo was quietly appalled.

“Are you kind to your juniors?”

“Huh? You’re kind? I’ve even received a few replies via email….”

“You say you talk to me often?”

“Hey, you keep telling me the sad truth, so don’t do that. I’ll always remember you as a kind and capable senior. Seriously, don’t do that. Even if you were a delinquent or something in the past, you’re now a great gardener.”

“…I understand.”

“He looks at me with such pity.”

Even though it was a portrait with black paint on the face, I could feel the gaze.

“Anyway… this is all the information we have on the people associated with the Symbol of Eternity. Including them and the President. It seems like they don’t want to get any closer to others because their roles are so big.”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“Or how about asking Hyun Joo?”

“Have you ever met the president of the association?”

“Yes, and since he is a person with good political skills, he may know more than me.”

“It seems like everyone that Yoo Seong-un told me about is like that.”

Geo nodded.

“Narrow and deep relationships are both good.”

“You seemed worried just a moment ago.”

“I know that was the best thing for those students.”

Anything more than that was Geo's greed.

“It is a value that cannot be criticized with pity.”

Geo often feels sorry for others and feels pity for them, but he has never thought of it as a good thing. Sympathy is mostly about casually criticizing and belittling others' best efforts.

Of course, there must be some sympathy that is truly right and pure in value somewhere in the world, but it was not easy. Geo decided to simply thank his students who had worked hard to build all of this up.

“I know you must be very tired, but I appreciate that you have worked hard all this time. I don’t think you will like it, but I want to praise you.”

“What a great guardian.”

“I was a temporary guardian. I was a conditional guardian. I’m glad that they all grew up to be great adults. It would have been better if they were a little less great, but I think there are great aspects to them now.”

They were smart students, so they would soon deduce the facts about

Sergio. But that wouldn't bring back their previous memories. I couldn't help but be thankful for that.

‘I know that these students aren’t the type of people to get lost in those memories…’

Sergio knew my subject. He had once been just a 'reliable teacher' to his students, not a friend or family member. It was a bit burdensome to know him as a panacea, but it was not dependence.

But now, those students were very tired.

‘… Even if I recall the memories, I hope they aren’t too romanticized.’

He wasn't perfect. He wasn't some great man, or some omnipotent god. He was just an ordinary man who was a little blunt and had a lot of skills. He didn't want to be the answer to everything.

Well, if that 'promise' was that strong, it would have been impossible to recall.

“…Thank you for the detailed explanation. I’m glad we all get along well.”

“If the symbols of eternity start fighting each other, what will happen to this country? The planet will explode. That’s just too much.”

“For the sake of the fate of the Earth, we can only hope that we get along well.”

Geo nodded.

“I’ve been visiting the school I used to work at often recently.”

“Oh, really? Is there a reason for that?”

“I just wanted to remind myself of something I had forgotten.”

“What is that scary sound…?”

“It’s okay, I think this is my price.”

The stamps received as system rewards were the 'price' that had been continuously paid.

“I still haven’t been able to recall it, but I recognized its identity and significance. I’ve thought about it many times, but no matter how much I think about it, it doesn’t seem like something that would pose a threat if I just forget about it.”

The forgotten memory was very simple. Sergio must have done his best that day and had no regrets or resentment. He could be sure of it even if he couldn't recall it because it was him.

So, that memory didn't seem like anything special either. As I walked around the school and tried to infer what happened that day a few times, it felt very natural.

'Those kids probably thought the same thing.'

That's why it must have been now.

“Thinking back, it wasn’t that big of a deal.”

“…If that’s what you want.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently as always.

“If something happens that requires attention, please contact me in advance.”

“I will contact you if it seems like something like that might happen.”

“Okay, I’ll definitely buy you some strawberries. Okay?”

So the two parted ways with a warm promise.

* * *

And a few days later, Yoo Seong-un received a letter.

『Would you be concerned if a ghost story appeared at a closed school in Gangwon-do?』

Yoo Seong-un just stood there blankly and laughed.

“…….”

“Mwah.”

“Hey, Dana, just a minute.”

“I’m so confused….”

“Don’t eat it, it’s not dead.”

I just couldn't perceive reality for a moment.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (288)

288

Episode 288

The incident started out very trivial.

Maybe it was because it was where he originally lived. Geo quite liked his abandoned school that was one with nature. It was as gloomy as a haunted house, but it was more peaceful and stable than that.

The haunted portrait eventually decided to start another household.

“I need to decorate it a little.”

“Gulp.”

“Okay, let’s think of a few more things we need.”

So Geo also decorated a bedroom. One day, he wanted to watch TV, so he installed a classic CRT TV. It was more interesting than a plain TV. He didn't install the electricity, but it worked. He restored part of the art room so that he could often do hobbies.

Of course, he didn't overhaul the entire school. He didn't want to be that diligent. Geo just brought whatever came to mind at the time. Because of that, the school became a mess... .

“There’s no need to worry about the inside of the closed school.”

What kind of interior design would be needed in a closed school with no students or teachers?

Geo took this as a kind of vacation. He felt refreshed after returning to his hometown after a long time. The trees were thick and gloomy, but it was nice to have some shade. Geo enjoyed this vacation.

That's where the problem started.

“……?”

One day, I started making strange friends.

“What is this?”

They didn't answer.

It wasn't that they were completely impossible to interact with. They showed certain reactions when touched. Geo knew that they were wearing the uniforms of this school. There were also many neat clothes worn by teachers.

"aha."

“Gurrrr!”

“I just remembered, they’re fairy tales.”

“Gulp!”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un told me once.”

It was the first time I went to Gyeongbokgung Palace with him. I saw something like a transparent shadow, wearing a hanbok and moving around. They were all wearing masks, wearing various outfits, and repeating certain actions.

Yoo Seong-un called it a 'fairy tale'.

'They say you usually like places where there are no people.'

I had a moment of doubt.

'Aren't you treating me like a human being?'

But since it was a closed school with only one person, I decided to understand. In order to live as a portrait possessed by a ghost, I had to be broad-minded. And now that I knew the identity, I didn't have any more trouble.

“It’s good to have a lot of friends.”

The children of the origin called 'Dongwha'. A kind of natural phenomenon where shadows imitate people using clothes and masks. Beings that are living stories and at the same time have a close human form.

'He said that they don't think like humans, they just imitate traces.'

Yoo Seong-un said that they were 'good at putting on an appearance'. He also said that it was 'a result of their inherent nature, not something they learned'.

Geo observed them walking around the school.

“It’s a familiar sight.”

“Crunch?”

“There was a time when everyone played like this.”

Whatever the type, fairy tales are all masks, and there is no substance behind them. They are mere representations, not things that move by thinking. They disappear when their own story ends.

Whether it is true or not, fairy tales that imitate students and teachers are born and disappear repeatedly. As if only the people had evaporated, the clothes and masks they were wearing slowly crumbled away, and soon even those things melted into dust.

And then be born again.

“…….”

Geo admired the sight for a very long time.

'I think I know why Mr. Yoo Seong-un said it was a natural phenomenon.'

They acted similarly among the same group, and it seemed like they were dancing in a military dance. I saw a similar scene at Gyeongbokgung Palace, but it was much more lively and lively. It was just a momentary interpretation and reproduction.

'It's like a play.'

Suddenly, I thought that the name 'Fairy Tale' was well chosen.

“You won’t be bored for a while.”

“Gurrrr….”

“You don’t seem very interested.”

“Crunch.”

“That could be possible.”

Honey, as usual, followed her father around. She seemed to know that fairy tales were just natural phenomena and didn't seem interested in them. They were neither helpful nor sparkly like jewels, nor threatening, so there was no need to recognize them.

Rather, it was Dana who showed interest.

“…….”

“Danaya, are you having fun?”

“Ugh.”

Dana acted like a cat watching fish in a tank. She sat still in one spot, observing the movements of the fairy tales. Her jewel eyes, with indistinguishable pupils, stared at them.

'I didn't make it, but it looks fun, so I'm happy.'

Since then, Geo has always brought Dana along. The teddy bear sun god refused, saying that he didn't like the gloomy school. Geo didn't care and continued this exciting school vacation life.

And then another family member was born.

Dalgrak.

“…….”

Clink, clank.

“…Poltergeist?”

Things at school started moving on their own or making strange noises from far away.

But it was soon clear that it wasn't the work of ghosts. Geo instinctively felt that they were some sort of, how should I put it? Goblins. And he also remembered that in modern times, they were expressed as 'children of the root.'

“I see.”

Friends with unique shapes also gathered. Children as small as fingers, old people wandering around with bundles on their backs, jellyfish with graceful lines, dust in the air that twinkled like stars, etc.

“…….”

“Kung.”

“I think it’s Dad’s fault too.”

“Gulp….”

“Let’s accept reality.”

There was no choice.

“It’s good to have a lot of friends.”

That's what it was.

As the once quiet abandoned school became noisy, children from other sources also seemed to gather one by one. They didn't seem to have been born at the school. But there was no reason to kick them out, so Geo decided to live with them.

Actually, it was okay up to that point.

“…….”

“…….”

“…Hey, hey.”

“…You saw it too?”

“Is there a new dungeon?”

“Ugh, that looks dangerous….”

“It could be a nest.”

The problem started when the Hunters targeted his abandoned school.

“Should I stop by and take a look? It doesn’t look that big.”

“At this point, I think I can just check briefly and come out.”

Ghost stories began to spread from them.

To be honest, it was such an unfair thing for Geo.

* * *

“…So the ghost story spread?”

Yoo Seong-un asked a question while sitting on a chair in the gallery.

“Did you see the silhouettes that appeared outside the abandoned school?”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“But there probably won’t be many people who can see the children of the origin?”

“They played a prank on the guests.”

“Sometimes, even friends who are usually quiet….”

No, but really, how did that happen?

'How is that possible?'

The children of the origin lived their own lives. They rarely harmed others, especially those who were invisible to them. Usually, when humans approached them rashly, chaos ensued.

Those guys were the ones who came forward and caused the accident.

‘…Maybe I was a little influenced by Geo?’

To be honest, as a gardener, it was a very frustrating phenomenon.

'I'd like to research it, but I don't think it's the right time.'

It seemed like he should ask for an invitation later. For a gardener, the most important thing is to acquire information and understand the source. Yoo Seong-un held back his greed, saying he would do it later.

What was important right now was my responsibility and training as a curator.

“But it’s unlikely that a ghost story will come about if a few hunters stop by for a bit.”

“I confirmed that several teams, in addition to the hunters who visited for the first time, stopped by. Some hunters were repeat challengers, while others seemed to have heard rumors and came.”

“How on earth could such a terrible thing happen?”

“I think I approached it too hastily.”

“You even approached me? How and what?”

“…….”

The portrait, which seemed to be organizing its words, answered.

“It seems like it was wrong from the beginning.”

* * *

Let's go back in time to when the first hunters visited.

“Hey, over here….”

One of the three hesitated and asked.

“Isn’t it too gloomy?”

“You cowardly little brat.”

“No, the atmosphere is strange.”

The remaining one nodded.

“Well, if it’s a dungeon battle, it would be hard to be this quiet.”

Basically, it's a dungeon, and the monsters have a hard time staying quiet. They have intelligence below humans, so they can't stand noise. A gathering of monsters that are driven by instinct is always bound to be noisy.

“Wasn’t there definitely something visible from outside?”

“I honestly found that a bit creepy, and I don’t even know how the silhouette looked inside this dark abandoned school. Does anyone remember what it looked like? Weren’t we lured in?”

“I think I should keep that in mind, but… I’ve come all the way to Gangwon-do, so it’s a shame to go back right away. If there’s a nest in such a remote place, who knows what valuable items it might contain.”

“Oh shit, I’m so scared….”

I definitely saw silhouettes outside the abandoned school. There were some that looked like humans, but there were more that looked like monsters. Even if it wasn't necessarily a dungeon, there were times when monsters would gather together and form a 'nest'.

There were rare instances when such nests were filled with precious items beyond human imagination. They were like unopened lottery tickets. Most of the time, they were duds, but on rare occasions, they were really big winners.

“So is this a dungeon or a nest?”

“Seeing as there is no system notification, it seems like it might just be a nest.”

“I came all the way to this remote place and saw a nest. Do you know this is my first time coming to a nest? It's so strange."

"You have to be more careful in the nest because there are no unified rules. Just like in a dungeon, you can't guarantee safety by following just one set rule. There are many variables, so everyone should be careful."

"I heard that."

One hunter chuckled.

"They say ghosts live in the nests of the provinces?"

"The soul is real, but it cannot strike directly."

"Well, I heard from hunters that they can see spirits. They say there are a lot of ghosts."

"Hey, Didi is scared, take it easy."

They gradually figured out the school. If they could come to a place as far away as Gangwon-do, it meant that their skills were quite good. The experienced hunters calmly dealt with the strange phenomena that occasionally occurred.

The sound of students' laughter suddenly ringing in your ears. Chalk writing math formulas on the blackboard. A large monitor with a camera that shows the entire classroom…

"……"

However, coping with it doesn't mean you can escape from your emotions.

"…Why can't I see any monsters?"

"What on earth are we seeing and hearing from outside?"

“Something is wrong.”

The hunters felt a sense of crisis through the sense of discomfort.

“It’s true that I was lured.”

They were convinced.

“If we just estimate the number of monsters that we’ve seen outside, it’s over 30. And yet, it’s so quiet and only insubstantial phenomena are occurring? It’s obvious, that silhouette was just bait. I don’t know what kind of monster did it, but it’s right to get away.”

Experienced hunters were not greedy. Their most important assets were their bodies and minds. It is true that they came in to find valuable items, but no one wanted to die in exchange.

“Escape is the top priority.”

But the process was not easy.

“Leader, Didi is gone!”

“You were clearly caught in our middle!”

“Fuck, what the heck is this…!”

It would have been better if there had been a physical presence. There would have been no confusion if a plausible attack had come. However, numerous strange phenomena created chaos without being visible, tangible, or causing direct damage.

“Where is this place…!”

“It’s a closed school. It’s a closed school. Why on earth is something like this here?”

The abandoned school had a strangely twisted space. There was a

CRT TV that looked like something out of a museum, and there were neatly decorated bedrooms and clean dishes. The problem was that it was something that didn't fit in with the abandoned school at all.

It was so bizarre.

"……."

"……."

It was as if a non-human entity had decorated the abandoned school, knowing that people would come and imitating human perspectives. Such a strange sight stirred the minds of the hunters.

And the most fearful hunter did it anyway.

"Didi, Didi! Where have you been…!"

"This person will help us."

"…What is this?"

"Huh? Here, here now…."

"……."

"…I opened the door for you."

The hunter tilted his head.

"Where did you go…?"

In the darkness that spreads behind him, his distant eyes meet mine.

"My name is Sergio."

"……."

"What is your name? I'm curious about your first name."

“…….”

“Would you like to talk to me?”

The hunters lost their minds.

* * *

“And then you come to your senses and you find yourself in your own home.”

Hunter 'Didi' nodded in response to the association researcher's question.

“…Yes, yes. I… I don’t even remember exactly what I did that day.”

“You don’t need to make excuses like that, since I’ve verified with my skills that it’s not a lie.”

“I’m sorry, I’m sorry. I heard you said that I opened the door for him, for that, for Sergio Hunter that day.”

“The Association has already recognized the seriousness of the situation and dispatched hunters.”

The researcher spoke in a calm, reassuring tone.

“There will be no casualties.”

In this way, Hunter Dede's memories were erased by mutual consent.

It was the association president's directive.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (289)

289

Episode 289

“…….”

The president of the association, Dan Hae-ra, smiled while looking at the documents.

“Sergio Hunter showed up at that school.”

“…Okay, do that.”

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been called to her, asked.

“You’re controlling the information, right?”

“We are cracking down on this even within the association, so there is no way this story will spread.”

“Ha, I hate to say this, but… this is really shitty….”

He let out a sigh of relief.

“This is why I can’t even deny it.”

“Wasn’t it impossible to deny it from the beginning?”

Dan Hae-ra covered the documents.

“Sergio Hunter is the old teacher we don’t remember.”

It's time to acknowledge it in language.

“I don’t know exactly what happened. But I shouldn’t know. But we have brains, so we can only think about the order in which events occurred.”

“We had a really great teacher who died, and so he created the Earth system with something including his memories, and we lived on, forgetting about him, and then he came back to life as a drawing that wasn’t even human? How about that, good summary?”

“Yes, you did well. I still don’t know if it was really possible to build a system based solely on memories of Sergio Hunter… But I’m glad that the part I’ve always been curious about has been clarified.”

Even though she said that, her face wasn't happy at all. Dan Hae-ra's face, which had stopped aging in her 20s, was always like a machine. It was a face that was dense and elegant, but didn't show any emotion.

Looking at that, Jeong Hae-woon asked.

“…Do you remember that day? The day we learned that we were connected to the Earth system.”

“I gave it to you as a promise.”

“How long has it been since I told you and you’re using it again?”

“The fact that something like that happened is something that can be known just by cognitive ability.”

“Anyway, you’re being tough.”

At first, they also did not know what the 'Promise of Eternity' was. They had even forgotten their memories of it. However, there were things they inevitably came to know. It was through the sense of alienation from those around them.

Jeong Hae-woon muttered.

“I knew I’d end up like this.”

“Are you talking about me?”

“No way. We’re talking.”

He sprawled out on the guest sofa and stared at the ceiling.

“…Do we now know everything about the ‘promise’?”

At first, it was from their abilities that surpassed human limitations. Then, they realized the reality of each other’s appearance that no longer aged, and then from the horror of not being able to die even after death. In this way, they gradually uncovered the truth about the ‘Promise of Eternity’.

Dan Hae-ra said with a smile.

“It’s not important.”

“Yeah, it’s not that important….”

In the end, what was important to them was the present and the future. The situation was not conducive to looking back on the past. They were too busy looking forward to have time for regrets and longing.

“You figured it out so quickly.”

Perhaps, if 'Sergio' hadn't appeared, we might have known for a longer time. The reason they wanted to know about 'the promise' was ultimately to 'make sure that no one unknowingly threatens the Earth system'.

And even if he didn't know about the existence of 'Sergio', he knew enough to know that it wouldn't threaten the Earth system. So he didn't need to know any more. Why would he do anything if he knew? Jeong

Hae-woon stared into the pale light as he thought that.

“…….”

My eyes didn't hurt.

“…What is the purpose?”

“Sergio Hunter’s purpose?”

“It first appeared last year. A portrait that had been quietly lying dormant for over 30 years was suddenly put up for auction. Then it was sold to a collector who believed in guaranteeing the freedom of art.”

“Do you think it was intentional?”

“Let’s not be naive. It’s not even certain whether ‘Sergio Hunter’ is really the teacher we forgot. At least he’s not human. Even if he is, the danger remains.”

More than curiosity, suspicion arises.

“Let’s say he’s not the person involved. Then he’s a really smart monster. He’s guessing and reconstructing an existence that we can’t even remember, and he’s exploiting the gaps. No matter how much I think about it, I can’t say that he had good intentions in that case.”

What if you are a party to the matter?

“Even if you are the person involved, it is a problem. How can you be sure that the person is the same being as when he was human? Even we have changed like this. We have struggled to remain human somehow, and this is the result. People in the world call us a natural disaster.”

To put it simply, it was an S-class and a symbol of eternity.

“But, what the heck? Now you’re saying it’s a portrait? Since Gardener Yoo Seong-un is said to be in charge of the collection as a curator, he must be very close to the source. Isn’t that right?”

“He may have been placed there simply because of his competence. He was brought in by a collector himself, and he was a work of art in the fifth-floor gallery. There was ample reason to be cautious.”

“You’re saying that right now, that it’s a being that needs to be careful. I don’t know what it wants to do. Although, very rarely, there are beings that were once humans but then became children of the Origin…”

Jeong Hae-woon wiped his face.

“It never ended well.”

These were the words of the first gardener on Earth.

“Humans are inevitably evil. They are selfish because they need to preserve and develop themselves. Why? Because preservation and development inevitably require resources, and resources in the human world are always limited, so they inevitably take away the possibilities that others could have had…! A child of the origin that reflects such human characteristics? Wow, this is really horrible. Don’t you think so too?”

Dan Hae-ra said to him like that.

“I was excited.”

"…Sorry."

Jeong Hae-woon took his hand away from my middle-aged face.

“What I keep feeling while doing this is, damn it, in this world, besides you guys, there’s no one on my side. You’re all like dogs. Humans, gardeners, children of the source, they’re all like dogs.”

“You seem very tired, but why don’t you take a vacation? I heard that the number of gardeners has increased a bit these days. Isn’t that enough to guarantee you some rest?”

“These little brats can only manage one garden. Two at most, and even those are rare. Something has gone wrong with the source recently, so everything is in turmoil… No, this. I can’t rest.”

“Hmm, okay.”

Danhae nodded.

“How long will that old man’s face last?”

“I’m going to live like this until the world ends.”

“Wake up.”

"whatever."

“I’m saying this because I’m worried.”

“…….”

Is that really a 'worry'?

Maybe because I'm tired, my thoughts are all twisted up. I forgot many emotions and lost my memories of Danhae, but I was still Jeong Hae-woon's friend. If she was worried, then it was right for her to be worried.

There was no need to be sarcastic.

“…I guess I’ll have to take a break soon.”

“I guess my words hurt your feelings.”

“I’m really sorry.”

“It’s okay, you don’t have to do that.”

“If you did something wrong, you should apologize….”

I let out a deep sigh.

“There’s nothing I can do. If you stay young for a long time, people will be scared. If you show at least this much sincerity, they will be more friendly towards you. What can I do?”

Due to the nature of his job, Jeong Hae-woon had to meet many people and have deep conversations. If someone was too young, he would seem untrustworthy, and if he didn't age properly, he would feel uncomfortable.

The sense of dissonance that arose from the gap between the inner and outer self filled those around him with fear.

“So, the country must also work hard to live.”

“You’re working hard.”

“You too, Inma.”

Tsk, Jeong Hae-woon clicked his tongue and sat down on the sofa.

“…I know that ‘Sergio Hunter’ has done a lot of good things. I heard that thanks to him, life has become a little better. He donates a lot personally, often volunteers, and steps up when there are problems here and there.”

“Are you still worried?”

“The malice and goodwill shown by the children of the origin cannot be distinguished. Nor should they be distinguished. Malice and goodwill are all based on human standards. Any existence that comes from the origin is a time bomb. You don’t know how much time is left before it explodes, and it explodes if you are shocked, and it explodes if you handle it wrong.”

“There might be unexploded bombs in there.”

“The problem is that no matter how you look at it, you can’t tell. What’s the standard for an unexploded bomb? Does it not explode when you touch it? Does it not explode when you throw it? Does it not explode when you cut the wire wrong? Some bombs burn quietly even when you put them in a fire, while others explode if you just handle them wrongly due to moisture.”

This is an unbelievable being.

“There is no basis for trust, not at all.”

The emotions they showed should not be interpreted as 'emotions'. They could not be judged by human standards. However, humans, being humans, had to be interpreted from a human perspective.

It was a truly terrible disparity.

“It’s comforting to know that it seems to be a relatively harmless rule. If they can really interact like humans, then their understanding of humans must be excellent.”

“I guess he was human after all?”

“You know that you can’t expect a human being to have a high level of understanding of humans just because they were once human. What the hell, how on earth did such a being come into being? What exactly does it have to do with the system in the first place?”

“If you go into too much detail, it won’t be of any use, right?”

“So it’s not just me who’s going crazy like this.”

Jeong Hae-woon muttered.

“I’m not sure yet, but if he had the memory to create a system… he must have been a really good person….”

Although there may be some convenience, the price and reward must be equal.

“If it was a memory of that level, it would have been sacrificing a lot of what makes us who we are. It’s like I’m changing myself just by forgetting one person. It’s so creepy and nauseating that I’m going crazy.”

“You have a bad habit of speaking harshly whenever you feel sorry or have a hard time.”

“…I know that being curious doesn’t bring any good.”

If they delved too deeply, they might have broken the 'promise'. That would have been too much for an already precarious Earth. They had to always ignore the past, live in the present, and look to the future.

“There’s nothing good about it, just….”

It was a total mess.

“I feel sorry that you might have died because of us. I feel guilty. I worry about what you might do now that you’re no longer human. I also wonder what kind of person you were to be so kind after you died and came back to life. I also have a basic sense of goodwill toward good people and good relationships.”

But that was all.

“That’s all.”

“That’s not a problem.”

“I wish Sergio Hunter had shown up a hundred years later.”

“I guess the Earth will have stabilized a lot by then?”

“That’s why we have to roll more.”

Jeong Hae-woon looked back at Danhae-ra.

“What are you going to do about that school?”

“We need to limit visitors.”

“That is most certain.”

“I’m going to try to make a promise.”

“So that no one can enter?”

“No entry allowed for authorized personnel.”

“Good.”

He asked.

“What do you want to forget?”

“For now, okay.”

Danhae-ra laughed.

“Memories of Sergio Hunter?”

It was the most rational choice.

* * *

After that.

Information about an abandoned school has disappeared.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (290)

290

Episode 290

The world has changed, but we are at peace without even knowing it.

“So I couldn’t help but come.”

This incident piqued Bisabal's interest.

“It’s easy to say that ‘the information has been erased,’ but in reality, it’s safe to say that no one comes here. The path to get there has been artificially blocked, and the records on paper and human memories have been erased.”

The visa holder laughed.

“Some people ask how that is possible. Of course, it has been a while since our friendly ghost story was spread. There must be quite a few people who have experienced and heard about this eerie abandoned school.”

You may wonder.

“But it is possible. This is the power of ‘promise’. The promise of compensation and reward. President Dan Hae-ra has put an end to all this commotion in exchange for his own memories and experiences with ‘Sergio Hunter’.”

Visabal spoke in front of the 'fairy tales' watching me.

“If I were to put that promise simply, it would be ‘No entry except by authorized personnel.’ Now, only a few humans are permitted to visit this place, to have memories, to have experiences.”

His eyes are narrowed slightly.

“Well, something like this happened.”

Visabal came to the abandoned school and asked.

“At that point, wouldn’t it be okay to call them ‘related people’?”

“Of course, father.”

“This is truly ecstatic….”

He smiled graciously at the portrait's permission.

“If you say this, I guess we can keep playing house?”

“I hope you don’t make it too burdensome for me.”

“I don’t know if I’m an introvert or an extrovert, but yeah, let’s do that. This father is really good at riding a horse.”

“I would appreciate it if you could do that.”

“I heard that it seems like social life is difficult these days….”

Bisabal tilted his head as he looked at Geo sitting in front of the canvas.

“It doesn’t look like much, does it?”

“Can’t you call spending a vacation at an abandoned school a social life?”

“Oh, of course. But it doesn’t seem as harsh as I’ve heard.”

“I feel a bit more relaxed now that I’m at school.”

When talking about his students, and being in this sad abandoned school, Geo was able to act naturally enough without having to rely on anyone else's help.

At that, Visabal pretended to look upset.

“Should I give him a longer vacation then? Oh, it’s already sad. Would it be too much to expect my son to go straight back to work after finishing his big job?”

“Excuse me, but I don’t remember signing an employment contract.”

“If this is the case, I won’t be able to feel any satisfaction in becoming the guild leader… It’s unfortunate.”

Visabal smiled and chose a nearby chair to sit on.

“Were you drawing a picture?”

“I was just watching.”

“What do you see?”

“I can see anything.”

“How far?”

“Even to very far places.”

“A very close place?”

“My school isn’t what it used to be.”

Sergio complained.

“I never thought it would even become known as a psychic spot.”

“I guess it was quite annoying.”

“I didn’t know, but it seems like there’s something called a monster nest. They usually appear in remote areas, and there’s a rare chance that you can get valuable treasures from them. But at least I know that’s not the case.”

"so?"

“I was just trying to kindly guide them outside. The new kids at school were playing pranks so much that I even stopped them. In the end, they ended up becoming part of the ghost story….”

“What a pity that such precious kindness has been sold as a ghost story.”

The visa officer asked with sympathy.

“That’s very interesting, but how exactly did you manage to escape?”

“If you are going to feel pity, then make your words and actions match. I can do better than that.”

But the portrait answered obediently.

“There were times when I appeared in this form, times when I appeared as ‘Sergio Hunter,’ times when I hid my face and pretended to be a fellow hunter to help… and times when I didn’t show myself at all.”

“Hoo, either way, it’s a ghost story in itself?”

“Yes, in this kind of atmosphere, an insider coming into contact with an outsider can only be a terrifying presence. I just didn’t know that the Hunters were so timid.”

“The atmosphere here must be quite hostile.”

Visabal smiled faintly as if he was watching his son's tantrum.

This is a space filled with such mystery. Perhaps because it is located in a remote area where no one can be found, the temperature is low. Since no light comes in, only the mystery that matches the darkness and cold can creep in.

'Besides, the mysterious being who followed me in after seeing this precious portrait couldn't be just any ordinary being.'

Visabal looked out the window of the ruined abandoned school.

'The pulse of the source has become enlarged and is turning into a spring.'

The source of the mystery of life on Earth, the bloodline and organs. The intangible birth that is different from the garden but is everywhere. Looking at the way they are gathered together, it seems that if we do well, we will soon be able to see the wonderful sight of a well.

'It has become a difficult area for those who are not immune to mystery to endure.'

It wasn't a warm and affectionate kind of mystery. People would accept it as a ghost story. Not everyone has seen and lived in a world like Bisabal.

Tolerating mystery was a separate issue from human strength or weakness. Just as Bisabal was an S-class but had no actual force.

Those who literally cannot see even with their eyes open.

“…….”

He shrugged slightly.

“That must have been fun.”

“Yes, it was fun.”

“I guess so?”

There was something very honest about this portrait.

“I must take care of this spooky vacation spot. If you need anything, just contact Manager Joohyun at any time, and I’ll give you everything I can.”

“There’s no need to go that far.”

“It’s practically your private land recognized by the government and the association, isn’t it? You can farm as you like, slaughter animals, and paint… It’ll be fantastic.”

“Sometimes you act like you can’t hear me.”

“Oh, when did I ever act so recklessly? I always look at our precious son. I’m so grateful that I was given the chance to buy you at that auction house….”

The visa holder smiled broadly.

“Oh, okay.”

He said it as if it just occurred to him.

“It seems like things have been abuzz since the Black Cloak enthusiasts were recognized as an official religion.”

“It’s burdensome.”

“But they are all your friends, so treat them kindly and take care of them.”

“They are good people who do not need to be praised.”

Still, the portrait nodded.

“I was thinking of coming to see you soon.”

“That’s cool.”

“I don’t intend to get too close.”

“That’s good too.”

The servant who had been staring at the portrait soon asked.

“What kind of teacher was he?”

At this school.

“Was he as blunt a teacher as I know him?”

“Haven’t you already heard the story from my student?”

“Yes, I searched and searched and searched until I finally found my way to the President’s Office.”

The visa holder was proud.

“But he didn’t tell me much.”

“That’s because everyone has become more fearful while we were apart.”

“Still, I told you a little bit, because I’m in charge of the purse strings of the Republic of Korea.”

“Isn’t that usually called a threat?”

“You wouldn’t be the type of person to keep that in mind.”

He is a person who knows that he has many shortcomings compared to his friends. The current president is excellent at dealing with people as his abilities are below expectations. He may look weak, but he is a stubborn person.

“I would say it was more of a negotiation than a threat.”

They concluded a satisfactory deal.

“But I didn’t hear all of that. At best, I was convinced that there was a ‘Sergio the Art Teacher.’ He was still wary of me….”

“Use your heart kindly.”

“I thought I wrote it nicely enough.”

Bisabal has always lived patiently. The world is less chaotic because he has endured so much. Most hunters know that. After all, Bisabal is not on the side of complete humanity.

“So, can you tell me? What kind of teacher was he?”

“The students fantasized about me.”

“An illusion that is neither respect nor admiration?”

“They treated them as if they were completely separate entities from humans.”

“A separate entity from humans….”

That was really fun.

“It doesn’t seem to be much different from now?”

“That could be the case.”

The portrait wasn't denied either.

“My students gave me a lot of stories. Some were so ridiculous that I laughed just hearing them, and some were so realistic that I didn’t laugh.”

“That’s similar to now.”

“Students find joy in such imagination. School can be boring sometimes, so I understand. I haven’t worked in that many schools, but most students treat me that way….”

“That must have been fun.”

“There was some of that too.”

It was an honest portrait that showed no signs of humility.

“But I regret the distance that came with that. I said this to Yoo Seong-woon and Joo Hyun, but I definitely wish they would treat me as a more friendly person.”

“Like friends?”

“Actually, I didn’t even hope for that.”

“So, did you want to be looked at as an equal human being?”

“There were times like that. I felt a little bit of regret toward the students who had always looked upon me as a fantasy creature, but I wasn’t dissatisfied.”

“That would have been fun enough.”

“Honestly, I did.”

“Oh, really, I should have met my art teacher, Mr. Sergio….”

It was so regrettable that it almost felt wronged.

“I wonder how he would treat humans with that face.”

The portrait expressed injustice.

“I am human too.”

“Oh, well, of course.”

Visabal smiled brightly.

“I gave birth to our son, so don’t you know?”

“Every time you make excuses like that, I feel like I want to distance myself from you….”

“You speak so nicely.”

“When are you leaving?”

“I should probably go back soon, our staff is waiting outside.”

“Please enter carefully.”

“Oh, right. Before I go, there’s something I want to ask….”

He looked at the portrait.

“…….”

“…….”

Faraway 'eyes'.

“…Are you human?”

That was the answer.

“I am human.”

“Do you deny the gaze that looks at you?”

“I agree.”

"okay."

Visabal laughed heartily.

"thank you."

He was a great piece of work.

* * *

“…….”

“Gulp?”

"no."

“Kung?”

“It’s not that it’s not true.”

Geo picked up Honey, who was trying to jump out of the hood.

“If you try to eat people like that, it won’t work.”

But it was true that it gave me goosebumps, so Geo swept my arm away. The smile that Bisabal made when he saw me at the end was really amazing. It was so amazing that it gave Geo goosebumps even though he was dull in his biological reactions.

It was to the point where I remembered the first time I encountered the Visa.

“You are still a great person.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“I didn’t mean anything bad, so let’s let it slide.”

“Kung kkung kkung kkung kkung.”

“Let me just look at it once.”

Geo shook his head.

“You are weak.”

“Kung….”

“And since you have so many trinkets….”

“Gurrrr.”

“I’m going to get a stomachache.”

“Kung?”

“You should learn how to eat by now, honey.”

I've already heard it from Yoo Seong-un and Joo Hyun. Most of the accessories that Bisabal wears around are 'works of art'. In other words, they are cursed jewels.

“It’s a miracle that someone with such a weak body can carry all that.”

At that level, it seemed like he was an S-class hunter.

“If you really want to eat it, this dad will make it for you.”

“Gulp.”

Honey seemed to like that too.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (291)

291 Episode 291 Even without that, Geo was really planning to go see his lovers. “Really.” Really. “…….” “…….” Do I really have to see it? “… Kung.” “The bed is soft.” “Kung, kung, kung.” “Even your small beak makes this dad feel extreme pain.” “Kung, kung, kung, kung...” “I’ll get up.” Geo finally got out of bed at Honey’s wake-up call. “Should we eat something before that?” “Gulp!” Geo succeeded in persuading his son with food. ‘I’m starting to feel a sense of crisis at this point.’ It seemed that Honey was more interested in Geo’s reputation after all. In fact, Honey wasn’t the only one who did this. Dana, who usually had no interest in the goings-on of the world, came by for no reason to wag her tail, and the teddy bear, which was usually basking in the sun, quietly came and stared before leaving. 'Why is everyone so anxious to get me into that popular party?' Introverted Geo trembled at this absurd situation. Sometimes people can like bed more than people. Originally, he was a true introvert who recovered through time alone. At this point, you might wonder, 'Why is that a popular party?' But. 'Those people who gathered to look at my painting at best, but then started interacting with each other and eventually became that huge volunteer group, there's no way they weren't popular.' At that point, even non-popular people would have become popular. Geo became extremely timid. He didn't want to go out. "....." First, let's eat breakfast. "Today, umm..." "Gurgling?" "Should I try fried rice?" After eating meat all these years, he wanted to eat something clean. 'Mr. Argio was amazing.' He was different from 'Giovanni' who liked a meal centered on vegetables and seafood. He was a true carnivore. A wild man who only gained muscle mass even if he filled his breakfast, lunch, and dinner with meat. But Sergio wasn't there. "I'd like tomato and egg fried rice." He picked tomatoes of a decent size from the garden and pulled out firm green onions. He also added a little garlic. He extracted oil from the green onions, then lightly cooked the tomatoes and eggs. He set aside for a moment, then fried the garlic, fried the rice, and added the sauce. Then he added the tomato and egg fried rice and fried them. By the way, Geo's rice was served in a ramen bowl. "……." "Gulp?" "It's not enough." He should have just served it in a bowl like he usually did. 'I thought I wouldn't be able to eat well in the morning since I've only eaten meat all day.' Geo regretfully brought back some rice. Overall, it was not overly spicy and was cooked well, so it was delicious. As expected, there was nothing better than fried rice for breakfast. It was filling and clean. "It's not too spicy, so it's good." "Gulp." "I'm glad you like it..." Honey was melting the plate in her body and swallowing it. A plate was floating around inside the transparent body of the plump water bird. Geo quietly put his hand in and took out only the plate. And so the meal was over. "……." "……." "…I was going to." Geo couldn't stand the gazes of his family and got up from his seat. "I should see Mr. Ater first." Well, it was a bit sudden. It was time to finish the story of the sleeping warrior. * * * "Actually, I thought it would be okay to just stay home like this." Ater opened his eyes at the familiar voice. "Everyone was anxious because they couldn't make me a celebrity." "……." "So, are you awake?" "… Ah…" It seemed like he had been asleep for a very long time. "… Argio." Surprisingly, his voice didn't crack. From the moment he called his name, his hazy consciousness began to slowly return. Even the existence of his body and his last memory. Ater unconsciously raised his hand and touched his neck. Something clicked. "……." "You came out well." "…What was the meaning of this gift?" "It was a gift symbolizing our friendship." "I don't know…" I chuckled. "Where is this?" "My home." The god crouching down next to me looked really unsightly. "The attic there." "It's so peaceful and warm that you wouldn't think it was your home." "It can't be helped since it's where the sun god resides.” “Am I dead after all?” “Do you feel regret?” “That too, well… I don’t know.” The first thing I felt was a sense of exhaustion. “…I have no strength in my body.” And I felt tired. “I think it’s because it’s too warm.” “It’s good to be warm.” “The feeling of my head getting dull isn’t very pleasant…” “You’re trying to use your head too much.” “Traditionally, the greatest strength of humans is their ability to think.” “Still acting tough after dying and coming back to life.” “Did I die and come back to life…?” I felt like joking for no reason. “I thought this was the afterlife.” “If you want to think so, it could be the afterlife.” “You often hear me say I’m fickle, don’t you?” “I’m pretty consistent.” “Ha, haha...” The hand that had been fiddling with the jewels on her necklace suddenly dropped to the floor. “If I said I wanted to die, would you kill me?” “You’re neither alive nor dead.” “It sounds like you’re saying it’s up to my choice.” “Of course, because you can be anything from now on.” “You can choose anything.” “Within the limits of what I can help you with?” the evil spirit whispered. “Aren’t you tired?” I was tired. “You’ve been through so much hardship and adversity. You’ve struggled your entire life, which was neither short nor long. To become a better person, to make a better world, to do better things...” That must have been it. “I thought that this capricious evil spirit should not guess the heart of a hero like you. So tell me, tell me your true feelings in this picture that is neither life nor death.” “…What kind of true feelings….” “Is it the end or the beginning?” “It’s difficult.” “I don’t mind staying like this.” “……” Well, I don’t know. “…I wanted to live.” “I know how strong your determination is.” “I wanted to survive somehow. And that’s probably because…my whole life was a goal…” Isn’t that what it was like? “…I still don’t know. But the true feeling I’m feeling right now is emptiness. It’s unpleasant and pleasant at the same time. So this is what it feels like when nothing comes to mind that I need to do.” He had always had a goal in his life. He had lived so fiercely, and now he was left alone, having achieved all his goals. He was neither alive nor dead, looking for a way to go and a place to stay. “Will you give me a goal?” “You’re trying to make me a wicked employer. I'll reject it." "Please tell me what I need to do." "Haven't you done so much?" "But…" Ater blinked. "…If you have nothing to do, there's no reason to live." "Is that so?" The evil spirit asked in a flat tone. "Is that your true heart?" "……." "What do you want? Tell this evil dragon, I'm very curious." "…I've done everything I could in the human world." No. "Not everything I could do, but everything I wanted to do…" It didn't matter. "Who's behind you now?" "It's just me, Ater." "There's the gaze of the sun that gives me mercy." "That's me too." "The gaze that gives me heavy peace?" "That's me too." "The day will never come when I fully understand you." My god, far away. "……." Ater continued. "…I want to sleep forever." "And?" "I want to live forever." "You're still greedy even after all that you've been through." "I've always wanted to climb higher." I want the peace that all humans enjoy. But I also want the favoritism that all humans cannot enjoy. I am tired enough to want to sleep, but my desire to go up still remains. It is terrible to just sit still and wait for fate. But it is also terribly tiring to pioneer. Isn't it really contradictory? Ather saw the only god I must serve. "You created me." He created this phantom anew. "Am I a monster or a human?" "As you wish." "Would you call this also your mercy?" "It could be indifference." "It could be trust." "Hey, do you know that?" The god laughed. "You know me quite well." It was too much. "…I would like to know you well, but it would be impossible for a lifetime…" "It doesn't suit you to jump to conclusions like that." "…Bury me in your land." "Land." The voice was provocative. "Are you satisfied with that?" "…Place me in the land, in the sky, in the underworld, in everything you do." "Then." "I live forever dead." "Isn't it terrible?" "It is terrible." But Ather had lived like this all his life. Even if he were to turn it in a different direction now, he couldn't. He was greedy and extremely vicious. He couldn't give up both my comfort and my honor. "You said that if I wish, this will be the afterlife." "Yes." "Please accept it." "Neither alive nor dead?" "Yes, I wish that." "……." The god smiled in response, feeling sorry. "Poor thing." He was sympathizing with admiration. "There is a place that is just right for you." "…Can you tell me where that place is?" "In the deep abyss, and in the high space." "Good." Ather closed his eyes tightly. "…It will be noisy, but I can sleep deeply…" He was tired. "Then what will you call me now?" "I would like to cut off your hair, but that place already has an owner." "If you permit, I will follow this jewel under your name." "Hmm, yes. That's good too." The god reached out and lightly ripped off the necklace. "……." "Open your eyes and look at me." He held the silver string in his hand and lifted the transparent jewel to Ather's sight. The warm sunlight streaming into the attic penetrated the jewel. The sunlight that escaped from the sparkling mineral soon took on color. Red light filled his gaze. Pale red light… . Ather suddenly remembered. "…It's a similar color to my eyes." "Yes, garnet." Argio smiled brightly. "My favorite gem." The god called his name. "I'll take purple." "…Thank you." Ather closed his eyes. Soon, he became calm, and his soul left his body. It melted and colored the world. * * * The disappearance of the Pallet Residents has been confirmed. Confirmed Pallet Residents: Ather, Deer "……." Would you like to place them in the Pallet again? [Yes/No] "Yes." Color: 'Ater' was successfully placed [Purple] Color: 'Deer' was successfully placed [Brown] … … . … … . We should leave a lot of space empty… . "Is that so?" * * * The child was scared. "Mom, I… I… hurt…." "What is he saying?" "…Mom…." "Look at him squeezing." When the adult giggled, another adult also laughed. "What kind of mother does a carnation child have?" "Have big dreams, damn it." "Hey, let's go. We can't use him anymore." "Tsk… I thought this one would last a while, but this is why these brats." "Where's the free labor?" "That's true, aren't there any strong brats?" When the adults left, only the cold and pain remained. "……." He tossed and turned lightly, and saw something white. "…Ugh…." A white… picture frame. "Mom, ma…." He saw a pure white mother. "Me, me… take me too…." Why am I the only one here. There were also children of similar height to her. Carnation children holding flowers in their hands. The child reached out to the warm and comfortable-looking color. She wanted to crawl, but the distance was too far. Her body lost its strength. "…

Alone, I don’t like that…” She was scared of being alone. “…….” “…….” Between the pure white people, she saw a sparkling jewel. ‘… A jewel.’ It was a red and blue jewel. ‘Pretty.’ It was an ecstatic light that stole the child’s young gaze in an instant. The purple jewel that had come closer before she knew it reached out and grabbed the child’s hand. She swept her cold cheek. Then she lifted her body and hugged her. The large and firm embrace felt like the father’s that she had always imagined. Thump, thump, thump. The vibrations that the jewel made every time it walked, neither big nor small, sounded exactly like the sound of a heartbeat. “…….” And when she entered the frame. It didn’t hurt anymore. * * * One day, an illegal guild went missing en masse. “Why the illegal guild?” “They take the carnation children and run a factory.” It is said that only the building remained. “Then what? Didn’t it float to Korea?” “Probably not.” “No one died, but they went missing.” “There were a lot of water birds there.” “Ah…” The water bird in the black cloak detested the villain. “They must have died.” “Right?” It happened often. (Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (292)

292

Episode 292

The so-called 'Black Cloak Enthusiasts' viewed each other as members of the same club, but in fact, they were fostering a more solid group than that.

When you first come in, you have a simple interview and a written contract. Depending on the time and results of your activities within the company, you can move up to a higher level. And the activities mentioned here are usually volunteer work.

“No, do you think that’s what I came here to do?”

Most newbies react this way at first. Those who dare to explore the works of monsters, now divine beings, are usually rich, powerful, or have a solid world of their own.

But it was only a matter of time before this attitude changed.

“That’s the end of this week’s activities. You’ve met your quota.”

“Why are you stopping me when I say I want to do more? I mean, I want to do good things.”

“Others should also be active to the extent that they are guaranteed. If you are active beyond that, other members will have less work to do. Please understand.”

“What nonsense are you talking about… You say there’s so little to do?”

“There are limits to what you can do within the city. If you want to do more work than your quota, you have to go outside the city, but that’s not possible. You have to get certified by the association and seek help.”

“Then I’ll go to the association and talk to them. Isn’t that okay? I already know some people there.”

“Please don’t… Well, there is a team that is going to be dispatched to the provinces this week. The conditions are strict, but please wait and I will take a look at the situation.”

The reason for this change in attitude was clear.

“Today, while I was picking up trash on the street corner, the Void City stroked my head!”

“Wow, I’m jealous… Which district did you work in this time?”

Because the reward was certain.

“I also want to see Black Cloak’s work.”

They came mostly to see the Black Cloak itself, or the works he had painted. A work of art that could be traded. And such a mysterious work of art directly gave rewards. Even for a first-class citizen, it was an extremely luxurious item.

“These new recruits are also very proactive.”

“The rewards are clear, so it won’t take long to get a taste.”

And after a little more time, the activity itself finds meaning. Black cloak enthusiasts have been running their own salons in this way for a long time. Support has often come from the government or associations.

“Have you decided which area you will be moving to next month?”

“Yes, I’m thinking of sending a dispatch this way.”

“Well, the terrain here is rough. It’s an area where monsters often appear, so it would be best if you cooperate with us. I’ll send you a list of hunters within a day or two.”

“Thank you always.”

Among these salon members, there were many hunters, but there were also many civilians. In order to operate in dangerous outdoor environments, a large number of hunters was essential. The members who were dispatched also had to have above-average physical strength and stamina.

Still, there were many members who were interested.

“I heard that you are putting together a list of dispatched personnel this time….”

“Since the association supports many hunters, it seems that non-awakened members will also be able to participate.”

“Then, can you put me in too? I, I have also received training. Here is the certificate.”

“Well… If you’ve completed the course with these grades, then you should be able to do it. If you put your name on the list, I’ll check and contact you with the results.”

There weren't many opportunities like this. Usually, the unawakened couldn't operate in the unreconstructed areas. Nevertheless, these salons and associations often had these moments through collaboration.

It was because several conditions came together. In particular, the most influential factor was the active support of generous members. Among them, there were many who had power and a wide network of connections.

The results of the opportunity created that way weren't too bad either.

“I never thought there would be people living in hiding here.”

“When I see things like this, I feel like it hasn’t even been 100 years since the great disaster ended.”

“But how dangerous is it to live in a place like this….”

Throughout the wilderness, there were people who had fled during the Great Calamity and were living in hiding. Members who visited the village to help clear out monsters or for maintenance sometimes encountered such people.

At such times, the association also formally conveyed its gratitude and rewards. It was a response to the association and the government doing or helping with the work that they should have done. The members could not help but feel proud of it.

“It feels like I’m doing something meaningful.”

“These days, I’ve been greeting more neighbors….”

It was that kind of group.

To them, the Black Cloak was not only the most beautiful piece of art in the world, but also a god to be worshipped. Recently, it was recognized as an official religion, and their sense of belonging only grew stronger.

For some reason, they also followed the Black Cloak's tendencies.

"What is it?"

“Ah, the side dishes I’ll be delivering to the family I’m visiting this time….”

“What, can you tell me that? I didn’t hear anything like that. Aren’t gifts subject to regulations?”

“It’s true that gifts that are too extravagant are not allowed. However, food that is not considered luxury goods is not subject to regulation. There is no problem in giving as much as you want to eat.”

“Well, that’s true….”

Of course, if you give them too much food, there could be problems. But that kind of thought didn't even exist in the members' heads. There's no harm in eating happily.

Some people have even objectified these members and themselves.

'I guess they all want to turn people into pigs.'

'Happy pig… .'

'Anyway, it's a good thing if someone enjoys eating it.'

'When you're full, the world looks more beautiful.'

There was no pointing out or refuting anything apart from objectification.

It was common for believers to follow their gods. If you think about how believers of the sun goddess were bright and had a strong presence, and believers of the moon were particularly quiet and cool, the answer was easy to come up with.

One day, they noticed the existence of 'color'.

“…What is that?”

“The sky….”

Members who had been dispatched to the provinces looked up at the night sky.

“The sky shows the way.”

It started with 'sky blue'.

In the city full of gray walls, you could see the shape of waves swaying like a mermaid. In the wooded area, there were deer blooming in a different brown each, and in the place of the unfortunate death, a purple jewel came out of a white frame and guided the dead.

It didn't take long for them to figure out that they were the Black Cloak's Apostles.

"…awesome."

“As expected, the portrait is that of the Black Cloak.”

“Is the essence ultimately a painting?”

“But it is also divinity, the divinity of the sun.”

“Because it’s a picture, it can be anything.”

“Either way, it’s so romantic.”

The members felt proud of the uniqueness and artistry of the gods I served.

“Where can one worship such a beautiful god?”

“How merciful, I never thought you would love humans so much….”

“I can feel how much effort you put into making it meet human standards.”

Some even figured out the truth within it.

“I never thought I would see such a sight on Earth, not in his work. Look here, do you see a mermaid trapped inside this gray wall? I think this is the creature that used to disturb the seas of Korea.”

“Look at the sky. It’s gently swaying like the surface of the sea. The clouds above look like a school of fish in the sea. Even living birds sometimes look at the sky of Earth passing by, and I wonder why they feel the same way when they look at the artwork….”

Someone else pointed to another area.

“The hunter I support went to the ‘Dream Park’ last time. He was one of the last survivors. I heard a lot of interesting stories from him. That deer, it looks like the creature in the story, right?”

“I’ve heard the story about the amusement park. I have many friends in the association. I don’t know who the purple one symbolizes exactly, but seeing as it’s often depicted as a large male figure… I think it might be an ancient ghost.”

And then someone else even brought up a completely new story.

“Then does that mean that Sergio Hunter, the Apostle of the Black Cloak, is also in charge of one color?”

“I wonder what happened to the disappeared divine wrath… This is really interesting.”

There were some people who couldn't fit in here.

“…….”

“…Oh, something feels unfamiliar….”

“They were originally like that.”

“Is that culture?”

“I forgot, but you were first-class citizens, that’s right.”

“I completely forgot about that too.”

Among the enthusiasts, the first-class citizens all participated in the gathering 'to appreciate and interact with Black Cloak's works.' Those people were inexplicably ecstatic when they got a glimpse of Black Cloak's palette.

Most second-class citizens didn't go that far. They were just thrilled by the work, and in a way, they felt reassured. They could see where the power of the black cloak was reaching and how it was being used.

“In the past, such special miracles only occurred within his works.”

“Is your influence growing? I think it’s right for you to protect the Earth.”

“Well, I think you’re telling me something more than that. If you look at this big picture.”

“You hold me so affectionately… There really is no place as comfortable as this.”

Some people were even jealous.

“Is that the closest form of hell to the Black Cloak?”

“It could be heaven.”

“It could be hell or heaven. It depends on your perspective.”

“I want to be in his palette too….”

“It’s a dangerous idea, but I understand that you might want to have it.”

"me too."

It was a new form of afterlife.

The fact that each divinity holds a different afterlife was already known during the Great Calamity when the religious world of Earth was destroyed. It was an issue that caused quite a stir when it was revealed, and it was one of the areas that the government and associations first addressed.

I already know that there is an afterlife for humans in Black Cloak… .

"…Can only non-humans climb onto his palette?"

"Rather than that, I think you should select someone who has their own distinct color. Above all, seeing as there is a mermaid, it could mean punishment rather than a simple afterlife."

"Well, if I were to be used as his paint for the rest of my life, it would be far from the peace I could enjoy after death. Even in the same afterlife, it would definitely feel different."

"But, um…."

The member, who tried hard to shake off his regret, soon said, "Ah."

"If we do well, wouldn't our president be able to do it?"

"Since you are so active and do so many things, I have high hopes for you."

"He is truly a great man."

The members agreed.

"You act like you're going to die if it's not today."

I rush into every activity as if it were my last chance in life.

"Actually, that's not wrong, is it?"

“You created this salon with the intention of changing the world….”

“He is a person with very big ambitions.”

The members laughed and said it as a joke.

“If it’s him, I might actually get to have a one-on-one meeting with Black Cloak.”

“Aren’t you really going to become a bishop?”

They didn't know that the chairman was actually accomplishing both.

* * *

Name, Canary.

She is the president of the so-called 'Black Cloak Enthusiasts' and has a past as one of the original Carnation Children. Her unique name is derived from 'Coal Mine Canary'.

She is often dragged into dangerous dungeons involving diseases or poisons, and acts as a meat shield that measures the danger with her entire body. Even after she grew into an adult, she never changed her name.

“…….”

To not forget the cruelty of this world and to change it even a little.

“…Uh, uh uh….”

“Mr. Canary.”

She met the god I worship today.

“Have fun.”

The black portrait handed a small bird to the canary.

“Thank you for your help.”

“…Ah, over there.”

“I affirm your will.”

So the canary made a little friend.

“…….”

“Beep beep.”

“Oh, what is it? It’s cute.”

It was a water bird fluttering its wings carrying a lot of yellow flowers.

* * *

And Yoo Seong-un visited the gallery.

“Geoya.”

“Yes, I am listening.”

“You said you would give a water bird to the person you chose as the leader.”

“Why on earth are there such rumors?”

“Then why did you give the water bird to Mr. Canary?”

The portrait spoke proudly.

“I played hard instead of him and gave him a gift.”

“This is crazy, who made our portraits so introverted?”

“I’m a bit shy.”

“In the end, it turns out that it was you who made him the leader.”

“He is not a cult leader, he is the chairman. I did not make him that way. He was originally that way.”

“Isn’t that actually it?”

“He was an ideal leader, and now I am free.”

Geo was very proud.

Don't invite me to that noisy, extravagant party.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (293)

293

Episode 293

Geo rested for a while after that.

“What the hell are you doing in that portrait?”

“I am eating.”

“What else?”

“Take a nap.”

“Other than that…?”

“I draw a picture.”

"oh."

Yoo Seong-un, who came to see me because he was worried about the portrait, asked.

“What are you drawing?”

“I draw many different things, but I mostly draw things to eat.”

“I’m going crazy.”

How much more do you plan on eating there?

“Isn’t there already enough food for your portrait? Nana Juhyun has already airlifted most of the ingredients. But there are more things that are worth drawing….”

“I looked it up and found out that chickpeas are extinct on Earth.”

“So you’re drawing extinct ingredients yourself in order to eat them? Am I understanding this correctly, now?”

“You understand well.”

“That, that’s what the heck….”

Yoo Seong-un hesitated.

“…Can I go and look around?”

“I always welcome your visit.”

The extinct plants of the Earth that the source is restoring. Even though he was a curator who was paid a salary and paid taxes, he couldn't help but feel tempted. In the end, he visited the portrait and left.

In his hands he held a bag of freshly harvested chickpeas.

“I don’t think chickpeas should originally be this big.”

“I tried to grow the chickpeas in a form close to my memory, but it wasn’t easy. But when I first drew them, they were small.”

“I guess it would be difficult for a fragile plant to overcome your strong portrait….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled faintly at the chickpea that had grown as big as a baby's fist.

“Hmm, I should give some to Joohyun too.”

“You look happy.”

That evening, Joo-hyun, who had received the portrait of a chickpea, called out to Geo.

“Mr. Geo, are you there?”

“Yes, you called me?”

“Yes, I called. I’m glad I was able to summon it even with my poor drawing skills.”

“Your drawing skills are not bad at all.”

Is he really a former researcher of the association? Joo-hyun drew a picture of him exactly as he really was. Thanks to him, Geo, who was making an egg sandwich, was able to be called out safely.

First, Geo handed over the sandwich wrapped in paper.

“I think this might be a good snack for you.”

“Oh, thank you.”

Joohyun, who obediently accepted the sandwich, was silent for a moment and then said.

“…It still doesn’t seem realistic to summon a god like this and receive a midnight snack.”

Sankalut, who had been wrapped around Juhyun's neck, slowly pulled his head out. Then, he bit into one of the sandwiches in Juhyun's hand and disappeared under Juhyun's hair.

Although his shoulders felt a little heavy, Joo-hyun ignored him because he seemed to be eating cleanly without spilling anything. And Geo also answered while ignoring the evil spirit's slight tantrum.

“I am an ordinary person.”

“And I’m Geo’s friend, I’ll appreciate the sandwich.”

“So why did you call me?”

“This afternoon, Yoo Seong-un gave me this.”

“These are the chickpeas I grew.”

“It’s because it’s so different from the chickpeas I know.”

"oh."

Geo was surprised but also happy.

“Do you know chickpeas?”

“Not just anyone can become a researcher at the association….”

“What qualifications are required?”

“You should know at least 70% of the extinct plants and animals on Earth, right?”

Chickpeas were one of them.

“First of all, I have been involved in many restoration projects. I also know that chickpeas were originally much smaller than this. They are a highly nutritious food, rich in protein and fiber, and contain many vitamins and minerals… I have also read that they were popular as a diet food before the Great Disaster because of their many health benefits.”

Geo was amazed.

“I don’t know that far ahead.”

“Actually, I know it because I memorized it.”

anyway.

“Why did this guy become like this?”

“As you can imagine, the plants I grow tend to be larger than average, so these chickpeas were also larger. And there was nothing I could do about it.”

“You look unusually helpless….”

Joohyun's friend looked a little disappointed.

“Well, so… if you ask why I called Mr. Geo….”

Joohyun, who had been hesitating, asked.

“Can you recreate extinct plants and animals on Earth?”

“Yes.”

“Could you help restore the Earth’s ecosystem?”

“That’s difficult.”

“I guess so.”

Joohyun knew too.

“The Earth has changed so much, and the already extinct plants and animals won’t be able to adapt to this new ecosystem. I knew what the answer would be, but… I asked just in case.”

“Do you want to restore the Earth?”

“It was with that kind of heart that I once participated in a restoration project.”

It's not that they didn't try to return the Earth to its original safe environment. They poured all their resources into it, including the association and the government. However, they could only confirm that the Earth, which had already been imbued with mysterious power, could not be returned.

Joohyun felt a little disappointed.

“Of course, I don’t think the current ecosystem is all that bad, but it’s not a very safe world for a weak, unawakened person like me to live in. Especially since I remember the time before the great disaster.”

“You want the world to be a safer place.”

“I wonder where the world has stabilized to this extent, but I still feel greedy. So I was tempted for a moment, wondering if Geo-ssi could provide me with a clue. But it’s not something that can be left to just one person.”

That wasn't right. How confused would people be if the world was suddenly turned upside down by one person? Joo-hyun continued with a slightly embarrassed expression.

“Just a little, uh….”

“I am listening.”

“…I couldn’t control my excitement, so I sang.”

“I understand that sometimes that happens.”

Geo nodded.

“Is there anything else you would like to eat?”

“I think the sandwich you gave me today will be enough.”

“Is a sandwich enough?”

“I guess 10 sandwiches would be enough, right?”

“Is it bad to eat a lot?”

“It’s late, and my stomach isn’t that big….”

“Mr. San has already eaten four.”

“…When did you last eat like this?”

I was aware that my hands were becoming lighter and lighter.

“Stop eating, Mr. San. How much weight are you trying to put on my shoulders?”

“I am not heavy.”

“That may be true in practice, but I feel heavy-hearted.”

“It's a joke.”

The red snake ate exactly five and then stopped eating.

“It’s delicious.”

“Because it’s Geo’s work.”

I had no doubts.

“Oh, by the way… I heard there’s going to be a parade soon.”

“I heard that story too.”

Geo put his hand on his chin.

“Is it a parade held at a collection center?”

“Yes, it was originally supposed to be an event held in early spring, but it was postponed due to the ‘Dream Park’. But it doesn’t mean it won’t be held this year, so I think they’re trying to finish it before the weather gets too hot.”

“What kind of event is it exactly?”

“It’s an event where the curators and their works decorate the streets… brilliantly.”

Personally, Joo Hyun didn't like the event that much. It's an event with relatively harmless works, but what if a big accident happens? Then, public sentiment will become hostile.

“I understand that the exact composition changes from time to time. There are also works that are subject to availability depending on the date and weather.”

“I understand.”

“Since Mr. Geo is strictly speaking a member of the collection, I received an inquiry asking if he would be interested in participating. I was planning to organize the exact situation and report in writing tomorrow… Since this has come to pass.”

“…….”

“…Oh, that’s unexpected. Are you worried?”

Joohyun tilted his head.

“I thought you would naturally reject me since you’ve been extremely inactive lately. I heard you haven’t been to the collection store much lately, so I thought you were still recovering.”

“Yes, I am recovering.”

But this was interesting.

“Meaningful processions are also events that were often performed in temples.”

“That is… you are speaking as Mr. Giovanni, right?”

“It would be a shame to miss such an exciting event.”

“This would be Mr. Argio’s opinion.”

“But I’m also tired.”

“This is Sergio.”

Joohyun laughed softly.

“That’s easy to understand.”

“I am happy to bring a smile to you, my dear.”

Geo surprisingly agreed.

“Please tell them I’m participating.”

So the collection office was put on emergency alert.

* * *

The parade at the collection center was famous.

“It’s a little late this year.”

“That could be because it was so noisy.”

“So I thought I wouldn’t do it, but I ended up doing it.”

“It’s a collection.”

This was because it was a gathering of true my-way people of this era.

The history of the Collector's Parade is quite old. Guild leader Bisabal had been holding large and small performances with his works even before the Collector's Parade was built. Even in a time when there were no proper laws, it was a large-scale illegal event.

And then they finally made it legal with money.

“Who is attending this event?”

“I think I need to look at some pamphlets.”

There were still opinions like, "What are you doing so dangerously?" but fortunately, there have never been any accidents. Some people even responded by saying, "Why would a collector use his good eyes for something like that?"

Anyway, people living in the city were used to the parade of collectors. They received pamphlets from promotional robots roaming the streets, looking for familiar or new faces.

“Ah, Tosun is coming out.”

“Isn’t Tosuni cute….”

“This time, he comes with a caregiver as a set.”

“I received flowers last time, do you remember?”

“I fixed your clothes for you.”

“I think this is my first time seeing this person. Is that right?”

“Oh, I see. It says here that this is your first performance.”

“Your specialty is… juggling? That sounds fun.”

The pamphlet contained photos of the participating works and the curators in charge, along with brief descriptions of them. Citizens who had received advance notice even took vacation days to fully enjoy the designated dates.

“I’m taking annual leave.”

“Are you crazy?”

“Sergio Hunter is coming.”

“Please live in reality….”

“I have lived for today.”

Some people came to see the curator, not the artwork. Since the collectors are a guild and a financial investment company, there are not many external events, so it was difficult to attract collectors.

For some people, the event where a curator who doesn't even show his face often comes out on the streets was like a drop of rain in a drought. Reporters are in a similar situation, so the streets become noisy around this time.

“Ah… the collector….”

“…개새끼들 진짜….”

Of course, it's not just because I like it.

“Can’t we blow up the collector’s building?”

“I’d rather fly to Korea, Team Leader.”

“You crazy bastards, what are you going to keep releasing on the streets?”

The safety officers dispatched by the association were really fed up. From their perspective of having to prepare for and deal with all sorts of incidents and accidents, this was nothing short of crazy. It couldn't have been a good feeling.

But that doesn't mean I can openly oppose it.

“Team Leader, I heard that we received sponsorship from the collection center this time.”

“The era of fucking capitalism.”

Collectors have always created legal channels for money.

“This is why we have a guild leader.”

“I think so?”

“I know, fuck.”

In the first place, Bisabal was the one who became the guild leader for this. All the wealth and fame he had accumulated was for the legal enjoyment of this kind of crazy behavior. There was no one else who was truly crazy about dopamine.

And the event started at 6 am.

“These guys are real collectors….”

The streets were already bustling.

* * *

By the way, Justitia's guild leader, Seo Seo-hee, also went to watch this parade.

“It’s been a long time since I’ve been to the Visabal Guild Leader’s event.”

His close friend Jeong Hae-un was also there.

“So can I go home?”

“This event is a collaboration with Gyeongbokgung Palace.”

“Ha, I can already see the fairy tales… It’s so annoying….”

“We must protect the peace of the Earth, my friend.”

“Get out of here, fucking hell.”

They say it's a kind of undercover investigation, but I'm not sure.

“This time, Sergio Hunter will also be in the parade.”

“Ah, are you alba?..!!”

They didn't look like they had come to work.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (294)

294

Episode 294

The incident began three days before the parade.

“…A parade?”

"yes."

“Teacher?”

"yes."

“Why would you do something like that…?”

Seo Seo-hee, who was happily eating her bulgogi rice box lunch, received an unexpected notification from Sergio.

“I don’t know much about it, but were you by any chance a curator of a collection?”

“I'm doing that too.”

“How did you end up doing that job? Should I report you to the labor office?”

“Is there still a labor office?”

“It was a remark that made me feel like he was from the past. Aside from my friends, there weren't many people who agreed with my remarks at the Ministry of Labor."

Certainly there was no labor office in the world at that time.

"Instead, the association is doing that job."

"What doesn't the Association do?"

"You can think of them as taking charge of almost all the work because without them, our country would collapse. It's a shame, right? So please look at it kindly, we live in such a difficult way."

"I already find it pretty."

Kang Eun-seong, who was listening to their conversation from the secretary's seat, thought.

'I want to cover my ears.'

It was burdensome to see a 187cm tall, sturdy middle-aged man whining and calculatingly, and an even more sturdy young man talking like that. Even knowing the situation, it was burdensome to hear it.

Even when Kang Eun-seong quietly gave up, the story continued.

"I felt I couldn't not attend such an event."

"I didn't know you had this side to you, teacher."

"What kind of person did you think I was?"

"Um… Someone who likes quiet and is affectionate and soft-spoken?"

Crunch!

A mermaid tail burst out of Sergio's shadow and struck the floor.

"……."

“…You are too kind.”

“Did that mermaid just scold me?”

“They’re telling me to stop talking nonsense.”

"oh…."

Seo Seo-hee was a little embarrassed.

“Oh, isn’t that right…? You have a gentle image….”

Crash-!!!

“I think I would rather read a book alone than hang out with people….”

Thud thud thud thud thud-!!!

“I don’t know what happened between you two, but since I was at fault, could you please leave the floor alone? Our reception room floor was just laid.”

Sergio gently coaxed the mermaid tail into the shadow. The gray, rippling thing seemed to squeak, then disappeared. It seemed to have disappeared somewhere.

Seo Seo-hee laughed awkwardly because it looked like the child was crying.

“…I think I made a big mistake.”

“Of course, I am a gentle and kind priest who likes quiet.”

“I made a big mistake.”

It was a remark far removed from the gentle priest who liked to be quiet. Seo Seo-hee accepted it without knowing the nickname of 'the smiling tyrant of the sea village'. It was as if she had seen a side of something hidden behind the benevolent smile.

“So what exactly are your roles? I understand that the collection event starts at dawn. There are booths selling snacks, promotional roles, and security personnel…”

“I’m also in charge of the booth selling snacks.”

“I think sometimes people take on two roles like that. But does that mean you’ll be taking on other roles in this parade as well? Am I right in thinking about that?”

“That's right.”

Sergio said confidently.

“Come and see.”

“What on earth have you prepared that makes you so confident?”

“I’ve always been confident.”

“I know that even without you saying it….”

Usually, people who lack confidence wouldn't pack lunch for six floors every day. And to a guild they had no special connection with. And to the guild leader of that place, too.

And Sergio gave me a pamphlet.

“Here I am.”

“Ah, here….”

Seo Seo-hee was silent for a moment.

“……?”

“Yes, go ahead. I’m listening.”

“If my eyes are not deceiving, are these water birds?”

“It’s a corps of water birds.”

"aha…."

Seo Seo-hee slowly nodded her head.

“It is time to gradually change Korea.”

“Why do you say things like Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“Isn’t this the one? Noah’s Ark? Swept away by water?”

“I’m not that bad.”

“I don’t know why you’re feeling embarrassed, but I understand.”

“Thank you for the compliment.”

Anyway, Sergio invited my student.

“If you come and play, I’ll play with you.”

“Oh… I appreciate that, but… Am I too old for that?”

“Are you talking to me?”

"sorry."

Seo Seo-hee immediately apologized, thinking that it might sound like she was attacking her teacher and elders. Fortunately, Sergio let it go. Kang Eun-seong, who had been listening to their conversation, collapsed from exhaustion.

And Sergio invited other students too.

“If you have time, bring Haeun too.”

“Oh, are you bringing it? More specifically, Haeun? Why Haeun of all people?”

“Yes, that’s right. Guild leader Jeong Hae-un.”

“Now, don’t pretend to distance yourself by calling me by my nickname. Is there a reason?”

“Hmm, well.”

Sergio said plainly.

“If my guess is correct, the student who will be making the most absurd mistakes with my appearance is Haeun.”

"…oh…."

“That friend, Jeong Hae-un, wasn’t such a brave student. I wanted to talk to him before he made up his own mind and caused trouble.”

“…….”

“Am I wrong?”

Seo Seo-hee promised to drag him along quietly.

* * *

That's how I was dragged in.

“Whose side are you really on?”

“On the side of the Earth.”

“I guess I’m not on Earth’s side? Am I an alien from some remote planet?”

“Let’s not have the narrow-minded idea that just because they’re aliens, they’re not on Earth’s side.”

“Fuck, aliens are on our side, I’m really going crazy. Why are you like this?”

Seo Seo-hee smiled faintly at Jeong Hae-woon’s grumbling.

“You were digging, right?”

“So why are you yelling at me?”

“You’re the only one who’ll take my shit, Jeong Hae-woon.”

“It was a truly creepy statement in so many ways.”

“Isn’t it great?”

“You son of a bitch.”

Seo Seo-hee was proud of Jeong Hae-un who was acting all angry.

“Still, it’s nice to see that face after such a long time.”

“I felt so awkward.”

After a long time, Jeong Hae-un returned to his youthful appearance.

“But, well, yeah. I made it so that you wouldn’t recognize me anyway, so I wondered what use it would be to put a few wrinkles on it… My face needs to be loose like this sometimes.”

That was the reason why they could be out on the streets so clearly, to the point where it was hard to call them mere celebrities. The two came out with a perception-impairing spell. They were symbols of eternity, so in the end, they needed to rest like this.

No, actually, they are people who need a break and have to work because the Earth is so dangerous. But I had to assume that they intentionally took some time off because of the situation.

“Did you really need to come out this early?”

“Uh… I heard that Sergio Hunter is coming in to sell in the morning.”

“Fuck, I really can’t go back.”

“Yeah, I already promised. I can’t go back.”

“Boggiya, ah ....”

He couldn't break his promise with Shinbi. It was the same even if he wasn't the person who was there. Jeong Hae-woon, who knew Shinbi's danger, let out a cry and was dragged away obediently.

And then we ran into Sergio Hunter, who skillfully makes and sells cube steaks.

“…….”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon was silent for a moment.

“…Excuse me, what are you selling now, sir?”

“Oh, you’re already calling me teacher? I didn’t expect that, but it’s a little touching.”

“No, the teacher I’m talking about isn’t that teacher. Anyway, what are you selling right now?”

“We are selling beef cube steaks.”

“I’m sorry, but not all cows are the same, and not all meat is the same, right?”

This crazy mystery was selling an unknown mystery.

“Did the collector allow this?”

“It’s delicious and clean.”

“I told you that’s not the problem?”

“Are you from the Food and Drug Administration?”

“Are you going crazy?”

He seriously thought about turning this event upside down.

However, Jung Hae-woon and Seo Seo-hee each received a cube steak and were kicked out. It was because there were too many people behind them. Jung Hae-woon finally acknowledged the safety of something like food after he took Seo Seo-hee's and ate it.

“Ah, it is indeed food….”

“Why are you eating mine?”

“You piece of shit, Lady Gimi.”

“Then eat yours now.”

“Why would someone with a lot of money feel bad about it?”

Surprisingly, this was real food.

‘… Was it because the mystery was so thick that I didn’t realize it was food? Or was it really so close to food that I couldn’t tell the difference? Either way, it doesn’t seem to be harmful to the body… .’

There were no common mistakes that a mystery would make. It didn't seem like eating it would drag you into another dimension or turn you into something other than a human. After all, it was just 'food'.

It was so refined.

‘This is the first time I’ve seen a mystery with this level of control…’

Aside from the unexpected feeling, I felt a little relieved.

“…It’s delicious.”

“How about seeing it in person?”

“I thought it was fortunate that your eyeballs hadn’t become slits yet.”

“Just because you use pretty words doesn’t mean the content will become pretty, right, Mr. Jeong Hae-un?”

“Yeah, I guess I’m still a long way from being trash….”

“When I retire, who will take over for me?”

“First of all, it’s not me.”

“Anyway….”

Seo Seo-hee asked, clicking her tongue.

“So, what if you see it for yourself?”

“Amazing.”

Jeong Hae-woon frowned.

“Because you’re so experienced.”

That was the most surprising thing.

'How deep is your understanding of humanity?'

Oh, of course, there was a great sense of discomfort. If Jeong Hae-woon felt this way, then ordinary people would have thought, 'Is this really a human?' But that's why this situation was even more surprising.

Even with such a sense of discomfort, he was able to blend in well with humans. A mysterious being selling street food, I'm speechless. If humans have such a high level of understanding and the rules they have are relatively harmless...

'… The collectors won't try to cross the line anyway. Even though that old man from Bisabal is not respectful, he's not a scumbag to the extent of destroying the Earth. They'll probably take at least the bare minimum.'

In that case, I thought it would be okay to wait and see for a bit.

“I thought, ‘Can’t you just watch for a bit?’”

“It was very accurate.”

Jeong Hae-woon nodded.

“Isn’t it time for us to break up?”

“Have you ever thought about who would be hurt?”

“The world needs to know this about you.”

“Who is talking?”

“…Anyway, okay.”

He clicked his tongue.

“I know what you want to show me.”

That damn 'Sergio Hunter' said it all with one funny look.

A high level of understanding of humans, enough to make and sell street food. A skill that disguises noticeable discomfort as the Hunter's intimidation. A skill that exploits the mystery of eating, and none of it causes any harm or confusion.

Jeong Hae-un had to admit that he was a gardener.

“At least I won’t make any mistakes.”

“The problem is when you do something intentionally.”

“You continue to trust in such a being.”

I knew that he would not accidentally bring disaster. But that was only a half-assed belief. No matter how much I thought about it, there was no guarantee that the mysterious being would not intentionally bring about disaster.

“Why do you believe that?”

Because he's that damn 'teacher'?

“Teacher, yes. Teacher… the appearance is nice.”

“Do you know you’re picking up a bad habit again?”

“You may say he was a teacher, but he was just a worker. He was not a family member or anything, he was just a stranger. That’s why we forgot him like this. If it was such a precious memory, why did we make that decision?”

“The Earth may have been that precious.”

“Fuck, you’re talking nonsense. Where on earth would I have such a sense of chivalry?”

Jeong Hae-woon knew himself well. He was different from Seo Seo-hee, the model student who was loved by all the teachers. He was a delinquent who had started drinking and smoking in middle school. He hated everything in the world, adults were untrustworthy, and everything just annoyed him.

“You know it too.”

He furrowed his brow.

“You are the only ones I have.”

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee nodded.

“I’m sorry, but it’s burdensome.”

“You fucking punk.”

“It’s not like I haven’t thought about what you did.”

“So… what’s your conclusion?”

“There must have been something like that?”

He also thought that Jeong Hae-woon's words were right.

At that time, Jeong Hae-un did not have as much free time as he does now. It was not just his story. They were wary of and loathed everything in the world except for their friends.

There was no way that he would have agreed to forget his precious memories in order to 'save the world'.

“…Yeah, that can’t be true.”

Seo Seo-hee also admitted it. But that's why the answer came out.

“If I hadn’t done that, it would have been an unbearable situation.”

“What exactly is the situation?”

“One of us might have been seriously injured, or we might have reached a point where nothing could be undone. I don’t think we were all that altruistic or decent people back then.”

“Are you saying that in the end we made that decision because of our selfishness?”

Jeong Hae-woon smiled brightly.

“So, ‘Teacher’ was used for our selfishness, right?”

“That’s why I always feel sorry.”

“That’s why I can’t believe it even more.”

Soon his face becomes distorted.

“How can we be sure that we did not do anything wrong to the ‘Teacher’? No, did he die because of us? How can we say that the purpose of that being is not revenge?”

“If we get angry about that and disaster comes, we should prepare to deal with it separately from our sins. There are not many people on Earth who can stop such a mystery. Even if it is ungrateful, what can we do?”

Seo Seo-hee picked up a piece of steak with her fork.

“But aren’t you curious?”

“It already sounds like nonsense, but let’s hear it once.”

“What if we had remembered ‘Teacher’ until the end?”

“Well….”

“What kind of adults will we become?”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-un did not answer.

Even after emptying that little paper plate, it took a long time.

* * *

Jeong Hae-woon's favorite food was beef cube steak.

In that humble, slovenly household, eating beef was rare. But Jeong Hae-woon didn’t have the sophistication to cut it nicely and eat it. So, meat dishes that he could stab and put in his mouth. A dish that looked good, tasted good, and had an even better texture… .

“…….”

It is thick in size and has a strong peppery flavor.

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon thought he discovered that taste after he became an adult.

He said that he only realized it when the world became a little more stable, when he had enough money to eat meat to his heart's content, and when his life was worth it.

But I couldn't remember exactly when it started.

"hmm…."

Jeong Hae-woon looked down at the empty paper plate.

“…It’s okay.”

“Have you eaten everything?”

"huh."

It just happened.

I really meant it was delicious.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (295)

295

Episode 295

Jeong Hae-un was an unstable person.

He knew it himself. He hated and distrusted many things. Even now that he has become a 'symbol of eternity', his disposition has not changed, although there are exceptions to this.

To be wary of not only people, but also all beings with which it can interact.

Because of that kind of person, Jeong Hae-woon couldn't trust 'Teacher'.

“…….”

“Nice to meet you, Hunter Jeong Hae-un.”

Jeong Hae-woon smiled brightly as he looked at the pure white priest wearing a black cloak.

“You seem to have the aura of an evil spirit when you start a conversation with lies.”

“I’m glad you look healthy.”

“Is this how you normally have trouble communicating?”

That was definitely the origin of the being. It seemed like they were communicating, but this wasn't real communication. The other person was just a mystery imitating a human. A mystery with a lot of information value.

'It's no different from artificial intelligence that moves as coded.'

So, it would not be influenced by Jeong Hae-un's own words. That is why he only gives such absurd answers. Getting an answer from the other person is also clearly considered 'influencing'.

'I think the curator of the collection in charge of this existence is currently named Yoo Seong-un.'

I thought I should contact you later when I had time.

“Um, well….”

Jeong Hae-woon maintained a smooth smile.

“I heard that my brother wanted to see me so badly. Is that right?”

“Oh, it’s gross.”

“…….”

No matter what, I didn't expect this.

“…I guess I heard something wrong?”

“…I’m sorry, did that hurt? I didn’t mean to.”

“I wasn’t particularly hurt.”

No, honestly, it was a bit unpleasant.

'It is rare for the existence of the source to be considered disgusting to humans.'

It may be because there are few people with the cognitive ability to feel emotions, but yes, I felt bad. Such unexpected reactions were just annoying.

“Can I ask why you said it was disgusting?”

“…….”

Sergio, who was looking at Jeong Hae-woon with blue eyes, smiled kindly.

“I will respect you.”

"oh…."

Jeong Hae-woon was moved to tears.

'That's the line I should be saying.'

That kind gaze that seemed to say, 'I can understand everything'. It was hard to laugh it off, perhaps because the other person was the other person. Perhaps this too could be influenced by forgotten memories.

And it wasn't all that pleasant for the gardener either. He was the one who had to understand and respect the source of all the disasters that had been causing the Earth.

“…Even if you don’t respect me, I can do well on my own.”

“Are you now urging me to be rude and disrespectful to my elders? I really didn’t know that Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un would be someone who lacks even the most basic sense of manners.”

“Ah, why are you so good at talking? Are you a god? No, even gods don’t talk this well. I haven’t seen Sergio Hunter like that either, but you seem to have a talent for provocation.”

“I was speaking the truth, and if you were provoked by it, doesn’t that mean that Hunter Jeong Hae-woon himself has more antisocial tendencies in his personality and way of thinking than in mine?”

“Did you call me to fight?”

Seo Seo-hee grabbed Jeong Hae-woon's shoulder, who was on the verge of collapse.

“If you make a fuss here, you know the collector will file a claim.”

“Whose side are you on?”

“Didn’t I always say I’m on the side of the Earth?”

“Then I am an alien.”

At that moment, a deep gaze struck me.

“…….”

“…What is it?”

"pup?"

“No, he’s right now….”

“You have a foul mouth.”

“Why do I feel like I’m getting in trouble?”

“Did you hope that you wouldn’t get in trouble for insulting your friend in front of others?”

“What, no, ha.”

The smile disappeared from Jeong Hae-woon's face and he became irritated. He felt his pride, which had been dulled by social life, rising up as he was treated like a brat by Shinbi, whom he barely knew.

“What are you saying now…!”

That's why I was about to get annoyed.

“…….”

“What, what are you giving me…!”

“…….”

“…Uh, now…!”

“…….”

"…membrane…."

A heavy silence fell.

“…….”

“…….”

After a while, Jeong Hae-woon smiled again.

“What did I just say?”

And Geo laughed too.

“This is the way of life of an adult who has become jaded by society.”

“Thank you very much for your generous compliments, teacher.”

“It’s a wonderful growth.”

“Aha, is that so?”

I don't know what it was, but I had a bad feeling.

'Why did I get goosebumps for a moment?'

It wasn't a life-threatening situation. If it was something like that, there's no way Jeong Hae-woon wouldn't have noticed, and above all, there's no way Seo Seo-hee would have stayed still.

But Seo Seo-hee just looked at Jeong Hae-woon with eyes filled with longing.

That's how Jeong Hae-woon realized.

'I must have been an overwhelming force before I lost my memory.'

There were times like this often. Even though it was a relationship that had been forgotten through a 'promise', there were times when a familiar reaction would come up in the body or soul. Having experienced it several times, Jeong Hae-woon was able to realize his own situation.

Of course, it wasn't a situation where the answer would come out even if he realized it. Jung Hae-woon wasn't a good kid who would treat him like an adult or a teacher. He felt a slight confusion.

‘I was overwhelmingly superior to the teacher…?’

What part of it did you give in to?

“…What should I call Sergio Hunter?”

“I think you can just call me Sergio Hunter like you are now.”

“This friend, Seo Seo-hee, calls me teacher.”

“That’s because he wanted to sing it himself.”

“I understand what you mean.”

At least it didn't seem like the type of mystery that forced something on me.

'He has a gentle personality and isn't the violent type.'

It would have been difficult to control Jeong Hae-un with something as simple as violence. He had been beaten so much at home that he had become immune to that kind of oppression.

So then, in which part?

'... When a human soul is corrupted and becomes a being of origin, it often follows the form it had in its previous life. So, in what way did it come to submit to such a weak person?'

Were you really trained to eat?

"……."

"Why do you look at me like that?"

"…You like being given food, right?"

"Yes, that's right."

"I see, that's what happened."

I found the answer.

'I guess you were going to eat it.'

It was something that was lured into being eaten.

If that's the case, then it makes sense. I just ate it and I know that Sergio Hunter's cooking was real. If a kind adult made a delicious meal, Jeong Hae-woon at that time would have had no choice but to fall for it.

'But now I'm not the same person I was back then.'

Jeong Hae-woon smiled confidently.

“You seem to think that you can tempt me with food, but you are very mistaken, Sergio Hunter. Even though I look like this, I am still one of the adults on Earth, so I will not be swayed by such temptations.”

“If he was tempted by just a cube steak, wouldn’t that mean that Jeong Hae-woon was hungry?”

“I wasn’t hungry. Of course it was delicious, but it wasn’t enough to shake me up. And are you ignoring the cube steak right now? It’s not like you put the word ‘mere’ in front of food. More importantly, if you look at it practically, aren’t I the more mature one now?”

“Yes, of course.”

Sergio Hunter laughed heartily.

“Senior.”

“…….”

It gave me goosebumps.

“…Oh, wait a minute….”

“Are you okay, senior? Is there anything I can help you with?”

“Oh, wait a minute.”

How can you make me feel so discouraged every time you say something like this?

'How long have you been serving and serving me that you have such a strong rejection reaction?'

Jeong Hae-woon tried to calm down the goosebumps that had formed on his arms. He was starting to feel burdened by this Sergio. He took a step back.

“I think we need some distance, don’t you think?”

“Of course I thought so too.”

Sergio Hunter nodded obediently.

“Are you eating well?”

“I eat at least one meal a day without fail.”

“One meal?”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon corrected what I said.

“Can I increase it to three meals?”

“That’s great.”

“What kind of rules are these?”

“I know it’s not uncommon to want to eat well.”

“Sergio Hunter, you’re on a different scale from them, aren’t you?”

It was a being of such weight that it was thought to have been involved in the Earth's system. The rule that such a being demanded was merely 'eat three meals a day', something that junior gardeners would dismiss as a joke if they heard it.

And Jeong Hae-un admitted it, albeit belatedly.

“…Haaaah….”

It's been a while since I dried it.

'It's too late to deny it was a fraud now.'

I will admit that we had a good relationship in the past. I can't remember it, so I don't have any evidence, but I couldn't just ignore it after coming this far. Regardless of the exact incident, it must have been a good relationship and time.

But as I always thought, that was all.

“…Sergio Hunter.”

“Yes, I am listening.”

“Thanks to you, I had a good meal.”

Jeong Hae-woon nodded.

“It really suits my taste. When that little Seo Seo-hee was talking about galbi-jjim and lunch boxes, I thought it was just some skill or mystery, but this wasn’t at that level. It was just that the Hunter knew my taste well and took care of it.”

As a gardener, I could feel the difference more clearly.

“So now you know what a good ‘teacher’ you were to us. I know, I know….”

“Is it hard?”

“…….”

“The bad habit I worked so hard to fix has come back.”

The face of 'Sergio' who said that was blunt. It was a heavy face without even a hint of smile.

“I know what you're talking about.”

Two eyes staring at me. A cold voice, calm and composed like a corpse.

“To you, I am nothing more than a foreign substance that has intruded into your world, claiming to exist when I never existed. I am also a harmful organism that has appeared on this dangerous Earth that you have been working so hard to nurture with all your might. You cannot know my purpose, and even if you did, nothing would change, and you have never felt the desire to do so in the first place.”

A look that looks down as if teaching.

“Because I am a ‘non-existent being.’”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon kept his mouth shut for a while, then opened it.

“…What will you do then?”

“Nothing changes.”

He was like a teacher teaching very basic facts.

“I wanted to let you know because I thought you didn’t know.”

Calm words continue in a soft tone.

“It doesn’t matter who I was or what happened to me before. You’ve grown up too much to hold on to the past.”

"so?"

“Don’t worry. You don’t have to. Whatever happened in the past is gone now, so don’t even think about it. Look at me now and judge me. What kind of person do I look like to you?”

“Time bomb.”

“So are you going to kill me? Seal me away like you would with the demons? Or are you going to fight the collector to prevent me from living in society any longer?”

“I dare not… I cannot stop a mystery like you.”

Although some people often think otherwise, Jeong Hae-un was ultimately human. He was neither omniscient nor omnipotent. He was simply the first gardener on Earth, had accumulated a lot of experience, and thus knew how to coexist.

In the end, that was what Jung Hae-woon was doing. Coordinating so that they could live together. Finding as many ways as possible. How could Jung Hae-woon, who was like that, confine and suppress 'Sergio Hunter'?

“It’s impossible.”

That's why he was scared. Jeong Hae-woon was always afraid of mystery. Those damn time bombs. A dirty and deadly bunch that had to give in a thousand times before he could get one concession.

'And this existence is added.'

I felt a strange sense of urgency.

It is alive and dead at the same time. Whether in the sun or hidden in the shadow, the size of the pupil does not change, and sometimes in the shadow, all kinds of life, death, and mystery cry out. It can be as quiet as a vast desert or as noisy as a jungle.

'Humans, forests, life, sea, death, screams, deserts, love, fear, underground, affection, compassion, sky, anger, heaven and hell, waterless seas, warm thorn fields, affectionate coldness…'

This is a contradiction in itself. It is neither human nor human. We cannot know how many different breaths are contained in a single voice that is transmitted. We cannot know how many branches the voice is divided into and how many branches it is combined into.

My eyes hurt. My ears are throbbing. My tongue is burning. My nose is itchy. My skin is getting goosebumps and my heart is pounding. Human. Monster. Picture.

"……."

And back to humans.

"…You wouldn't want me to take your guard down by appearing in front of me in such a bizarre state, would you?"

"Is it very strange?"

"It's creepy. It's the uncanny valley. No, it's the perfect uncanny valley, which makes it even creepier. Do you know how I see you in my five senses right now? Do you know how many mysteries are entangled in you?"

"Yeah, that could be the case."

"Your reaction is so consistent. I can't believe it. But it's an uncomfortable and unsettling presence that I can't just sit back and watch. You're too dangerous. And you're trying to be harmless. So all I can do is be on guard."

"So what changes?"

He waved his hand and pointed to the noisy street beyond.

"I will continue to exist like this. Sometimes I will come out and have fun, and when I feel tired, I will go back to my paintings and rest. But I will also give gifts to the good people I like, sometimes have a meal with my friends, and fall asleep while painting. And then I will wake up."

Sergio withdrew his pale hand that had been pointing at the world.

"I will live the way I want, and you won't stop me."

“Unless you are a threat to the peace.”

“Yes, you should do that. If I disappeared and you became who you are now, then you should live like that. I affirm all that time.”

“What on earth do you want?”

“You have to remember, past relationships are completely unimportant in a situation like this.”

His pitch-black eyes met Jeong Hae-woon's.

“Live as if you have forgotten.”

“…Is that okay?”

“You want that too.”

Black eyes closed.

“I am always here.”

The conversation ended there.

* * *

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee, who had been watching Jeong Hae-woon, who was left behind after 'Sergio Hunter' left, called him.

“Have you sorted out your thoughts?”

“…What about you?”

“I've been sorted out for a long time.”

“With what.”

“I will treat that being as ‘teacher.’”

Seo Seo-hee shrugged slightly.

“Because it helps me and this peace.”

“You little rascal….”

“That’s not something you should be saying.”

“I see.”

Jeong Hae-woon leaned against the alley wall and had a cigarette in his mouth.

“…I will keep a close watch on the ‘Sergio Hunter’ for the rest of my life. I will not keep him close like you, nor will I intend to use him. I will simply treat him as a mystery and analyze him as I have done my whole life.”

That was the meaning of the gardener.

“I didn’t know you would be the first to bring it up, but we share the same opinion. No matter what happened in the past, if it’s time that’s already gone, we should live faithfully in the present.”

“You won’t regret it?”

“Isn’t that too extravagant of a thought? I can’t afford to hold on to a past that has been erased. My current life is too burdensome. Without the feelings and confirmation that remain from the relationship, it’s just a story of a stranger in the end.”

There was no time to linger while watching a sad movie.

“After all, it’s a story from another world.”

“Even though it could have been our world?”

“But that didn’t happen. All that’s left now is the damned ‘Symbol of Eternity' that will grant eternal life, and the biggest variable in between, 'Sergio Hunter.' What more do you need?"

"And what if my memory comes back?"

"The world will end by then anyway, so what…."

Jeong Hae-woon laughed out loud.

"When that day comes, I'll slowly savor my regrets while watching the dimensional ruins. It's a very fitting end for me. Well, as long as we hold on, that day won't come… Anyway, I agree."

It's living without knowing each other.

"That's enough for me."

"That's your bad habit."

"Sergio Hunter said something like that earlier. What kind of habit is that?"

"Don't even look up at a persimmon that you can't eat."

"I admit it, but…."

Jeong Hae-woon shrugged.

"At least it's better than calling a sane person a sour grape, right?"

"Well, you sometimes treat sour grapes like rotten grapes. Isn't that how you treat Sergio Hunter?"

"The world doesn't always revolve around truth."

In any case, the conversation with 'Sergio Hunter' calmed Jeong Hae-woon down considerably. His heart, which had been swaying with anxiety, wariness, and disgust, became a little calmer.

‘I ended up in debt, but still… .’

He sighed.

“…This is correct.”

At least to himself.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (296)

296 Episode 296 Waterfowl. A monster that infiltrated the Earth at some point, living water in the shape of a bird. They had the habit of supporting the good and detesting the bad. People were a little afraid of such waterfowl. “Uh, something… They feel like crows or hyenas.” “When they appear in groups, doesn’t that mean something happened? When I hear that waterfowl appeared, my mood gets so bad that day.” “They strongly criticize modern society. Just by appearing, they show us that there were evil people who deserved such punishment….” “Thank you, they’re cute. But personally, I wish I could never see them again.” And that flock of waterfowl, right now. They were gently covering the night sky like an aurora. “Wow….” The child who came out to watch the parade opened his mouth wide. “Dad, look at that. That…!” “That’s right, it’s cool.” The man who came out with the child was also impressed. ‘They say Sergio Hunter is the Apostle of the Black Cloak.’ It seemed that my god loved me quite a bit. If I could use the subordinates of the black cloak as if they were my own, to the point of creating such a beautiful Milky Way that I could no longer see in the city. The water birds flew high in the sky and twinkled like living stars. Although the water birds could not emit light on their own, the light reflected off their bodies, which were living water, and the various jewels they held inside. “Oh, it’s raining.” “No, this is… not rain…” “Are the water birds falling?” Some of them fell in small pieces like rain. The enchanting sight of stars melting and falling to the ground covered the long parade line. The works that were hit by the colorful rain looked even brighter. “Mom, my caregiver gave me flowers…!” “I guess I’m going to have good luck this year.” “I’ll work hard to grow them so they don't wither this time!" "Yeah, yeah, I'll cheer you on." The works in the collection were more active than last year in giving away their 'pieces'. Flowers, small blessings, hugs, and cheerful pranks fell on the spectators. Some who were perceptive noticed a commonality. "Usually children receive gifts." "There are some adults, too..." "Is this perhaps influenced by the characteristics of waterfowl?" Blessings for the good, punishment for the bad. "Somehow it feels much more reassuring." "This parade has a particularly warm feeling..." The Collector's Parade was a bizarre circus. All sorts of beautiful or bizarre works walked out with their respective curators, dancing, performing, and traveling. But this parade was far from such stimulation. The waterfowl that had fallen like raindrops gathered individually and then quietly flew up again. They fluttered their long tail feathers and played light pranks, like fairies created by a meteor shower. "It's almost a scene from a fairy tale." "They're pretty..." "Please take a look here!" Sergio Hunter was riding on a giant flower carriage led by members of the Collector's Guild. Sergio Hunter was not the only one riding the three-story flower carriage. However, he was particularly conspicuous, sitting at the very top, in the front seat, singing the waterfowl. Following his gestures, the waterfowls each cried out as if in a chorus. The sound of flowers fluttering, the sound of jewels clinking, the sound of grass and trees swaying. When they all came together, they created a song that fit very well with the music of the parade. "I, I want that bird!" "No, I have to let the bird fly away." Sergio Hunter's procession was especially well-received by those who came with young families. "There's a hunter like that at the collection store." "I thought they only showed scary circuses…" "Hey, that's scary enough." "It's a shame that he couldn't come today." "Isn't Sergio Hunter particularly active at the collection store?" "He bravely came to such a noisy place." "I won't be able to see him next year." And some of them noticed another fact. "…Sergio Hunter commanding the water birds, somehow… He resembles someone…" "…Doesn't the collector handle the works like that?" "Oh, that's right. He was the head of the

Bisabal Guild.” “Looking at that, I think it’s definitely true that they’re family.” The way he coaxed and comforted the water birds like children singing in a choir, and also used them to make the works more lively. Although it was a beautiful scene like a fairy tale, there was a big difference in that they had that in common. People were amazed. ‘Well, the water birds really look pretty.’ ‘Looking at it like this, I can definitely feel that they’re the limbs of the black cloak…’ ‘They can create scenes like this with water birds.’ And soon, the water birds’ singing gradually died down. “Ah…” “I guess it’s almost over.” The curators of the collection were guiding the works to the gallery. Following their guidance, the works each handled their own bodies and safely returned home. Sergio Hunter, who was in the front row, also got down from the carriage. He bowed gently and left. “… gone.” “The water birds are gone too.” “Where did they go?” The parade gradually cleared up. As if it had been a dream, the festival soon came to an end. * * * The water birds returned to their nests. “You worked hard, guys.” “Gulp?” “Honey worked hard too.” By the way, Yoo Seong-un and Joo-hyun were also there. “Jio, can I get a flower car…” “I’ll get it to you right away.” “Oh, I’m dying.” “Isn’t this too much?” “I have to work.” Yoo Seong-un was extremely exhausted from abusing his ice-related skills all day. His already low body temperature had dropped three times more. Geo briefly pondered, “What on earth are the Awakened Ones that they can live without dying even with their body temperature like this?” “This is a present for you, Yoo Seong-un.” “A present. Yes, a present is nice. At this point, I just don’t know.” Yoo Seong-un wore the scarf and blanket that Geo had given him with great care. Even now, his heart would flutter at the thought of receiving a gift, but judging by the way it was being given back, it seemed like there was some kind of contract made with Yoo Seong-un’s afterlife at stake. So he decided to accept these gifts, big and small, without much burden. “So to speak, it’s postpaid. That’s a fair price and a deal, after all….” Ju-hyeon felt sorry for Yoo Seong-un, who was drinking the flower tea that the teddy bear sun god had given him. “Isn’t it too much, as Geo said?” “No, this is strictly part of the curator’s job…” “I understand that the guild leader of Bisabal values the health of his collections.” “That’s true.” Yoo Seong-un shrugged. “But what’s important is the appearance and use of the collections. The guild leader hasn’t particularly nagged me, but if I can’t do my job at an event like this, I feel like a piece of bread…” “The curators of the collection seem too blind to their roles.” Thanks to Joo-hyun joining in, Yoo-seong-un was soon wrapped in all sorts of warm things. “Is it paradise?” “You look nice.” “Can I take this out today?” “It’d be better if you sleep over.” “Then I’ll just eat breakfast and go…” “You can eat lunch tomorrow and go.” Joo-hyun thought as he watched the two. ‘Is this what Hades holding onto Persephone felt like?’ While that was a story of passionate love, this was just a story of a portrait of a person who enjoys hanging out with friends. Geo never let his friends come over easily. Whether it was food, sleep, or a gift, he would always send them off. Dana approached Joo-hyun’s feet. “Ahh.” “…Hello?” “Ah ... Yoo Seong-un had similar thoughts, so he would have just laid down and fallen asleep. There was no way that 'Geo's Portrait' would change my friends unless they wanted it to. Joo-hyun, who was gently stroking Dana, asked Geo. "Now that you mention it, Dana's size is always uneven." "It's because her body size changes due to the number and weight of friends inside her." "Since she's as small as a normal cat now, did she spit it all out...?" "I recently got a friend to do the work for me besides Dana." Geo said, placing a soft pillow on the back of Yoo Seong-un's unconscious back. "Thankfully, Dana's burden has been reduced." "When you say friend, do you mean 'diary'?" "To be exact, I'm referring to the purple that's working inside." "Purple..." "It's Mr. Ater." "...I see!" He wasn't surprised anymore. 'I guess I'll eventually get used to this kind of thing.' It was surprising. “By the way, right before this parade, you seemed to have a conversation with those… students.” “We had a productive conversation. Are you curious about what we talked about?” “I’d be lying if I said no, but it’s such a personal story. I was just worried about Geo’s condition, so you don’t have to go into detail.” “We didn’t really talk about anything special,” Geo said, trying to appease the water birds who were asking for snacks. “I was just correcting Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un’s misunderstanding.” “… I’ve already gotten a little ahead of myself, so can I hear the gist of it?” “I told them they could live on their own.” “On their own…?” “I felt like they were reading too much into this situation.” That wasn’t what Geo wanted. “That’s why I told them the objective situation. I’m just a haunted portrait. It’s okay to worry about a past that doesn’t exist… but if you’re blaming yourself for that, that’s a problem.” “Was Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un blaming yourself?” “He usually tries to pretend it’s not happening, but he has such low self-esteem. So when a problem arises, he always blames others and suffers first. When he reaches his mental limit, he immediately thinks of something strange. He was a really strange student.” “I don’t think it’s a very good habit.” “So before he goes out into the modern society where we have to live together, I poked him in the side quite a bit so that he could function properly, but he forgot everything and went back to the way he was. That was a bit disappointing.” It wasn’t just that he was forgetting his memories, but that time itself was being erased. “It seemed like the influence Sergio had on him had almost completely disappeared.” “Are you bitter? I think I would be sad, and the fact that he forgot me too...” “I feel regretful, but I’m not bitter or sad.” Geo said, sending all the water birds out the window. “We did our best back then.” That was enough. “I know those kids. Guild Leader Jeong Hae-woon seems to have completely forgotten, but the last student I remember named Jeong Hae-woon was surprisingly altruistic and had good action skills. Once he was told the right path, he would run straight ahead.” “He’s also famous for being a good person.” “Hae-woon was a smart student who knew how to affirm the right path, even if it didn’t seem right. Even if it was a made-up hypocrisy, if you keep doing it, it will become your own good deed. I think he’s probably forgotten that obvious fact… It seems that the other friends were there with him, so it didn’t get to the worst.” “Uh… What do you think the worst is, Geo?” “Going back alone.” He was talking about the time when he hated the whole world. “Even though I fed him and supported him.” “It’s almost like something a parent would say.” “So this is enough.” Jeong Hae-woon did his best in all of those worst situations. That was the Jeong Hae-woon of now. Sergio couldn’t help but feel happy inside as he looked at his student. Geo smiled faintly. “As expected, he was a student who did well even without me.” How admirable. “…….” “Why do you see him that way, Joo-hyun?” “…It’s not my job, but you feel a little sad?” “What’s there to be sad about?” “Even though it’s a past that’s disappeared, it feels like our relationship is being denied...” “I didn’t really think or say that.” Anyway, what a teacher should do was to make students do their part in society. And Sergio succeeded in all of that. Even in a world where he had disappeared. “I don’t think it was anything special.” “I heard that Guild Leader Seo Seo-hee had a different reaction.” “I guess everyone has a different way of dealing with certain people.” Seo Seo-hee accepted Geo as her ‘teacher’ and wanted to get help from him. That was because it consumed less mental energy and had more potential benefits. On the other hand, Jeong Hae-woon recognized Geo as a ‘mystery’ as a gardener and wanted to be on guard. That way, he could always subdue the possessed portrait if it caused trouble. That was the extent of the difference. “Maybe Hae-ra decided to completely exclude variables.” Geo handed the flower tea to Joo-hyun. “Eun-hye, well. I don’t know.” “Are you going to continue living without knowing?” “I don’t want to bother my students who are already scared.” Those students were special to Geo. He wanted to be as considerate as possible to them who were desperately holding on. Just like when a kitten hisses, you want to give them some alone time until they can feel safe… . “What good would come from being impatient?” “…That’s true.” “There’s no need to look too far into the future.” “That’s true too.” “I always say this, but I like the present.” Was Yoo Seong-woon shivering in the cold that much? Geo picked up the teddy bear that was wriggling under the sofa and placed it in Yoo Seong-woon’s arms, then smiled. “Right?” [… … .] “What should I have for breakfast….” It was a pleasant routine. (To be continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (297)

297

Episode 297

It was a great thing to be able to meet a good teacher.

A teacher who comes out and comforts you even when you call him crying in the middle of the night, is so affectionate that he buys pizza for his students with his own money, and is kind enough to answer any questions you have.

A teacher who used to say out of habit that he wanted them to become happy adults.

“…….”

It was a great stroke of luck that I was able to meet such a person… .

“Eunhye.”

“…….”

I was out of breath.

"…teacher."

All sorts of ugly emotions flood in, filling the void of the once-full fortune. Misfortune and despair fill that large space.

But that too is something we built with our own hands. It is a clear staircase, and we have lived proudly, thinking it is an honor… But nightmares continue to hold us back.

The nightmare asks.

“Are you here for a snack?”

“…Yes, just….”

Black hair and even blacker eyes. Her skin was pale and her eye ridges were deep-set.

His eyebrows are slightly thick, his lips are red, and his gaze is as calm as a snowy winter morning. He is a person who stands out so much that you won't easily forget him once you see him.

And it was also a fucking familiar face.

“…Can I have just one macaron?”

He nodded shallowly at the impossible request.

“You said you were controlling your diet, but now you’re going to exercise more?”

“Now… I don’t have to manage my diet.”

“Then you can eat whatever you want.”

“I want to eat whatever I want.”

"okay?"

He looks at me. He doesn't smile, but he looks at me with a look that makes it seem like he's smiling.

“That sounds good too.”

He was a teacher who affirmed everything about me.

“Why are you standing here instead of sitting down?”

“Teacher, you are busy drawing pictures too.”

“What could be so busy with a hobby?”

“But I don’t want to bother you.”

“Or did you try to run away this time with just some snacks?”

“You see me as a very harsh person….”

He sits down on the worn-out school chair, the corners of his mouth raised.

“…….”

Even without looking down, I could tell that I was wearing a school uniform.

"…teacher."

“Yeah, an aspiring idol.”

“This is a dream.”

“I know.”

“I know, too.”

I can see the scenery of the art room that remains faintly in my memory.

Outside the window, I could see lush trees. The windows were black and dusty, having not been replaced for a long time. The person who was arranging the art supplies that the students had scattered around in a mess was the teacher in front of me.

This place, with its faint smell of charcoal, was in Cha Eun-hye's dream.

“I always think about what it would have been like if I had just forgotten everything.”

It's a sweet dream, like burnt caramel.

“I forget everything like kids do.”

“It’s a shame.”

“I forgot what my teacher looked like, I forgot what kind of lunch he made for me, I forgot what we talked about and played around together… I just forgot everything….”

“It’s getting easier, leave me alone.”

“Yes, just leave the teacher alone. But that’s not possible.”

It was miserable.

“What if I forget you too, teacher?”

“I’m lonely, Eunhye.”

“Teacher, how can you do that when you are the only one so pitiful?”

“Where the hell am I? Why did you leave me alone?”

“Honestly, I still don’t know why we had to make that choice….”

“Eunhye.”

A pitch-black ghost looks at me.

“Save me.”

“…….”

Something that was neither human nor anything else saw Cha Eun-hye.

“…Please save me. I’m scared. I don’t want to be alone. Where am I? What do I look like? Let’s go home. I’ll pack you a lunch. Are you sick? Are you okay? Are you okay? Are you okay? What should I draw for you this time? Tell me.”

“…….”

“Eunhye, kids. Kids. Don’t get hurt. Run away. I’ll protect you, so don’t worry. Should I help you? Should I help you? How should I help you? Does it hurt? Does it hurt? Help me? It hurts. It hurts, so much.”

“…I really….”

“What the hell am I right now? What am I doing? How do I look? Am I a person? A monster? A human? Do you want to run away? Hide, run away. It hurts. It’s okay. Eunhye…”

“It’s absolutely horrible.”

There was nothing that wasn't horrible, even the fact that it was an illusion of my own creation.

“Our teacher wouldn’t do this.”

It was all just a nightmare created by Cha Eun-hye.

“I resent you.”

“…No, the teacher is not the type of person to blame anyone….”

“I did so well for you, and this is all I get in return? Ignorance and avoidance? Leaving me alone? I was always there for you when you were having a hard time, when you needed help.”

“…I was not a person who expected anything in return for what I gave.”

“Now I am alone. Everyone looks at me. No one sees me. I am lonely. You do not want to face me to the end. Cowards. I did not teach you this….”

“So, please….”

“Turn me back to how I was.”

Something black, alien, and bizarre looks down at Cha Eun-hye.

“Give it back.”

Express your resentment.

“You made me like this.”

I'm not the type of person to say something like that. There's no way that would happen.

“It’s because of you guys, if only you guys weren’t here….”

My heart is pounding even though he's not the type of person to say such cruel things.

“I wouldn’t have died.”

“…Teacher is not dead, please….”

“What’s wrong? Have you forgotten? What promise did you make?”

“You’re not dead, right? Why are you doing this to me? Don’t be so scary.”

“You made a choice that was ultimately just for you.”

The pitch-black thing gently embraced Cha Eun-hye.

“You ruined me.”

"…no."

“I saved the world.”

"no."

I hugged the nightmare with trembling hands.

“Tell us we made the right choice.”

Then the 'Teacher' looked at me. It was the Teacher. It was my nightmare, and it was a familiar face. It was our Teacher who had returned to human form according to my will.

Then he says.

“Your choice was right.”

“I wish you would compliment me.”

“It was hard, you must have had a hard time. But you did really well.”

"we…."

He cried, holding onto that pitch-black shirt.

“…Okay, I was wrong….”

I was scared.

“…What if we really made the wrong choice? What should we do? At the time, I thought it was the best, but now I don’t know. There are still many things I hate and miss, but my friends have all forgotten. Why am I the only one who has to suffer like this?”

It was unfair.

“Teacher, why did you come back? How did you come back? I wanted you to come back someday, but I didn’t really want you to. What is your purpose? Did you come to kill us? Did you come to take revenge on the world? How do you remember us? How is that possible?”

I missed you.

“I’m not sure if Sergio, the Hunter, is really you. But if he is, what should I do? Why won’t he come see me? No, I wish he wouldn’t come see me. No, no. We can pretend not to know each other and become friends again. That’s possible, right? That’s okay, right? Will you allow me to? But it’s such a waste. I, I… I…”

What might be better?

“…If we go back to that day, we’ll all just die together.”

“Why did you think so?”

“…It’s so hard….”

An adult was needed.

“It was so hard for us.”

I needed a teacher.

“Wow, what on earth could we possibly have done to make this choice?”

“But you know that this was the right path.”

“It wasn’t a good road, absolutely not.”

“Even though you say that, aren’t you actually feeling proud?”

Her nightmare knew everything about me.

“I’m proud that I’m able to keep the world like this.”

“That doesn’t mean the fact that I’m having a hard time is a lie.”

“If you could go back to that day, you would make the same choice in the end.”

“…….”

Eunhye Cha broke free of the hug and looked up at her ‘teacher.’

“…Is he dead?”

“You killed them.”

“Are you dead?”

“No way, he’s not dead.”

“It was a really horrible dream.”

“I wanted you to have that dream.”

“…….”

Eunhye Cha, now an adult, asked.

“…Teacher, can you tell me that?”

"okay."

The 'teacher' in my nightmare whispered affectionately.

“I always….”

"that's right."

“It will be here.”

“The teacher is right.”

In this dream, this one thing was not a cowardly lie created by Cha Eun-hye.

“I am always here.”

That was Mr. Sergio's will.

Cha Eun-hye woke up from her sleep.

* * *

“…….”

I shed sad tears.

“Ugh, ah….”

He grabbed the blanket and used force to tear it off.

“Ugh… huff, euah….”

I wanted to just tear it apart like this.

"…teacher…."

I didn't want to wake up from that fucking nightmare.

After a long time, Cha Eun-hye relaxed her grip. She cooled her reddened eyes with her cold hands. Her body was drenched in cold sweat, and there was no warm spot except for her swollen eyes.

She then exhaled slowly.

“…Hoooo….”

It's calming down.

“…….”

A mirror caught her eye.

Mirrors beyond, mirrors on the ceiling, mirrors on the floor. Mirrors on the door. Mirrors on the pillars. Mirrors hanging from above. Small mirrors on the table. Mirrors. Mirrors. And mirrors.

Wherever I looked, there was ‘Cha Eun-hye’.

"…good."

Cha Eun-hye smiled brightly.

Oh, you look fine now.

“I like it.”

I guess I'll have to stay like this today.

Even though the sun hadn't risen yet, Cha Eun-hye got out of bed. She had slept for too long and ended up having such a pitiful dream.

It was a long sleep, but it didn't feel particularly refreshing. Nevertheless, Eunhye Cha left the room with a smile.

“Your Majesty, are you awake?”

“Are there any documents from the gardeners?”

“Guild leader Jeong Hae-un contacted us to ask if we could visit in the morning.”

“Hmm… I guess I woke up so early to see Haeun. Tell her to meet me at 5.”

“I will convey it that way.”

“And this for me.”

Cha Eun-hye tapped my eyes.

“Call your friends to cover for you.”

“I will call you right away.”

It was the beginning of an ordinary day.

* * *

“But that’s a bit surprising.”

“Dipping corn chips into guacamole with avocado in it,” Yoo Seong-un said.

“Because the symbols of eternity seem so quiet.”

“I guess everyone is busy and doesn’t have time to come see the teacher’s face.”

“I’m just asking just in case, are you upset right now?”

“? No, I’m just impressed that you seem to be living honestly.”

Geo cracked open a corn chip and split it in half.

“I like cheese sauce.”

“Guacamole will be sad.”

“It’s time for guacamole to stand on its own.”

“Why are you cutting that little chip again in the first place? Are you bothering the chip?”

“If you eat this big chip whole, the roof of your mouth will burn.”

“Can you do that too?”

“My palate is also burning.”

Geo looked back at Joohyun as he ate chips dipped in cheese sauce.

“Why don’t you dip it in sauce?”

“The corn chips are so salty that the sauce isn’t that great….”

“Mr. Joo-hyun has pure tastes.”

“What on earth is pure taste?”

It looks like there was another translation error.

“Mr. Geo, you often don’t translate very well.”

“Can this be called a translation?”

“Isn’t this the easiest expression to understand?”

“Well, that’s true… but now that it’s come to this, I wonder what to do.”

Even Yoo Seong-un gave up.

“If I have friends in my next life, will there be a discount for friends?”

“I don’t know what you’re talking about.”

“Or do you want to become Geo’s disciple?”

"welcome."

Joohyun stopped that meteor shower.

“Looking at the accumulated data, I think it would be better to avoid the role of Geo-ssi’s disciple.”

“It’s unfair.”

“A mermaid, a deer, a symbol of eternity. No matter how much I think about it, living an ordinary life as Geo-ssi’s disciple is wrong….”

“It’s a mother ship.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded, ignoring Geo.

“That’s true.”

“Are you really going to betray me?”

“There is no betrayal in accumulated data values, Mr. Argio.”

anyway.

“Let me go back to the beginning, but are you okay with this? Don’t you think you’ve decided to live on, forgetting about your beloved disciples?”

“Yes, it’s okay.”

“Can I ask why?”

“At that age, we each have to live our own lives.”

“You know you’re really spicy in weird places.”

“I didn’t give birth to it.”

Geo was resolute.

“Children become independent when the time comes, so let alone students. Joo-hyun and Yoo-sung-woon both say that I’m secretly harsh to them. Are you worried?”

“Okay, good. Since you’ve laid the groundwork, I’ll be honest. I’m afraid that the symbol of eternity who regained my memories will get so angry that it’ll turn the Earth upside down. That’s why I want you to say yes first before that happens.”

Joohyun looked slightly relieved.

“Yes, yes, it is a symbol of eternity….”

“Oh, it’s a little creepy even as I say it. Right?”

“It’s not an easy combination of words to think of.”

“Isn’t that something that could happen anyway?”

The portrait tilted its head at Yoo Seong-un's question.

“No way.”

“There’s an unspoken rule in the hunter industry that you shouldn’t say, ‘No way.’”

“I like this rule.”

Is this like a death flag?

“I have no doubt that my students will choose the right path.”

“Yes, if you think you’re going to destroy the Earth later, be sure to consult with our guild leader beforehand.”

“I think they are still saying ‘O-yes-yes’.”

“If that’s true, then that’s good. Right, then that’s fine.”

Even Yoo Seong-un gave up.

“Anyway, this is delicious. I don’t like avocado, but this is okay.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un seems to know how to make a chef happy. Thank you for your great words.”

“Are you a cook?”

“There is no qualification.”

“If it exists, it would be surprising as it is.”

He leaned back in his chair.

“It feels strange to smell food in my house after such a long time.”

“Four meals a day.”

“Oh, I’m eating. But I don’t usually eat at home….”

“Are you still busy?”

“Still, I feel like things are slowly getting sorted out.”

“I'm curious.”

The portrait expressed interest.

“Is Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s garden friendly?”

“…You’re quite kind for a gardener, but why?”

“I always wondered if it had to be that cold.”

It's a garden.

“Can I go out and play?”

Recently, Geo has been looking for material for a new work.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (298)

298

Episode 298

Although it was not intentional, it may have been a burden to the faint-hearted. Geo had to add an excuse, if only to ventilate the still air.

“There is a misunderstanding.”

“What misunderstanding?”

“I’m not looking for a new ‘Geo’ right now.”

“Then what do you mean by new material…?”

“I’m literally looking for new material. I haven’t been able to paint lately.”

"hmm."

Yoo Seong-un asked back.

“So, you could say it’s a slump?”

“It’s not that serious.”

“But what happens is that when you want to draw, you can’t.”

“I don’t have any more energy than that.”

Joohyun nodded at him.

'That makes sense.'

Didn't this introvert even participate in the parade recently? It was a while ago, but he also worked hard to absorb and calm down 'Argio'. It was time to gradually replenish the energy he had exhausted.

'Besides, I've been going around to different places these days to meet my old students, so it's understandable that I'm feeling unmotivated. And more than anything, what's on my mind is... .'

Joo-hyun, who was looking at the meteor cloud, asked Geo.

“…Was it because packing lunch was burdensome?”

Then Yoo Seong-un was amazed.

“Our teacher Ju-Hyeon is truly very brave.”

“Do you want to fight?”

“I didn’t know you’d be this rude to even a Class A Hunter.”

“As I get older, the only thing that increases is baseless confidence.”

“This is a very good phenomenon.”

As always, Yoo Seong-woon, who was teasing Joo-hyun, asked.

“I was thinking the same thing, but you’re the first to speak. Yeah, I was curious too. What was the brave effort you put into making me a lunchbox when I was in a slump that wasn’t really a slump… Hmm, didn’t it have a heavy impact?”

Yoo Seong-un expressed it as best as he could. He couldn't possibly express the act of preparing meals for his disciples in a negative way. Especially since he knew how special those disciples were to 'Portrait of Geo'.

'But from a curator's perspective, it's inevitable that they'll be worried.'

Shinbi is bound by her own rules, whether she likes it or not. The one-on-one rule that the 'Portrait of Geo' had. And this kind portrait had revealed that she was paying for the 'lunch box'.

So what was Geo paying for because of that?

'To be honest, I wish I had never been so self-destructive in the first place… but that's just the way he was made, so I guess it can't be helped.'

It was a needlessly regrettable and annoying thing.

"Well, I respect that. Your disciples do a lot for the Earth. The more you feel sorry for them, the more you want to help them…."

"I can't say that the current results weren't affected by that work. But don't worry, Mr. Yoo Seong-un. I'll say it again, it's not that serious."

This haunted portrait seems to think so, honestly.

"Oh, okay."

From the perspective of curator Yoo Seong-un, it sounded very serious.

'Isn't this almost a situation where one's own identity is denied?'

Shinbi was a person who drew pictures from the beginning and was a picture itself. But that guy suddenly lost the energy to draw. I felt a slight regret, thinking, 'Did I just take it outside for no reason?'

"Well, anyway… so you want to visit my snowfield?"

"I think I need a change of pace."

"An artist always needs new inspiration. You know, I don't have the authority to invite anyone to my garden. That's up to you."

"I will try."

"If that's the case, then I don't think it's my place to interfere, so do whatever you want."

Joo-hyun made a flustered expression at Yoo Seong-un's cool reaction.

"Aren't you giving permission too easily?"

"As I said before, I am just a gardener and have no authority to invite guests."

"Still, I think there is some degree of obligation to keep out uninvited guests."

"Isn't that something that the landlord and guest should work out between themselves?"

His Majesty the Emperor came to visit, so there was no way a mere gardener could stop him. It didn't seem like it would make much of a difference even if he was the owner of the garden. In short, it was something that was out of Yu Seong-un's hands.

"But, uh… If you're going to visit, at least give me a call in advance. That way, I can at least prepare myself mentally. As a gardener, there's nothing else I can say…."

Yoo Seong-un looked at Geo.

"Do you need my help?"

"I want to hear about the garden."

"Are you talking about something like a garden scene? Can I describe it as if I were describing a work of art?”

“It’s a grateful thing, but you can also see it through Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s eyes.”

“Oh, come to think of it, I think I’ve seen a snowy field through your eyes before.”

In that case, there might not have been any need for an objective description of the scene, even if we don't know exactly what Geo saw in the garden through Yoo Seong-un's eyes.

“Then what are you curious about in the garden? I’m not sure how I can help you yet.”

“Could you please tell me what Mr. Yoo Seong-un thinks about the garden?”

“That’s hard to explain. It’s hard to express. Do you need a review?”

“If it’s difficult, you can just be there while I draw. That alone will be enough to satisfy the condition.”

“A kind of sacrifice? Well, fine. Maybe you could pluck out my eyes?”

“No need.”

You are firm.

'Is this a mystery that does not accept human sacrifice?'

From the humans' point of view, it was a good thing.

“Then can I go now?”

“Where are you going?”

“Weren’t you going to draw a picture?”

“I'm eating.”

“Rather than that, weren’t you snacking?”

“Similar.”

“That’s true.”

In the sense that something goes into the mouth.

“So, eat it, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“I was already eating well….”

“You need to gain weight.”

“I’ll fatten up the curator and use it to my advantage.”

Anyway, it was a portrait with a strong spirit.

* * *

As the sun set, people gathered quietly in a quiet cafe.

They were of such a variety of clothing and ages that it was hard to tell them apart. There were even cats, crows, and dogs, as well as humans. But even though they recognized each other, they sat down without saying a word.

The first to speak was an old man with white hair.

“I think I had a fever.”

The heavy, weary feeling typical of someone entering their twilight years. The owner of the café continued speaking in a soft voice that seemed to reflect his many years of experience.

“I think you can sympathize with us since we’ve all been busy for a while. It’s been a difficult time just sitting face to face like this. I’m sure everyone has had some kind of accomplishment….”

“Well, I think it was more of a side effect of the vaccination than a fever. It was noisy at first, but then it quietened down. The garden is also much stronger.”

The young man sitting on the chair shrugged and smiled.

“I guess something happened at the root?”

“It might be difficult for a gardener to figure out, though.”

“We’ve been together for quite some time now, but you still seem to be in a bad mood… We work so hard, but our gardener doesn’t even give us a bonus, and even when there’s a large-scale construction project, he announces it on the same day.”

The crow tilted its head at him.

“Did you give notice?”

“Ah… what, the gardener didn’t say anything?”

“I just suffered from body aches….”

“You’re still so picky.”

“I understand, since you are usually a very reserved person.”

The cat meowed listlessly.

“It has its pros and cons.”

A chatty garden usually has a lot of interaction with the gardener, but it is burdensome, while a quiet garden has the advantage of not being a bother even though the gardener doesn't seem to know the gardener.

And every garden was bound to choose a gardener of the right disposition.

“But I’m worried because it’s been a long time since the entire garden has been so noisy. I don’t think it’s an individual problem with the gardens. Could it be that there’s something really wrong with the root?”

“The word change would be more appropriate than ideal. To the source, you know? There is nothing that can be called ideal.”

“But it is true that I am worried, as Mr. Hog said. Isn’t this the first time since the great disaster that the entire garden has been in such an uproar? If that day happens again….”

The child-like gardener said with a smile.

“If I have to, I’ll hide in the garden.”

“Then you will become a piece of wood.”

“Our garden is nice. It’s cozy and warm. It’s cool.”

“No matter how good it is, you shouldn’t be thinking about retirement so soon. At the very least, create a successor.”

A middle-aged woman lamented.

“It’s the same for everyone else. Don’t get carried away when the garden is tangled, don’t lie down when you’re tired, and don’t throw everything away when you’re angry.”

“Oh, but it’s so hard to find a successor these days….”

“Those are all excuses. If you look for them, you can find them all. It’s just that the qualified friends are keeping their mouths shut. There are definitely enough people to pass down the garden to you.”

“Tsk, tsk. How much time does it take to find it and educate people about it?”

“Then I hope you live a long life, sir.”

“When are you going to retire….”

“If we keep going like this, Gardener Jeong Hae-woon might come and catch us. He’s really going to get his ass kicked. He’s already been a bit sensitive lately, so let’s not get in trouble.”

Another middle-aged man chuckled.

“Hey, if I pray hard, you’ll forgive me.”

“No, you really don’t look that good these days.”

“Even people with good personalities eventually reach their limits when they only work overtime.”

“If you just watch, it’s really sad….”

A young man who seemed to have just become an adult scratched his neck.

“But what’s really going on this time? I’m a newbie, so I’ve gotten a lot of help from here and there… but that doesn’t mean I wasn’t confused. Is the world really going to end?”

“It can’t be ruined already, then.”

“But this has never happened before except during the great disaster….”

“I wonder if the source is stretching.”

“It’s scary, the source. Is this what happens if you just stretch?”

The cafe owner nodded with a leisurely smile on his wrinkled face.

“You can think of it as land, student.”

“Uh, yes… the ground….”

“It is a land that is bigger and deeper than the soil we walk on. If that huge foundation were to shake, everything on top of it would shake as well. This situation is no different.”

“There’s nothing wrong with the root cause?”

“The root cause is not a ‘problem’.”

It's the same as before.

“It’s a change.”

But maybe it was right for humans to worry.

“You’d better be on your guard just in case. Our gardens have been bustling for a while now. But of course, there’s nothing wrong with having so much energy in the garden, right?”

“That is correct.”

The priest with a pious face said.

“It’s so beautiful to see such a vibrant forest. I was worried that the gardens were losing their vitality, but after your fever, you seem much healthier.”

“Oh, that part was definitely a concern. The cause wasn’t even exactly known. No matter how much nutritional supplements we put in, there’s a limit to how long it will take for Jeongwon to come to his senses…”

“If you’re Gardener Jeong Hae-un, wouldn’t you know something? Why did this happen? He’s not someone we can visit if we want, but this is serious.”

“What would he know? We are all gardeners.”

“But he probably has a lot more information value than we do. We only inspect one or two gardens, while he sweeps through gardens practically all over the world….”

The cafe owner nodded at that.

“I’ll try to contact you soon.”

“If the owner would do that, I could not ask for anything more.”

The gardeners sighed.

“I just wish I didn’t have to work overtime anymore….”

“I’m already so busy, but my garden cries like a newborn every day.”

“If the garden condition is not like this, everything is fine.”

“Then I’ll wait for your call, teacher.”

So everyone left the cafe.

“…….”

The cafe owner, Jeong Hae-woon, rubbed his chin.

“…What really was the problem?”

He, who had the face of an old man, had now become younger and had the face of a middle-aged man.

'Seeing as there was no reaction from Hae-ra or Eun-hye, it must have been caused by something that really happened at the root. Even for me, it's too burdensome to contact them directly.'

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been thinking quietly, soon came to a conclusion.

‘… Yoo Seong-un, I need to talk to that guy.’

It's time to take care of the things you've been putting off.

* * *

Yoo Seong-un, who was watching Geo's painting, cleared his throat.

“……?”

“Is there a problem?”

“No, I just got goosebumps for a moment.”

“Is this the feeling of working overtime?”

“Maybe so.”

I felt somewhat similar.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (299)

299

Episode 299

“…….”

The portrait asked Yoo Seong-un, who was just quietly looking at the canvas.

“What is here?”

“…There’s nothing, just glacier and snow.”

“So there’s glaciers and snow. What do they look like? If they’re cold, how cold are they?”

“Well, the garden keeps changing shape….”

Yoo Seong-un stared at the snowy field in the canvas.

“I think I’ve seen you somewhere just now.”

If I just watched it, my stomach would churn.

It was his garden. It was his snowfield. A cold world where the snow fell down and up, making it impossible to distinguish between heaven and earth. When it was quiet, or when it wasn't, if I closed my eyes, I could hear the sound of a heartbeat... .

My fingertips were ticklish. My heart was pounding. The heat and anxiety that started from the extremities and rushed to my eyes. A strange, yearning, as if I had missed something.

“…It’s very realistic.”

“You are too kind, this blob of paint is realistic.”

“It’s definitely not the real thing. This isn’t a photograph.”

“What Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is correct.”

“But why would a picture exist?”

“Unlike photographs, which only capture objective facts, paintings can leave behind an impression.”

“Yeah, appreciation. Emotions. Heart. Things like that.”

That was the difference between photography and painting. Paintings contain time and spirit and leave room for interpretation. That story is what makes all the art and works of art in the world precious.

“Are you feeling the same way I am?”

"well."

“How can I portray the world I felt and saw like that?”

“Well, that’s also true.”

“You are too vague.”

That's the charm of those mysterious friends.

“…It’s hard to say that this picture is realistic….”

Oil painting leaves a rough mark. The thick paint quickly hardens and pops out. There is no such thing as precise depiction. They just pressed it down with a knife without even making any corrections, and this is what came out.

It was the gaze of a meteor shower when it looked at my snowy field one day.

“…Is it because I’m so out of touch with reality?”

“Are you far away?”

“That’s because you only feed me good things.”

“You should gain weight, but it’s a shame that you’re always so skinny.”

“I tell you every time, I’m not skinny, Geo….”

Even as he says that, his gaze is fixed on the snowy field.

'How is this possible?'

I thought about it even though I knew it was a meaningless question. I was amazed. It really makes sense to find a desolate snowy field in a shallow work of art created by a child who resembles a human.

My garden is being painted. It's right there. On a canvas that you can hug and hold.

“You draw very smoothly.”

The portrait did not let the casual remark go unnoticed, but accepted it.

“Aren’t the eyes soft?”

“Rather than that, isn’t it more of a rustling sensation or a cold sensation?”

“Snow that is not touched by human hands or feet is warm.”

“It won’t be warm though.”

“If it’s just the thing itself that doesn’t touch anything.”

“That’s right, that’s my snowfield.”

People cannot come and go.

'In there, I'm not even human anymore.'

He is only a 'gardener'. Anything that would ruin the garden's scenery is not allowed. The meteor cloud could not leave any traces in it. Not even a trace of human footsteps or a thin warmth.

In the snowy field where the sky and the ground were indistinguishable, meteors could not even melt the snow, unless the garden requested or permitted it.

“…….”

A strange feeling welled up in me.

“…This is the first time I’ve shared this sight with someone else.”

“Don’t you share it with other gardeners?”

“It’s impossible to bring the garden out into the open for humans to see.”

"hmm…."

Geo asked, tilting his head.

“Can’t you see it through Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s eyes? Can’t you say that it is ‘a place that humans can see’?”

“You’re probably the only one who can see the garden reflected in my eyes, Geo. Don’t misunderstand.”

Well, I understand why you think that way. Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly inside.

'I thought I had gotten used to imitating humans, but was that a judgment I could only make based on seeing a small part of Geo? There are still some areas where I am lacking internally… .'

But it wasn't all that confusing. This is where the great mystery often gets confused. You don't think that something that is normal and can be done naturally would be a miracle to humans.

It could also be seen as a generalization error that mystery often makes. Thinking that if you can do something, everyone else will do it too. This kind of perspective can cause people to feel a considerable sense of alienation and fear.

'But at least our portraits are good on the outside.'

Yoo Seong-un smiled broadly and indifferently at the meaningless pride. It was a special characteristic of a curator to feel good whenever he felt the specialness of my work. He continued to explain.

“No matter how beautiful his garden is, the gardener can never show it to anyone else.”

“They say there is also a skill to extract memories into drawings or photographs.”

“Because it’s a target that doesn’t work with those skills, and even if you extract it that way, it doesn’t mean that you can completely convey the emotions that I felt. Just like you can’t completely convey the time, emotions, and gaze you had when you saw a famous tourist attraction….”

“It’s a shame.”

The portrait, which depicted even the flawless light and shade of the enchanting snowy field, asked.

“Shall I give you a gift?”

“A gift like this doesn’t really mean anything to me. The garden and I are one.”

“Then shall we exhibit it?”

“Where should I exhibit?”

“Aren’t you tired?”

“…Ah, well….”

When I raised my head and met his gaze, I could see the compassion contained in his distant black eyes. They were so vicious and huge that I could not tell their depth… .

“I just….”

The lovingkindness of this being could manifest in any form.

You could sweep away a terrifying tidal wave that covered a large piece of land with one hand, and you could cure a patient suffering from a serious illness with just a glance. So you could give a ‘gift’ to a ‘friend.’

The curator realized what his portrait was saying.

“…….”

I knew what the benevolent Source had shown this tired gardener.

“…It’s still okay.”

After all, mystery is mystery.

Isn't this too heavy a question to just throw out like a riddle to kill time and expect an answer right away?

“If you exhibit works like this, people will be shocked and astonished.”

“I’m not embarrassed.”

“Wouldn’t that make the world a little more chaotic?”

“That’s not likely.”

“Understand, I am a weak person who is only capable of this. Your work is so realistic and beautiful that it would be fatal to those with weak hearts.”

“You are too kind.”

“When will you admit that this isn’t an exaggeration?”

Maybe when the Earth turns upside down?

“…I, well… I know this may be presumptuous, but I think it’s okay now….”

Isn't that what humans are like? They seek stability. If they are afraid of even one change, how can they accept the world changing? That was too scary for a mere human.

“Geoya.”

"yes."

“Portrait of Geo.”

“Yes, I am listening.”

“What on earth do you want to create for the Earth?”

“I can’t make it.”

“Then what do you want to do?”

“I want to do what I want to do.”

“What is that?”

“As you know, Mr. Yoo Seong-un….”

In a silver barrel that smelled of thick oil, Geo dipped his knife.

“I eat, take a nap, hang out with friends, and then wake up slowly in the afternoon the next day.”

It was a truly peaceful story.

“Please don’t misunderstand. I’m just doing what I want to do. And I know that the results won’t harm my friends, acquaintances, or good, kind people….”

It seemed irresponsible and far-fetched.

“There is no reason not to do so, so why should I hesitate?”

“People are afraid of change.”

“That part is hard to relate to.”

“It makes sense, since you are a unique case in many ways.”

Even the 'Geos' who were human showed a way of thinking that far exceeded their limits. Giovanni, who considered the sacrifice of cutting off his own flesh easier than breathing. Argio, who showed his anger to the world even if it meant changing dimensions.

And Sergio, the art teacher.

“Teacher….”

“Did you call?”

"…teacher?"

“Yes, did you call?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un looked at the portrait.

Even to the call of Yoo Seong-un, who was neither a student nor a disciple, the portrait responded. His soft and gentle questioning did not seem human.

And every time this happens, I get a little scared.

'It's like a doll that reacts precisely according to set values.'

Of course, that was a mystery.

'There's nothing to be afraid of. Is this because I'm just an insignificant person?'

I couldn't just acknowledge, accept, and accept it like them. Every time that mysterious rule came into view, my spine would shiver and a cold sweat would run down my face. My eyes would dilate and my pupils would shrink. The corners of my mouth would turn up.

So, no matter how much I think about it, Joo-Hyeon was destined to not be human. Someone who does not respond to what humans are designed to respond to. And wasn't he chosen by God?

"…hmm…."

I think the random thoughts are a bit long.

“…What have you done?”

“Is this a question for the teacher?”

“Yes, sir. I don’t know what you did.”

“I don’t think it’s something you would call ‘something’.”

“But there are precedents, right?”

Giovanni and Argio also performed their crazy feats. With their wedge, the dimension was destroyed and countless lives and deaths appeared. And the portrait tried to use them to remake the Earth again.

‘I say it’s not me, but…’

I'm not saying that was intentional.

'Even so, if you act that way even after already knowing the outcome, how is that any different from what you intended?'

Yoo Seong-un couldn't tell the difference.

“What the hell have you done?”

“Please elaborate.”

“What did you do to be first?”

Why is Sergio the basis and foundation of the portrait? Why did his disciples become the guardians of the Earth? And why did they return to the mystery in the form of a portrait?

At what price did this being, who mistakenly thought he was human, gain the countless powers he had?

'Did it originate from humans, or did it become humans from the origin?'

He was a really strange friend.

“…I say again, please do not exhibit this work.”

“Then I guess it will go into the storage room in my room.”

“It might be a little heartbreaking, but… I think this is better than wandering the streets.”

“Our Seolwon also wants to see the scenery outside….”

“Wow, I can’t tell if you’re serious or joking, it sends shivers down my spine.”

Yoo Seong-un rummaged through his arms. He chewed on the candy and continued speaking.

“I know what you mean.”

“It wasn’t anything like that.”

“Yes, if the garden becomes known to people, the burden on the gardeners will be greatly reduced. Perhaps, when looking at it broadly, broadly, and from afar, that may be right. Making the existence of the source known….”

But that's it.

“But it hasn’t even been a century since the catastrophe.”

Outside of Korea, there were still many areas that did not even have the form of a country. No one called them countries anymore. They were just remote areas. This world is so dangerous.

“There’s no need to make things even more tiring for those who are just getting used to it by telling them about the existence of the source.”

“I didn’t know you would react so seriously.”

“Oh, yeah. I guess so.”

“Let me say this again: I just wanted to do an exhibition.”

The portrait blinked twice.

“…Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s snowfield is so beautiful.”

"…you…."

Yoo Seong-un laughed in a dejected and dreary manner.

“You, you really… know how to seduce a gardener’s heart….”

“When did I do that? This is a false accusation. It’s so unfair.”

“No, in a good way. I mean, I’m selling it for a good reason.”

“It doesn’t have a positive connotation.”

“Everyone feels differently.”

I felt a little embarrassed.

“If that was your ‘intention’, then I guess I was nagging you for nothing.”

This portrait was just a consideration for him.

'Were you trying to make sure that I wasn't the only one who saw this sight?'

Certainly, that was the sore spot for gardeners. They had to love alone all their lives. Affection, obsession, consideration, mercy, greed. Each of those emotions under the name of love could never be expressed.

Even if they try, they can't. Because it's a sight that can't be shown and doesn't exist. What they see isn't a common tourist attraction or a beautiful place. It's not a real space. That's really, really hard... .

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth slowly.

“…Do you know how the gardener was treated at first?”

“It was about 30 years ago.”

“Yes, then. And in countless other dimensions.”

"hmm."

The portrait, of course, told the truth.

“I think you thought I was crazy.”

“Yeah, you’re right. I was treated like a sick person.”

They see, hear, feel, and fear things that do not 'exist'. They are fascinated by them and eventually fall in love with them. How horrible a madman they must have seemed to others.

“The only way we can show the garden, the only way to prove its existence, is through ourselves. Our eyes. Our hair. Our body temperature. Our physical transformations or… in rare cases, our scent.”

“I don’t think it would be conclusive evidence.”

“Yes, as I just said, this is not a place that can be seen by humans.”

It was the same with gardeners. Can humans see each other's souls, their inner mysteries, just by looking into each other's eyes? No one had such convenient power.

That is why the 'Portrait of Geo' was all the more remarkable. He made it possible to gauge the great mystery just by looking at it. It was only natural, since it was the Eye of the Origin.

Yoo Seong-un continued his explanation.

“But really, that’s all there is to it. There’s no way to show anything more. Even if we try to show our strength beyond our limits, we, the only channel, will die….”

“They say that gardeners cannot even obtain death once they belong to the garden.”

“Because it could be destroyed like that.”

Isn't that so unfair?

“You can’t tell anyone something that clearly exists.”

“You must be tired.”

“And loneliness. It’s, you know, almost an occupational disease for gardeners.”

“What would you like to say?”

“Uh… sorry?”

I think it's because I've become more sensitive lately.

“Well, there’s no way I could force you to make a change you don’t want.”

This portrait was not intentional, but was going down the path it wanted to. I think it was scary because it looked exactly like the gods who were trying to destroy the Earth. Even though I knew that they weren't really like that.

I feel a little better now.

“…….”

It was a languid feeling, as I acknowledged and accepted the fact that I had become friends with this portrait.

“…Then can you just show it to me? So that people won’t visit….”

“I think we’ll have to consider the wishes of the parties involved, but I think I can convey Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s opinion. Would you like that?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“Is there a name for this piece?”

“This is Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

"aha."

It made me laugh.

“As expected.”

Why did you say you knew me so well?

* * *

That day, a large painting of a snowy field hung in Yoo Seong-un's house.

“Oh.”

“Mr. Joo-hyun, is that all you have to say after seeing this wonderful painting?”

“These dangerous items make me dizzy just looking at them….”

“It’s a geographic drawing.”

“You’ve placed it in the right place, it’s very nice.”

"yes?"

Change isn't always a bad thing.

“…It looks like a house where people live.”

“This is it?”

“Let me indulge myself in my feelings.”

I don't know where this work will run away to.

Anyway, it was a day when a piece of Yoo Seong-un's loneliness was relieved.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (300)

300

Episode 300

That's how Yoo Seong-un met Jeong Hae-un.

“…….”

“Meteor Gardener?”

“Oh, yes.”

Why?

'Is there a curse in my life?'

It was just 28 hours ago that I placed the golden artwork painted by my precious portrait in my home.

As he was mentally preparing himself to 'go to the snowfield together' after finishing up urgent work, an unimaginable being came to see him, let alone being mentally prepared for it.

“Why did Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un come to see me?”

“I’m sorry for the sudden visit.”

Gardener Jeong Hae-un apologized with an embarrassed look on his face. As expected, his attitude was affectionate and polite.

“This might be a really stupid thing to say, but I really don’t want to run into the leader of the Bisabal guild….”

“I understand.”

Certainly, the Symbol of Eternity and the Bisabal were not on good terms. Even in Yoo Seong-un’s opinion, his guild leader enjoyed life too much. He enjoyed it to the point of being a bit precarious. It was understandable that the Symbol of Eternity, who was in charge of protecting the Earth, was reluctant.

'No matter how much you say it's true, it's not like it's not true.'

If there was a conflict between the collector and someone else, there was a 96% chance that it was a problem with the visa. Yoo Seong-un couldn't ignore that data value either. But there was another reason why he was so flustered.

Yoo Seong-un looked around.

“…Why in a dungeon?”

“I’m sorry that this isn’t a nice cafe or a neat reception room, but there’s no place more convenient for gardeners to have conversations than a dungeon.”

“I understand what you mean by that too.”

Aren't they gardeners who are sensitive to mystery? When they reach a certain level, there are times when they feel more comfortable in the mystery than on Earth. It's easy to adjust this way and that. It's also perfect for not leaving behind any evidence.

In many ways.

'The only thing that bothers me is that this is a four-legged rainforest.'

Isn't this a place where the water birds, Geo's limbs, are spread out everywhere? Of course, Yoo Seong-un was on the side of my work, but at the same time, he was on the side of the Earth. I couldn't neglect Jeong Hae-un, the guardian of the Earth and the adult gardener.

He looked around.

“I’m sure I’m the only one in this area right now. Feel free to speak, Guild Leader Jeong Hae-woon.”

“Yes, once again, I apologize for the sudden visit. I know it would be polite to schedule an official meeting, but I came to see you in a hurry like this. If you allow me to do so, I will compensate you later.”

“No, everyone on Earth knows that you are always busy.”

It was clearly rude to visit hunters without prior notice. It was one of the unspoken traditions that arose during the Great Calamity when people were killing and slaughtering each other.

No matter who comes, how can the person welcoming them know whether the other person is an assassin or not?

'but….'

If the opponent was Jeong Hae-un, it was an exception.

'I don't have time.'

It just doesn't exist. It doesn't exist physically. Even if you look for it with your eyes wide open, it's not just not there at all; it's just a negative balance on your bank account.

'For someone like that to come looking for a specific person would be a significant loss… If he had to come to me while risking that much loss, there would be only one topic he could share.'

Yoo Seong-un, who had gathered his thoughts, asked.

“…Did you come here because of ‘Portrait of Geo’?”

“Oh, no. I’m embarrassed to have to make you speak first. Yes, it’s embarrassing to be so rude to a junior and then get straight to the point… but I have a question about the work I’m currently working on.”

“I’m fine, so you can get straight to the point. I think it would be better for Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un if we wrap up the story quickly. So, what exactly is…?”

“Is that the source?”

“…….”

This was a little disconcerting.

“I didn’t know you would ask me so directly.”

“Ah, I see. I understand a little now.”

“Could it be that I was not managing my work well…?”

“There is no problem with Gardener Yoo Seong-un, so you don’t have to worry. However, I saw ‘Sergio Hunter’ myself a few days ago, and I felt the same way.”

"aha…."

I guess the perspective of a senior from a distant past is different.

“I was able to recognize that fact only after observing for quite some time. I feel ashamed to feel this way about my shortcomings. I will work harder in the future.”

“The meteor gardener is doing really well. Don’t be shy, everyone has different things to do and can do… How can everyone always share the same vision?”

Gardener Jeong Hae-woon, who had been speaking softly, asked.

“How much do you know?”

“I know the story of ‘Teacher Sergio’.”

“From beginning to end?”

“I don’t think it’ll be to that extent….”

“At least you know that he is involved in a ‘promise’.”

“Yes, I’m sorry, but that’s true. Was that rude?”

“I think it would be more correct to say competent rather than rude.”

Jeong Hae-woon was proud of his easygoing demeanor. He was a talented person who knew how to make others feel comfortable. It was hard to imagine him being the 'bad boy' that Geo had mentioned.

He continued to speak.

“I think it was largely thanks to my background and that ‘promise’. It was quite easy for me to find out about the work that Gardener Yoo Seong-un was in charge of. I hope you don’t worry, because it would be difficult to find out the truth if you weren’t like me.”

And then he said.

“The gardens have been suffering from a fever recently.”

“Yes, my snow field too….”

“They say that the ground hardens after the rain. I judged this as a kind of growing pain, or something similar. If the work of Gardener Yoo Seong-un is truly intertwined with the source, I came to see you because I wondered if there was any reaction from you.”

“I guess you think I’m that close to ‘Sergio Hunter’.”

“I thought it was a well-known story that the two of you were close even at official events, but well. I also know the personality of ‘Sergio Hunter’, so I am sure of that.”

“…He is a very friendly friend….”

I was a little embarrassed.

“…I think I had a fever before that too. Could it be my imagination?”

“No, the garden has been feeling unstable for a while now. It just seemed to explode at some point. I just wondered if there was something triggering it near that point.”

“It’s an opportunity… um….”

It's not like Yoo Seong-un didn't think about that either.

"…uh…."

But the conclusion has not yet been reached.

“This is difficult. There are too many things to consider.”

That makes sense, because the opponent was 'Portrait of Geo'. It is the Eye of Origin.

Recently, several egos have been added to that being, and he has been touching various mysteries such as dungeons and monsters, and has also revealed himself by meeting his old disciples and participating in parades. There were countless other reasons for the garden to be agitated.

'Or is it some kind of audit?'

It sounded plausible.

'It's possible that the gardeners got nervous and got chills after noticing

Geo's visit due to the nature of the body part called the eye… If you think about the fact that they became even more organized after the chills, it makes sense.'

But this wasn't clear either. Even the garden of the meteor cloud wasn't exactly 'perfect' after the body aches. It just needed a little less work.

'If it was a gesture of gratitude from a truly high-ranking person, I think it would still be tense rather than lively… I don't know for sure since I haven't been in the garden's shoes.'

No, it doesn't seem like there would be no influence at all, but it didn't seem like this was the only 'cause of the incident' that Gardener Jeong Hae-un was talking about.

The gardener knew only the existence of the source, not its exact structure. If he had to guess, his imagination would be infinite.

It was indeed a difficult task. Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently.

“…I’ve looked into it again, but it’s still complicated, so I’m sorry I can’t give you an answer right away. It’s rude to be this rude to someone who is busy.”

“I’m sorry, but even just responding so actively right now is a huge help. Strictly speaking, isn’t this also overtime work?”

“It’s similar, right?”

“I’m the one who caused the trouble, and I’m the one who needs help. If possible, could I ask for some advice?”

“…First of all, um….”

Yoo Seong-un spoke as if making an excuse.

“…There were signs of this before. The mysteries of the Earth are growing, but there are few people to organize them, so this must have been the future that all gardeners had anticipated. Also, this… Recently, several dungeons have been destroyed."

"Everyone knows that this dungeon is related to the 'Portrait of Geo'."

"That's right, considering that this portrait is close to the original, it couldn't be helped. When I saw it, it seemed half intentional, but I'm not sure exactly. He's such a clueless guy."

"Well… I understand that you weren't that easy on me when I met you in person."

"Thank you. So, it wasn't at the level of a fever until just before 'Dream Park'. It wasn't like the whole garden was bustling like before."

Yoo Seong-woon slowly went back in time to the voice that gently comforted and guided him. There were some points that could be expected even without doing this, but he couldn't just talk nonsense in front of gardener Jeong Hae-woon.

What he has to find is a time when instability is truly exploding.

'The time when I was most busy with garden and mystery work.'

Yoo Seong-un, who had been thinking deeply, cleared his throat and spoke.

"…As expected, that, closed school…."

"…Closed school?"

"Yes, my portrait has made a nest in the abandoned school."

"Oh, no."

"I think that's when it really started."

“I just understood what you meant.”

Jeong Hae-woon smiled faintly.

“It seems that Mr. Yoo Seong-un is a ‘person concerned.’”

“Oh? Oh, yes. Are you related?”

“As you know, all memories and information related to it have been erased. I, too, only know of the existence of that creepy tale thanks to the favor of the Hunter Association President, but my exact memory… isn’t that much…”

“…The few people who remember are the ‘people involved.’”

“I guess that’s my own standard. If everyone really forgets, there won’t be anyone to take care of things if something goes wrong. I can trust and leave it to Yoo Seong-un, the gardener.”

“Then, have all the symbols of eternity forgotten the existence of that abandoned school nest?”

“At least you and President Danhae have forgotten about me.”

And then Jeong Hae-woon smiled brightly.

“That’s too bad.”

“…….”

It was a word with a strange resonance. A sound that was somewhat twisted.

‘… It’s a gardener’s specialty.’

An S-class hunter and the first gardener on Earth. A human who is closer to being mysterious than anyone else. Even a single voice can be colorful, but it can also be not. That was the gardener.

It should look like a swan. It should look like the surface of a frozen river. It should not reveal its inner self. Otherwise, the gardener may eventually be eaten by mystery or be ruined by it… .

'I don't even know what's true or false.'

Gardeners had to be like that. Those who easily reveal themselves easily reveal their gardens, and in doing so they confuse the world and eventually become part of its mystery. They had to be contradictory.

“…Do you have any further questions?”

“I understand what you have just said. I sincerely thank you for your valuable time. I will try to repay you privately… Is there anything you would like?”

“Then I would like to ask you a question.”

“As much as you want.”

“What do you plan to do with ‘Portrait of Geo’?”

“Well, yes. I think it’s a topic that any gardener would be curious about. That’s a good question.”

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been thinking for a moment, answered obediently.

“…I will treat it as a mystery.”

“Do you hate him?”

“I like it quite a bit, for me.”

“Can a mystery so close to humanity be called human?”

“You can call it, human life is short and mystery appears and disappears in an instant.”

“I plan to bring him into my garden in a few days.”

“That’s… quite interesting.”

Jeong Hae-woon smiled politely.

“Does he treat you well?”

“You are being very kind to me, it is a very friendly portrait.”

“I hope this relationship lasts a long time.”

“Why?”

“So that the mystery story doesn’t expand on a larger scale.”

"okay."

And then he asked the last question.

“What would happen if the garden were revealed to the world without any side effects?”

“I don’t know if I could call it Earth back then… but that would have its own meaning. People would adapt.”

“Thank you for your answer.”

Yoo Seong-un's questions ended here.

'The rest is up to me to think about.'

He then smiled innocently.

“I hope you will be at peace in the future.”

“I think it will probably be like that.”

“Is there a reason?”

“Didn’t you say it was a very kind portrait?”

“Yes, that’s true, but….”

“And it’s a portrait of loving the Earth.”

Jeong Hae-woon bowed his head slightly and said goodbye.

“I believe that at least things will get better.”

“It’s important, faith.”

“Then I will visit you often.”

"ah…."

Before I could say anything, Jeong Hae-woon disappeared.

“…….”

It's the same as when it first appeared.

'He's a ghostly person.'

Since ghosts are also a type of mystery, in a way it wasn't wrong.

Yoo Seong-un looked around. The stable four-legged rainforest was full of life with its own ecosystem. Sometimes, a sprout would grow from the ground and sway, or a transparent water bird would stare at a fruit in its beak.

Between the bushes, a dragonfly with a flowery face poked out. The guys huddled together tilted their heads and went back into the bushes.

“…Ugh.”

It's cute though.

‘… It grew again in the meantime. I hope the source’s influence didn’t reach here as well… .’

A groan came out like a sigh.

“When are you getting off work?”

It was fucking overtime.

* * *

“Seo Seo-hee.”

His visit was more unexpected than usual.

“…Jeong Hae-un.”

“Is he still coming to see you?”

“What are you talking about all of a sudden?”

“Answer first.”

Jeong Hae-woon immediately went to see Seo Seo-hee and asked with a fierce, hardened face.

“Is he still looking for you?”

“…No, I said I was going to rest for the time being.”

“You, never, never….”

Both hands were tightly gripping my shoulders and the tone was sharp and murderous. It seemed like he was angry, but upon closer inspection, it wasn't.

“Don’t ever ask him about it. Can you? I believe you will.”

I was covered in cold sweat.

“…Are you not going to tell me what happened?”

“Yeah, I won’t tell even if I die soon.”

“You don’t look like your usual self these days. Where’s all your bravado?”

It's an unfamiliar situation.

“What are you afraid of, Master Sergio?”

“Don’t say that. Names are important to Shinbi, you know that.”

“Do you think the Earth is going to be destroyed?”

“It’s not impossible.”

“Where have you been just now?”

“Fucking school.”

“What did you find out and why did you come here, Jeong Hae-woon?”

“The sins we committed.”

“…….”

“…to that human, we, we knew what we did that day. So….”

Seo Seo-hee asked next.

“Don’t you want to know?”

“Fuck, I have no idea what that thing is trying to do…!”

"calm down."

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon exhaled and said.

“I, I… I’m going to forget from now on.”

“Are you going to Hara?”

“You and I are different, so I’m not asking you to do this.”

“Okay, I won’t do anything stupid like you’re worried about.”

“Okay then.”

And then soon Jeong Hae-un disappeared.

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee smiled awkwardly.

“…Ha, that’s like a dog….”

The guild leader nearby, Kang Eun-seong, asked.

“…Should I erase my memories too?”

“There’s no need for that. Even though you saw Kang Eun-seong here, you didn’t say anything, Hae-un.”

“You seem very confused, so maybe that’s why you didn’t pay attention to me.”

“Even though he looked absent-minded, he wasn’t so out of it that he didn’t notice Kang Eun-seong’s presence. It’s okay, he’s not that thoughtless.”

“Yes, I understand.”

Kang Eun-seong, who had been hesitating, spoke carefully.

“You look unwell.”

“Yeah, the lunch box was delicious….”

“I don’t think it would be okay to even receive that level of favor.”

“I wonder what it will be like?”

Then he smiled as usual.

“Haven’t you heard from Sergio Hunter yet?”

“Yes, there isn’t.”

“I think that’s okay. If the distance between us is this vague.”

“Isn’t the reason Guild Leader Jeong Hae-woon told us not to find out something about our past relationship? If we only consider the recent relationships, I dare say there won’t be a problem.”

“Yeah, so… it’s okay.”

What kind of person were you in the past?

'What a good person he was, and what happened to us. What was wrong, if any, if it was a sin?'

I tried to live an old dream, but it seems like even that isn't possible.

A familiar resignation sets in.

'... Yeah, I was originally going to just live like this. I decided to live without bringing up things like the past. Otherwise, the Earth's system might get twisted somehow... I'll just meet up with a nice person I can talk to often and have a meal or something like that.'

But what makes me feel bad is that I don’t even have a chance to reflect… .

“…….”

…let's not think about it.

* * *

An error occurred

Recovery in progress_0%

Recovery Complete_100%

…….

Taran

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (301)

301

Episode 301

And Yoo Seong-un left work.

“As I live, I realize that there is such a thing as leaving work.”

“So you didn’t usually leave work?”

“It’s similar.”

It feels like I've come home after about 100 years.

“Okay, what should we do now?”

Geo answered firmly to Yoo Seong-un who asked with a blank face and a smile.

“Have a meal.”

“Where are you, a starving ghost? Why are you so obsessed with food? What’s your problem?”

“I’m very sorry that you seem to be very excited, but saying something like that only makes me worried. I think it would be best for you to get some rest for now.”

“Is my appearance that ugly?”

Yoo Seong-un nodded after checking his hand mirror.

“It’s scary.”

“I am glad that you readily acknowledge it.”

“Ha, I said I would finish it as quickly as possible….”

“Wouldn’t that have been the problem?”

Geo felt sorry for the tired office worker. It’s not like I’m going to run away just because I’m late. I don’t understand why he would insist on increasing the intensity of the work by himself.

Geo asked cautiously, feeling worried.

“Did you eat on time?”

“I eat my meals regularly.”

“What did you eat?”

“Uh… a sandwich.”

“You call that a meal?”

“There was no specific provision in our contract regarding the type of meal.”

“Wow, this is so detailed.”

I decided to acknowledge that it was food.

'It's not a seven-course meal, but it's a great dish that's easy to carry around and eat.'

Although he wished he could eat rice four times a day, Geo knew that was too greedy.

As Yoo Seong-un took off his coat, Geo accepted it. It looked like he didn't even have the strength to straighten his coat.

“Why were you so busy?”

“I was busy as a hunter, busy as a curator, busy as a gardener….”

“Just hearing it makes me think it’ll be a lot of work.”

“Even if I stop receiving a salary, there are still things I need to do as a gardener.”

"for a moment."

Geo raised his hand and stopped the meteor shower.

“Don’t gardeners get paid?”

“Huh? Oh… That’s right. Strictly speaking, it’s not a salary.”

“Does this mean you are receiving something other than a salary?”

“Because if you submit a research plan, the government will provide support in the amount requested.”

“Thank goodness it wasn’t unpaid.”

“Did our government just almost come into danger…?”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

'My disciple is the president. I don't think he would try to overthrow him.'

anyway.

“Still… Compared to before, there’s definitely less work to do. I heard that not only my snow garden but also the gardens of other gardeners have stabilized a lot. This time, I guess I was just unlucky because it overlapped with the work of the collector.”

“Then, Mr. Yoo Seong-un, have you been cleaning the snowfield?”

“No, I wanted to show you that part… I went around here and there to meet other gardeners. I don’t have anything urgent to do. I promised to go with you to the snowfield maintenance.”

“Thank you for your concern.”

Geo thought.

'I don't think it was really a promise, but whatever.'

It was a good thing there was still something to enjoy.

“So, there’s nothing urgent for the time being?”

“I guess so, since I dragged you across the river and took care of the work that you were waving your hand at from afar. Of course, I don’t know what would happen if another natural disaster occurred on Earth, but for now. In fact, if you just stayed quiet, Geo….”

“I have always been quiet.”

“Thanks for the clever joke, I work for a living hearing things like this.”

“You’re quite humble. They say the future is unknown, but I have no intention of taking action right now.”

“Is this a prophecy of sarcasm? An indirect expression of intent to act soon? Should I just be nervous?”

“My capricious will to act is not important. I am more curious about Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s garden.”

“Then come to my house right now…!”

“It’s no problem at all to take you to Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s house, but as I said earlier, I’m not saying that you should go to the garden right away. Please rest for now.”

Yoo Seong-un had said that he would show Geo the 'work of gardening'. Even so, after all that hard work, he came back and asked for another task. It was clear that his brain was overloaded from all that work.

'Is this the modern office worker?'

As expected, it was a scary world.

“Do you need a blanket?”

“No, it’s not that cold today….”

“Don’t you need it?”

“It would be nice if it existed.”

And then, as if it had been waiting, the teddy bear came over and handed me a blanket.

“Kyuu.”

"oh my god."

"dream?"

“No, thank you.”

Since it was a blanket made of a huge amount of fur, the teddy bear sun god was practically invisible. It was almost as if the blanket was walking by itself, but anyway, Yoo Seong-un felt embarrassed and wrapped the blanket around his body.

“Oh… it’s warm….”

Geo asked, sitting down on the sofa with the melting meteor cloud.

“Don’t you need a flower cart?”

“What on earth are you trying to make me into?”

“You have come too far to be wary now, so eat when it is given to you.”

“You really leave people speechless.”

By the way, the flower cart was followed by water birds that flew in.

“I… I feel like I’ve seen this scene somewhere….”

“Where and what did you see?”

“It’s clearly written in the materials before the Great Disaster… I don’t remember very well.”

“I don’t know exactly what you saw, but it must have been something very cute and adorable. You must have thought of my lovely waterfowl friends, right?”

“Ah, it feels similar… but… like a person with great vitality who receives help from small animals… where birds fly in and help with daily life…”

“Isn’t it me?”

“…That’s true.”

Yoo Seong-un gave up on further thoughts and enjoyed his convalescent life inside the portrait.

“What will I be in my next life, Geoya?”

“A rich family’s beloved cat?”

“Looking at the strangely detailed information, is this my fate?”

“Well, isn’t it kind of fun to grow up being loved without having to take responsibility for anything?”

“At least I won’t have to work overtime… But I’m a good person, so please bear with it.”

“…? Yes, I understand.”

Geo added, sitting on the floor near the sofa where Yoo Seong-un was lying.

“For your information, my next life will be as a rich man’s stone.”

“It’s already been decided? No, it’s not even a piece of sculpture, it’s a stone? A rich man’s stone? Why on earth?”

“Because I don’t have any thoughts.”

“If you turn into a stone… then… you can’t be called a stone….”

“Then what do you call it?”

“What, what is it now? It’s like the wedge of disaster.”

“Can a single stone become so threatening?”

“You can do it. Believe in yourself. Trust me who believes in you.”

“I didn’t want to believe it this way.”

Anyway, it was a fun conversation that got the screws off.

“Where did you finish your meal?”

“But I still ate the second one.”

“What time was that?”

“It was three hours ago… so it must have been around lunchtime.”

“Then let’s have dinner.”

“Will I be a pig in my next life?”

“I don’t know why you are so obsessed with the next life.”

“Oh, not really. Is it something like white or blue?”

“Is that your taste? If you’d like, I can help you find a spot.”

“I don’t really want to.”

“I really don’t know how to react.”

This guy has been working overtime all day and now he's spouting out nonsense. His words are incoherent and illogical. Geo looked at Yoo Seong-un, who had turned into a zombie, with pitying eyes and turned his head away.

His gaze was fixed on the kitchen.

“How far have you come in finding out?”

“What… What, what are we signing? What should I do?”

“Food. Tell me what you want and I’ll try my best to make it.”

“Anything is fine, as long as it’s edible for people.”

“If you look at it that way, people can eat stones.”

“Oh, that’s true. Then something that humans can normally eat would be good.”

“Hmm.”

Geo rubbed his chin.

“Vegetables, seafood, meat….”

“I want to eat meat….”

“Meat… Barbecue? There’s no menu that tastes more meaty than that.”

“No, something like boiled pork… in a rough way…”

“I will show you that even barbecue can be as tender as boiled pork. Feel the energy of the master of the sea and the current sun god.”

“I have no idea what to make, but I wonder if I can just have some boiled pork with some kimchi or tofu or something.”

“I wish you had said this from the beginning.”

Anyway, this family has to nag to get a proper answer. Seriously, there is no such thing as 'anything' in this world. Geo stood up from his seat with a pious heart.

He called Dana.

"daughter."

“Aaaaah….”

“Let’s go slaughter pigs.”

"meow."

A happy cat can even hunt pigs.

* * *

“I can’t believe there are such crazy pigs in the world.”

“I’m glad you enjoyed the meal.”

“This is really delicious, Geoya….”

The meat was chewy and the flesh was spread out like silk along the grain, so there was no other heavenly food like it.

“No, is that right?”

“What are you talking about?”

“I’m not dead yet, so let’s pretend it’s not true.”

“Yes, Mr. Yoo Seong-un is alive and well.”

“Thank you for the certification.”

Moreover, it was really amazing that the meat juices were overflowing even though it was boiled in water. It had an amazing taste and texture. It had a deep and unique blend of spices, but it didn't sting my nose or make me feel dizzy.

The simple but solid foundation of boiled pork had an excellent partner called kimchi.

“Are you making kimchi these days? Freshly made kimchi tastes really good. It has a lot of red pepper powder in it. It’s been a while since I had red kimchi, but this is really refreshing.”

“I recently received a few heads of cabbage from Juhyun. I had also dried some peppers in the sun and made them into powder. So I made kimchi with them and dug a hole in a corner of the garden and buried a jar there.”

“Then why isn’t this one ripe? As far as I know, it was a few weeks ago that Joohyun gave me the cabbage as a gift. It’s crunchy and sweet, like it was just pickled….”

“I wish some of them were unripe.”

“It seems you have no intention of explaining the principle either.”

“I just don’t know.”

The most plausible guess was that it was because it was a portrait. If you paint a picture of kimchi and leave it alone, it won't become old. In the end, it seemed like he had no choice but to follow the wishes of Geo, the owner and the artist.

“I brought the ripe ones stir-fried. And this is the tofu I made this morning….”

“Aren’t you thinking of opening a restaurant?”

“I think about that sometimes, but I don’t think I have the energy for it yet.”

Geo shook his head.

“I feel like I’ll eat all the food before it even leaves the restaurant for the guests.”

“Then it is difficult.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“I thought you would do well if you opened something like a side dish shop.”

“I’m good at everything.”

“I know.”

“And Guild Leader Seo Seo-hee also made a similar claim.”

“Yeah, what did he say?”

“Are you thinking of opening a restaurant?”

“People really all think the same way….”

How absurd must that person have been?

‘Well, it seems like Geo is adjusting it well… .’

I didn't think, 'If I eat the food here, something terrible will happen,' like I used to. But that was only confirmed by meteors, so other people would have been anxious.

Anyway, the meal was delicious, as always.

“So, shall we go see our garden now?”

“You should digest it and sleep before moving on.”

“Are you raising me now?”

In this way, Yoo Seong-un was able to return to perfect condition.

* * *

“…….”

And Yoo Seong-un was dumbfounded.

“Geo, what is all this?”

“That’s what happened.”

“What are all these guys…?”

Snow rabbit friends appeared in his snowy field.

“I gave up on making it.”

“Ah, what do I do with this Midas touch?”

“Is that the right word to use in that situation?”

“It’s even more absurd because it’s so cute.”

The elaborate rabbits made of snow were looking up at Yoo Seong-un and Geo. Yoo Seong-un, who was embarrassed by the bright eyes, soon flinched and trembled.

“…Uh, wait a minute.”

“Yes, just a moment.”

“Do I have to raise these kids too?”

“We will share the burden of child support.”

“Save me.”

The reason things got to this point was because we had to turn back time.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (302)

302

Episode 302

First, the meteor was delivered to the house.

“Can I come inside?”

“When you say it like that, it seems like the kind of mystery that requires permission to enter.”

“It is common courtesy to ask permission before visiting someone else’s home.”

“Well, that’s true… Come in.”

And Geo came too.

“It’s still a desolate house.”

“But isn’t it a little better since there’s a picture hanging?”

“It has become more desolate.”

“This is the picture you drew.”

“It’s not that it’s not true.”

“Look at his tenacity.”

There Geo asked.

“How does a gardener visit his own garden?”

“The method varies slightly from gardener to gardener. Some visit through dreams, some designate a door as a passage, and others pray to the garden to call them… It requires some agreement.”

“What about Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“Strictly speaking, it is the garden that calls me.”

Yoo Seong-un raised both his hands.

“If you clap your hands three times like this, you can enter the garden. Oh, of course, clapping alone won’t do it. You have to clap your hands in a way that overlaps the top and bottom like now to meet the condition.”

“Is there a special meaning to three rounds of applause?”

“Usually, if you’re not conscious of it, you don’t clap more than three times, right? You often clap once or twice to get someone’s attention. If you really want to be that picky, four or five times would be better, but that’s too much trouble.”

“So, does the body move along with the mind?”

“It varies slightly from gardener to gardener, but I tend to move my entire body. Most gardeners prefer this method unless there is a special reason. You never know what might end up in the empty body.”

He crossed his arms.

“But right now, there’s a passageway that catches my eye….”

“Would you like to come this way too, Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“Since this is my first time entering with you, I think it would be better to be a little more cautious. I will enter as usual, and you can come in after me. If the gardener goes first and checks the situation, it will be easier to deal with any changes.”

“Do whatever you want, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

"then…."

Clap, clap, clap.

Three rounds of applause.

“See you later.”

The meteor cloud soon disappeared.

“…….”

“Kkurung.”

“It looks convenient.”

Geo and Honey looked at it and admired it.

He waited a moment for the meteor to arrive in the garden. It seemed to move in an instant, but he had to take his time. Then he entered the frame.

What unfolded before my eyes was a vast snowy field.

“……?”

It wasn't particularly cold.

“Is this like an ice warehouse?”

“Kugugugu….”

“Oh, it’s frozen.”

“Gurrrr.”

“This is also a familiar situation.”

Geo didn't feel cold. He just felt the cool breeze blowing. He would have liked to rely on Honey, but he didn't have to. It was fortunate that it was less troublesome.

Geo touched the honey that had turned to ice.

“Do you think you can fly well?”

“Gulp.”

“It’s been a long time since I’ve seen you like this.”

Honey was still flying freely. The only difference was that her wings, which had always been indistinguishable from her body, were now clearly visible. Her long peacock-like tail feathers fluttered like hard beads.

'Anyway, there's nothing wrong.'

Geo saw the snowfield.

“…It’s really wide.”

“Cur.”

Honey agreed.

“It will definitely be very different from the ‘garden’ we know.”

When people think of a garden, they usually think of a space filled with flowers and trees. In that place, the job of the gardener is clear. But what do gardeners manage in these gardens?

And soon Geo realized.

“…….”

Oh, yeah.

“…Where is Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“Kung kkung kkung kkung….”

“Are we lost now?”

“Gurrrr….”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un…!”

The meteor cloud was not visible.

Where on earth did this fragile portrait go? No matter how much Honey looked around, there was no meteor cloud. There was no way it had been deleted in the middle of the process, so there was only one answer.

“I guess we got here first.”

“Crunch.”

“This is a mess.”

So Geo was left abandoned.

“…….”

“…….”

“Should we make a snowman?”

In the end, I decided to enjoy this moment.

How many times in life will you have such a novel experience? Even if there were hundreds or thousands of times left, it wouldn't change the surprise and newness of the present. Geo was filled with confidence.

“It was fun to get together with the kids and make a 3m tall snowman when the school playground was full of snow.”

“Kung…?”

“It snowed a lot that day. We brought all the snow we could find. Other students who saw us making snow on the playground also ate lunch quickly and came out to help us… That was also a really memorable experience.”

“Gulp.”

“In that sense, how about making a snowman?”

“Kung.”

“Then snow duck….”

“Kung.”

“Well, it’s not an environment where people or ducks can live.”

Geo was a great adult who knew how to care for even the sculptures made of snow. If a person lives, they need food, clothing, and shelter, and if a duck lives, they need water. There was nothing here.

Geo, who had been thinking carefully, soon narrowed down the animals to a few types. They were mostly friends who lived in caves.

"white bear?"

“Kung kung kung….”

“Well, it would take a while to make. Then how about a fox?”

“Kung?”

“That’s big too? Then what about the rabbit?”

“Gulp.”

“You’re not that big either.”

So Geo sat down on the ground, no, on the snow. Under the snowy field where the blizzard was swirling and the aurora was swaying, Geo started to collect snow. Since he was already making it, he wanted to make it well.

'If you make it with snow, it's easy to break later and it's environmentally friendly, so it won't be a problem for Mr. Yoo Seong-un.'

With that in mind, Geo ends up creating 194 elaborate snow rabbits.

* * *

So we come back to the beginning again.

“I was bored while I was away, so I made a snow rabbit like this….”

“At first I was going to build it and then destroy it.”

“If my eyes aren’t working, why aren’t these guys moving?”

“That’s what happened.”

Geo was very sorry.

“I apologize again. There is a way to move these guys to our icehouse.”

“I don’t know if our snowfield can be moved there….”

“Does it count as the snowfield moving even though only rabbits are moving?”

“These guys are also made from the flesh of the snowfield.”

“When you say flesh, it sounds a little scary.”

Have I ever made a rabbit out of flesh?

“But I didn’t know I would be alive and moving like this.”

Even if you make a pig out of meat from a butcher shop, it doesn't mean that it will become a living, breathing pig. That was the way it was on Earth, and Geo thought so too. But he had to admit that he was being reckless.

After all, it is not the law of the earth that paint a bird with paint and it becomes a living, breathing water bird.

“I’m sorry, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“Uh… I have a lot to say. But you didn’t know until you made 194, right?”

“When I made it and put it in its place, it just stayed there as it was made….”

“And then when I arrived, it suddenly started moving?”

“Yes, what Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is correct.”

I thought maybe he was just being pretentious.

“…Okay, I understand.”

Yoo Seong-un accepted reality like that.

“I was a bit scared, but I don’t think Seolwon was that angry or anything like that. I didn’t know he would be this quiet, but it seems like Geo-ni is getting special treatment.”

“Why should you favor me?”

“You deserve some favoritism.”

Let's say a person overeats. What kind of protest can the stomach, burdened by such a thing, make? In fact, 'Geo's Portrait' and Yoo Seong-un's Garden could be said to be one body.

'It's stranger if a problem arises when you say you're going to take care of your own body.'

I'm not sure if this is an accurate metaphor, but Yoo Seong-un still didn't know what the relationship was between 'Portrait of Geo' and the gardens.

'What kind of relationship is this? Master and slave? Boss and subordinate? Parent and child? Or are they really just parts of the same body?'

For now, even his snowfield didn't respond at all. I thought there would be some kind of sign when Geo visited, but this was a bit unexpected.

After gathering his thoughts, Yoo Seong-woon smiled again.

“I know that you will be paying a generous amount of child support.”

“Of course, I will come by periodically and groom you. You won’t have to worry about anything.”

“It’s like the son who brought a street animal home without permission… Well, then what?”

I just thought that the garden view had been enhanced by one.

'I don't know if it's okay to brush it off like that.'

Even if a problem arose, it would be a matter of mystery and mystery, so it was not something for Yoo Seong-un, who was only a gardener, to worry about.

“…Then do you want to see the snowfield being cleaned up? No, have you already seen everything there is to see?”

“That’s not true. I was so busy making snow rabbits while waiting for Mr. Yoo Seong-un that I couldn’t even enjoy other places.”

“I don’t know why I did that, but I’ll apologize first. I’m sorry. I didn’t know it would take this long because I had no way to objectively measure the time it took to get to the snowfield.”

“I don’t think Mr. Yoo Seong-un needs to apologize, but thank you for your consideration.”

“Then let’s move slowly….”

Yoo Seong-un, who was about to move his feet, stopped and froze.

“…Geo, don’t you think they’re following you?”

“It seems like you want to appreciate Mr. Yoo Seong-un for a long time.”

“What are you going to do with me by appreciating me?”

Even though he said that, I understood. The basic attitude of 'Portrait of Geo' toward humans was also 'appreciation'. Since it was a mystery that he created, he had no choice but to have a similar attitude.

'... Then what should we define these rabbits as? First of all, they must belong to one type of Geo's children. Are they also children of my snowy fields? Small gardens that I have to take care of...?'

It was rare for a 'creature' to move like this to appear in the garden. It is said that there are 'creatures' that play a role similar to a gatekeeper or a butler, but this is not an area that Yoo Seong-un knows well.

'I should contact the elders as soon as I have time. What should I do to get along with these rabbits?'

Leaving behind his uneasiness, Yoo Seong-un guided Geo.

“First of all… there’s nothing special about what a gardener does. He just walks around every corner of the garden, listens to stories, and grants them what they want. If you think of it as a kind of work of art, maybe it’s easier to understand?”

“I understand that management is necessary.”

“Yes, that’s right. Manager. But on a snowy day like today, you have to concentrate quite a bit to hear the voice of Seolwon. In fact, even if it’s a voice, it’s more like understanding and accepting the master’s will as a gardener….”

“Is it difficult to describe?”

“…Honestly, it’s a bit like that. I’ve never tried to explain this to a non-gardener, and gardeners basically know this feeling well, so there’s not much to explain. I don’t know how to express this feeling that the garden requires of me.”

It was a whisper. Or a visible sign, or an invisible wall that could only be recognized when faced with it. It was too light to be an oracle from a god, and too heavy to be the tantrum of a child.

But this place was clearly a garden.

“Think of a typical garden. If you leave it unattended for a long time, it will become unsightly. It’s the same here. You have to keep an eye on things like the time and the weather so that the flowers and trees don’t wither, grow too thick, or get sick.”

The meteor cloud stopped at some point, got down on one knee, and swept the floor.

“Today’s work is scheduled to take place down here.”

“What a cold sheet of ice. Is there sea water underneath? Or is it just ice?”

“It looks to me like it’s in the shape of water… Hmm, that won’t do.”

Knock knock knock.

The ice broke with a dull noise.

“Sometimes problems arise like this.”

“Is there a problem?”

“The snowfield must remain frozen at all times. It must be the coldest, the most static, and it must never flow….”

“That’s a snowfield.”

“That’s right, it shouldn’t melt.”

Yoo Seong-un said, looking at the hole that had grown sufficiently large.

“So you have to freeze it.”

“Are you back?”

“Do you want to go together?”

"…yes."

That day, Geo saw the sea turning into a glacier.

The waves that had been flowing, daring to overcome the cold, stopped and soon froze… .

* * *

“Are you dead?”

“No, gardeners in the garden don’t die from things like this.”

“I thought you were part of the glacier.”

“It must have actually happened that way, from what I can see.”

“Aren’t you cold?”

“It’s so cold I want to die.”

“You love this snowy field.”

“It will be like this even after I die.”

“The gardener….”

Geo expressed his appreciation.

“You must be lonely.”

“…Actually, that’s a bit like that.”

It was too big here and the people were small.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (303)

303

Episode 303

Inside a small igloo.

“I never thought I would live to see a bonfire in a snowy field.”

As Yoo Seong-un, lying on the floor like a patient, smiled awkwardly, Geo, who was stacking dry branches on the campfire, nodded.

“It’s a romantic situation.”

“You wouldn’t normally look for romance in a snowy field like this, would you, Geoya?”

“So where do you all find romance?”

“Ah… this wasn’t a joke, huh.”

I was a little confused for a moment because the portrait was telling a joke that didn't seem like a joke at all.

“I don’t know what your definition of romanticism is. Is it very different from that of Earthlings?”

"earthling?"

“Korean. Maybe it’s because it’s cold, but my mouth is watering. Please understand.”

“I understand that you look really cold. I don’t have any romantic interests, like going into space and looking at stars.”

“It’s not that it’s nothing special, but the romantic scale is enormous. Well, when you think of romance, don’t you usually think of things like going camping or dreamy or romantic scenes?”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un is a more emotional person than I thought. I will keep that in mind.”

“Where are you going to use this?”

I honestly couldn't have predicted it.

“…Well, it’s nice because it’s warm.”

It was a mercy that could never be expected in a snowy field.

Yoo Seong-un rolled over. He moved his fingers, still frozen like ice, and covered the blanket Geo had given him more tightly. He felt his body temperature gradually rising, perhaps as he absorbed the heat from the campfire in front of him.

My stomach was churning.

'Is it because of the unfamiliar warmth?'

Yoo Seong-un, who had been thinking about various things with his dulled brain, blinked his eyes. When he raised his gaze slightly, he could see the portrait beyond the campfire even while lying down.

Even the light of the campfire did not dazzle its pitch-black eyes. It was a mystery that captivated the meteor cloud and the curator.

“Can you communicate with the snow field too?”

“To me, it just looks like a pure white snowfield.”

“Even though I’m talking to you so hard, you’re not ignoring me?”

“Isn’t it true that only the gardener chosen by him can hear the story of the garden?”

“Strictly speaking, there are many exceptions, but that’s not wrong. Anyway, it’s a blessing in disguise that we can light a fire like this.”

“Haven’t you ever been able to light a fire?”

“How dare a gardener do such a thing.”

That was just crazy.

“Cold and heat are polar opposites.”

“If I light a fire, will Seol-won get hurt?”

Geo saw the snow rabbits huddled together inside the igloo.

“It doesn’t melt.”

“I expected that the mystery created by the snow of my snowfield would not die easily.”

“I guess you weren’t sure about that. Is there a reason?”

“The fire you lit is different, but I think it’s a bit different….”

Yoo Seong-un laughed, holding the blanket with one hand and leaning close to the campfire with the other.

“Wow, it’s warm.”

“It’s the blessing of Prometheus.”

“I’m a bit surprised that you don’t deny their myths.”

“Isn’t that a widely known story?”

“Are you saying it in a positive way, like a side story?”

It wasn't bad.

“Anyway, I’m glad your cute snow bunnies didn’t melt. Even though it was only for a little while, I became attached to them.”

“It’s this cold, so it won’t melt easily, right?”

“Did you make it like that? I understand… How did the story end up here?”

“I asked if lighting a fire would hurt Seol-won.”

“I’m sorry I was absent-minded. Well, strictly speaking, I wasn’t hurt. I was just upset.”

The concept of ‘heat’ in this ‘snowfield’ was a bit complicated.

“In the first place, fire cannot exist here. In other words, heat cannot exist. That’s why the water under the ice rink earlier shouldn’t exist either….”

“But even if it wasn’t supposed to be like that, didn’t it still exist in the end? That’s why Mr. Yoo Seong-un froze it and it ended up in this state.”

“If that’s the case, then even the flowers and trees in a normal garden shouldn’t wither, right? Oh, of course, here, it’s not at the level of ‘it shouldn’t be done,’ but closer to the level of ‘it’s impossible.’”

“It’s contradictory.”

“Yeah, I guess. How should I explain this….”

He had never explained this to anyone before, so his head was in a mess. Or maybe his frozen brain hadn't thawed yet. The gardener slowly pondered what to say to his friend in front of him.

“…….”

It wasn't as bad of a feeling as I thought.

“…It’s a bit complicated, but, let’s do this. This snowfield is some kind of creature or organ with a will, right? In other words, it’s this area itself and its master at the same time. Most beings can’t refuse the orders of their master.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un is one of those beings who cannot refuse orders.”

“That’s right, and the ‘order’ is usually to maintain the shape of the snowfield. Make sure there is no heat. Make it still and not flowing. Make it quiet and not noisy. Yes, it’s just an order. That’s the law that was established.”

Yoo Seong-un looked at the portrait while warming himself by the fire.

“Don’t most people live like that? Even if they don’t know the laws of the country, they all live like that, and the world is designed to make it so that they can live like that… Even if they don’t know anything, they just live according to the laws.”

All ordinary gardens flowed in a similar way.

“To put it simply, ‘opening’ here is illegal.”

“Are you saying that I am committing a crime right now?”

“No, but, oh, well… Honestly, I’m not sure about that.”

If only his snowfield had shown some kind of clear reaction to the 'Portrait of Geo', I would understand. But no matter how much time passed and Geo became active, there was no sign of him saying anything.

“Hmm, I think it can be roughly divided into three cases.”

“There are three.”

“First, your actions are not recognized by the garden. Second, it is illegal, but I cannot say anything to you. Third, everything you do here is legal.”

“I just came to visit Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s secret place, so I don’t know anything, but it’s fun so that’s okay.”

“I’m glad that you’re happy.”

He laughed in vain. In Yoo Seong-woon’s personal opinion, it seemed like it would be the third time.

'If you think about how Geo's children react to this guy, well… .'

You can tell just by looking at Honey, who is currently staring at the bonfire. All of Geo's children liked Geo. Strictly speaking, Jeongwon is not Geo's child, but I thought they were somewhat similar.

'If not, I would have treated you like a boss at work. This was the second case.'

The reason I mentioned the first case is because I was thinking about the case where Geo hid himself from the garden so that it wouldn't recognize him. Often, 'Geo's Portrait' would work miracles 'unconsciously' without the gardener 'recognizing' it.

'Either way, I don't think there's any danger in the current situation. Me too, and Geo too. It's a rare comfortable situation in the snowfield.'

Just, just.

“…….”

The fire was so warm.

“Are you sleepy?”

“Oh, if you sleep at a time like this, you usually die, right? Sleeping in the garden isn’t a good choice. If your mind becomes empty, you might end up being dyed in the garden….”

“It’s not like sleeping. It seems like your body, which has accumulated fatigue, is feeling comfortable and is now asking for sleep. Fortunately, the blanket you’re wrapped around looks warm and fluffy. I can use it as a comforter.”

“Your blankets have always been fantastic as comforters. I really liked that scarf you gave me. Look, I still have it.”

“You seem to be very tired, so I will stay by your side. I will sit here and keep the campfire burning until Mr. Yoo Seong-un wakes up. I will put in some dry branches.”

“That’s a very reassuring statement.”

“Would you like to sleep?”

“…It’s a little awkward.”

I don't think this will work.

‘… Am I doing something wrong? I know it’s not, but, uh… .’

I feel anxious in unfamiliar situations.

“…….”

still.

“…Okay, I’ll sleep a little longer.”

The roar of nature gently falls on your ears as you drown in the water.

His eyelids became heavy and soon he fell asleep.

* * *

Naturally, this little igloo and campfire were Geo's creations.

“I didn’t know you could draw here either.”

“Didn’t you draw it pretty well?”

“That doesn’t mean I knew how to build an igloo with my own hands.”

Yoo Seong-un, who woke up after a long sleep, was amazed once again. This was something he had really built with his own hands.

Wasn't it like cutting through the solid snow and ice and piling them up one by one? Even though he was out of his mind from the cold, Yoo Seong-un found it so absurd. Even after waking up, the feeling was still the same.

“Why did you go to the trouble of making the igloo yourself?”

“Ultimately, igloos are made of snow and ice, so I thought it would be disrespectful to this snowy field to make them out of materials from an unfamiliar place, so that’s why I did that.”

“Following the romance from earlier, you’ve now become polite. And I have another question. Why did you make this igloo so well? You seemed so skilled at it. Was it just me who thought it was strange?”

“Oh, I’m sorry, but I don’t know why Mr. Yoo Seong-un thought that way. Doesn’t everyone build an igloo at least once in their lives?”

“I still don’t know what kind of life you’ve lived….”

“You don’t have to look into it, because I’m still living very well, showing everything about myself without hiding anything. If you’re curious about my past, just look at me.”

“Yeah, I’m always watching you.”

I think I exaggerated a bit.

‘I myself… am showing off too much.’

When I see this guy's pitch-black eyes and dungeons and stuff, I often end up running away. And sometimes, when I see him boasting about how well he can imitate humans, my lips twitch.

Yoo Seong-un unconsciously covered the corner of his mouth. He was slightly upturned because he thought this situation was funny. He thought, “Oh no,” and put his hand down again… .

“…Are we getting too close?”

“I think it’s too late to be angry now.”

“Hmm, I see. But I think it would be better to be born as a human in the next life.”

“…? I remember, you said you wanted to be born as a human in your next life too.”

“I’m so glad you remember.”

I hope you find it helpful.

“No, ha… Seriously, what should I say….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly and wiped his neck. He felt that he was also feeling nervous. However, he couldn't help but fidget.

“I’m really so unfamiliar.”

“I don’t know why you’re so anxious.”

“Does it show too much? I’m nervous about everything, including that. I feel like this isn’t right.”

“Aha, I see. I can explain that feeling very well.”

Geo looked at him with pity.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un is addicted to work now.”

“Oh, am I that kind of pervert? Have I reached a point where I enjoy it even if I can’t avoid it?”

“That’s what all workaholics are like. They work until dawn, chanting that they just need to do a little more, with a haggard face that looks like they’re going to die soon.”

“I don’t think I’m in that situation, Geo.”

“And usually, when there is no work, those people wonder. Huh? Why is it not hard?”

The meteor cloud paused.

"…uh…."

“I feel so empty. I feel anxious because the work that was a part of my life is gone. And in order to somehow resolve that feeling, I go back to work, find stability there, and my body becomes tired, and this vicious cycle repeats.”

“I don’t think I’m really that far along.”

“That’s how addicts talk.”

“No, but….”

“I now understand why Mr. Yoo Seong-un is so anxious.”

“Why are you doing this?”

“It’s not hard, so you must be strange.”

“…….”

That was a bit, I had nothing to say.

“Ah, that’s….”

“It’s hard, painful, cold, tiring and exhausting all day long, so you’re used to it, so you feel unfamiliar with it. That’s how I see it.”

“…That, that’s it.”

I felt a little embarrassed.

“But isn’t that just masochism?”

“I thought we had similar personalities since you walked the path of slavery on your own two feet.”

“Are you kidding?”

“I'm joking.”

The portrait was proud.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un has been like that from the beginning.”

“Well, what did I do…?”

“To be honest, you acted like you were going to die at any moment.”

“I think I’ve lived a pretty honest life, you know.”

“It seems like you know something differently. A person who cries when he is sad, laughs when he is happy, and rests when he is tired is honest. The area that Mr. Yoo Seong-woon mentioned seems to be closer to the ‘desire’ side.”

“…Maybe so.”

“As you said earlier, I think we’ve become quite close.”

Geo asked.

“Can you hear Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s story?”

“…You are still kind….”

It was really consistent.

This is why people always gather around you, and you end up becoming the protagonist of a miserable fate.

“…….”

Maybe it was because I was tired, but the words just came out.

“…Have you ever thought that you would be at a loss if you lived that way?”

Could it be that his self-control has become so weak because he has become so honest? Could it be the influence of the mystery? These thoughts are not at all like those of a gardener.

The portrait said.

“I’m not sure what the harm is.”

“A life where you are kind to everyone, don’t resent others indiscriminately, and don’t blame anyone. A life where you embrace your whole self and affirm the lives of others.”

“I still don’t know which one is the harm.”

“…Isn’t it too burdensome?”

“Why did that story come up?”

“Tell me your story.”

Let's talk about the story of Yoo Seong-un and the gardener.

“You will be kind.”

It would listen to you with affection. This portrait was a good listener. And a talker. Maybe it could give advice or give you a gift. That was the same as being responsible for someone's time.

Ah, suddenly Yoo Seong-un was able to understand Joo-hyun.

“I hope you aren’t influenced by me, Geo….”

“Can anyone live without being influenced?”

“You can do it.”

“I think it’s too much to ask you to be stuck in a portrait for the rest of your life.”

“You are really the same from beginning to end. That’s scary.”

It seemed like it was changing, but it was the same as before.

“I hope you don’t have a hard time.”

Because that's a disaster.

"you…."

I didn't want to see that.

“…….”

“Are we friends?”

“…Then, we’re friends.”

“Then please tell me the story now.”

“That’s very like you.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed bitterly.

“Did I say something stupid?”

“I’m glad you were concerned, but I felt like I needed a little more trust.”

“Okay, so where should we start talking?”

It's an unfamiliar situation.

The air is strangely warm, and the atmosphere is strangely bustling. I never imagined that I would be able to have such a good conversation partner with the snow rabbits in this cold and quiet snowy field.

That brings back the oldest memory.

“I was buried alive.”

It was a story chosen by Seolwon.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (304)

304

Episode 304

Yoo Seong-un continued his explanation with a smile.

“About ten years from when the first catastrophe occurred? Korea was more like a mess than a country. It was like most of the overseas countries outside of Korea were lawless areas and remote areas.”

He shrugged.

“Just know that it was a time when so many different… well, incomprehensible and illogical crimes were rampant. It tells me that what I experienced may not have had any meaning.”

"All right."

“Well, let me say, I don’t remember my earliest years very well. To be precise, there’s not much to describe. I was always locked up somewhere. It was a very dark place.”

“Was it a kidnapping?”

“Perhaps it was not so? Surely it was not the work of blood relatives. No, of course, it was not so. I know it is not entirely impossible. That was the time.”

It was a chaotic world.

“No, well, I think so.”

Actually, I don't know much about Yoo Seong-un either.

“I calculated my physical age before I joined the association. I think I was about two years old when the catastrophe broke out. I don’t know exactly when I was trapped… but at two years old, I should be able to use language and have some cognitive abilities, right?”

“Yes, I am active too.”

“When you think about it that way, it’s a bit strange. I don’t remember seeing or learning anything before that dark space. It probably started before the catastrophe even happened.”

Kidnapping and confining a newborn baby is something you would normally imagine happening after a major disaster. They say that Korea was in a state of relative peace and order before the disaster.

An awkward laugh came out.

“So, in other words, either I was kidnapped as a baby, or my parents left me that way from the beginning….”

“Is that so?”

“…But I don’t think so, because it would be even more horrible if it was my biological parents who did it. There’s also a high possibility that my memories from before I was two years old were erased for some reason.”

“I don’t really remember things from when I was young.”

“Yes. Since I was so confused and didn’t learn anything, I might have forgotten all my past memories. Without any special measures or reasons, I was just too tired.”

“That could be the case.”

“But I still don’t really know why it happened. I wonder what happened, but I’m not really that curious.”

Yoo Seong-un squinted his eyes.

“Ah… I was really hungry back then. They gave me food when I woke up, but it wasn’t enough to literally kill me.”

Even though it was a subject related to food, which portraits usually react sensitively to, Geo didn’t react at all. Yoo Seong-woon, who noticed this, cleared his throat. He recalled his faded past.

A cold, dark, earthen cave where you had to feel around to even feel food. You couldn't see anything, so you couldn't guess the passage of time, but it was clear that you had been in there for a very long time.

“I lived there like that for a few years.”

It must have been quite a long time, as my body was able to grow somewhat, albeit slowly, due to malnutrition.

“I didn’t know the language because I had nothing to see or learn, and I was wearing clothes that looked like clothes, but at the time I thought they were one of my skins. What could I do?”

That was truly ignorant.

“Then one day something unusual happened.”

“What happened?”

“I was given a very delicious meal. I don’t remember exactly what it was, but it was warm and fluffy. It was probably the first time I had ever had a proper meal. And….”

"and?"

“My world has fallen apart.”

“Did it collapse?”

“In a very physical sense.”

A cave, a pit, or something that wasn't that big had collapsed.

“That’s where the ‘living burial’ I just mentioned comes from. Whether it was intentional, or the ground simply shook during the chaos, or the work of some monster or mystery… I still don’t know.”

I didn't even try to think deeply about it.

“It was really narrow. I couldn’t breathe right away. It was dark, so it was okay, but I ate too much, so my stomach started to churn. I got stuck in that narrow space, so I threw up, screamed, and kicked….”

“…….”

“Then I began to think that I couldn’t just stay like this. I guess I was brave because I was ignorant. If I had learned anything, I might have been terrified and given up.”

But Yoo Seong-un just wanted to get out of there because he felt bad about the food he threw up that day, he was angry, and he felt suffocated.

“So I started digging away at the dirt and rocks that had buried me.”

“Was there room to move?”

“If it felt too narrow, I ate it and got rid of it.”

“It must have been tasteless.”

“I didn’t feel any resistance to it because I ate it often.”

"aha…."

“It was probably winter at that time.”

I don't know what was so hard when I dug it out. The blood that flowed out from my fingertips froze right away. I don't know if it was just my imagination, but it was really cold.

“But it was okay. The small space I was staying in was already cold. I was born with a natural resistance to the cold, and I didn’t know any environment that wasn’t cold, so I think I was able to endure it quite well.”

Of course, if you ask him to do it again, he can't. Now, he is an ordinary member of society who knows what warmth is.

“The original purpose back then wasn’t to escape somewhere, but rather… to secure a space that was the same size as the space I was originally staying in. But at some point, I saw the light.”

“What kind of light was it?”

“It was the light of the snowfield.”

The first pure white thing I've ever seen in my life.

“That’s why I fell in love with snow.”

That day, Yoo Seong-un was chosen by Seol-won.

* * *

The child walked in the snow. He got frostbite because he walked barefoot, but as time passed, it didn't hurt anymore and he was fine. The child fell in love with the snow, fascinated by the soft sensation he felt for the first time.

The child looked up. It was a white world where he couldn’t tell up from down, but it was okay. The child who had originally lived in the darkness was satisfied with the fact that this place was wide. That’s how he came to love contradiction.

The child had a low body temperature. Even though he walked through the snow without qualification, he did not easily melt the snow and accepted the sights as they were without damaging them. The child came to love this vast nature as it was.

“…….”

The child saw the ice rink.

“…….”

He looked at 'me' so slowly.

Dark hair. Dark eyes. But pale skin from lack of sunlight. That day, the child recognized his own existence for the first time. He realized and accepted that he looked like this.

The moment he realized that he was alive, the child turned white.

Pure white hair, blue eyes, and pale skin. So similar to his first love, Seolwon, the boy learned joy.

“……?”

There was no more breath coming out.

* * *

“Well, isn’t that fate?”

This was the story of how Yoo Seong-un became a gardener.

“Of course, there are many stories after that. I instinctively realized that I shouldn’t eat anything in the garden, so I escaped from the snowy field by crawling, and I was almost beaten to death by people for abusing my knowledge of the garden, and somehow managed to survive with my own know-how in life, and I ended up meeting gardeners.”

“How old were you at that time?”

“I think I was around 11 years old. People kept calling me a crazy devil’s son, so I thought I was just crazy, but after listening to the elders, I realized that wasn’t the case. That’s when I first learned how to use honorifics.”

“So how did you learn languages before?”

“It’s not like I hadn’t met other people before I met the gardeners. I guess it was real-life terms. Well, the words I learned back then were all just swear words… but all I heard were harsh words.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed as if joking.

“I told Joohyun before, but I’m so bad at learning that I’m really awkward with formal speech. Even though the elders worked hard to train me, I still do this. I don’t understand why there are formal and informal speech in Korean.”

“I know that this is a point that even foreigners often get confused about.”

Geo blinked and asked.

“But you found your way quickly, didn’t you? I understand that before becoming a curator, you were the head of the research team at the association.”

“Yes, that’s right. I ended up working as an association worker. My gardener’s aptitude didn’t go anywhere, so I ended up completely absorbed in research. But for someone like me who loves gardening, it’s not a place where… there’s a lot of mystery abuse.”

“Mysterious abuse, what a unique expression.”

“That’s why I received an offer from the leader of the Bisabal guild, who had shown interest in me before. He had been telling me all along that ‘you’re not suited for this job’… I guess it was a curse or something, because I felt like I really wasn’t suited for it….”

Yoo Seong-un blinked after saying that.

“…Am I the only one talking?”

“I was listening carefully.”

“Sorry, I hope it wasn’t boring to hear. It’s my first time telling someone this kind of story.”

“Didn’t you already tell the leader of the Visabal Guild?”

“I wrote it down briefly as a special note when we signed the contract, so he must know about it, but I never told him about it directly. And I never told him about it in such detail.”

But Yoo Seong-un's confidence was quickly dulled.

“…Oh, isn’t it? Since you have such good eyesight, you probably know without me saying it…?”

“He is also very special.”

“That’s what all collectors are like.”

Isn't the Visaval the leader in uniqueness among them?

“Well, anyway, that’s what happened. That’s how I’ve lived until now.”

“What should I say?”

“You can just be honest and say whatever you feel. Even by today’s standards, there were probably a lot of parts that were worthy of praise, but honestly, from my perspective, it just felt like a so-so memory….”

“I want to feed you.”

“I want to say that it’s always the same, but I’m suddenly hungry too.”

Is it because I'm reminded of the time when I was really hungry?

“No, I guess I’m hungry anyway.”

“There really are times like that.”

“It’s a gardener’s specialty to get hungry after garden maintenance. Just like hunters get hungry after clearing dungeons.”

“It might be fun to open a restaurant catering to gardeners.”

“Oh, that would be really… fun.”

This proves that Yoo Seong-un's personality is quite something.

“When you open a store, you have to sell to me first.”

“From a restaurant owner’s perspective, it’s right to sell in the order that customers arrive.”

“Every time something like this happens, I feel like you’re a really regular portrait artist, Geo.”

“Does it really have to be so regular when you’re saying such an obvious thing?”

Geo asked.

“Would you like something to eat?”

“…Is there anything to eat?”

“I brought you some skewers.”

“Why on earth?”

“I brought some sweet potatoes too.”

“Really why?”

“It’s only natural to have skewers and sweet potatoes when you make a campfire.”

“You and I seem to have lived in slightly different cultures.”

“That’s the way it is.”

Geo nodded.

“Because I am a person from before the great disaster.”

“I never imagined that there would be such a different culture.”

Anyway, the skewers grilling over a campfire smelled really good.

“Can’t we just eat it raw?”

“I have a stomachache, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“What are you going to do with the A-class camouflage left behind….”

“It’s not like that’s what the stomach says.”

“The stomach is there to digest.”

“Why would you do something like that when you’re busy filling it with delicious food?”

“Do you not even consider something that doesn’t taste good as food?”

It couldn't be a portrait that wasn't really about food.

“I feel so guilty.”

“It must be past midnight and you feel like you’re boiling ramen.”

“Oh, it’s kind of similar. What is it? It feels like eating cookies on top of a blanket?”

“That sounds plausible too.”

If other gardeners heard that I was roasting meat over a campfire in a snowy field, they would have asked me how I could possibly be so crazy as to do such a thing. To be honest, it didn't feel real at all.

However, Yoo Seong-un was a gardener who had adapted to this empty sense of reality.

'If you live next to Geo, you can't help but get used to it.'

Every time something like this happened, I always thought, 'let it be.'

'The price will be paid by my future self.'

On the one hand, it was bitter, but on the other hand, it was comforting. It was a peace of resignation. Yoo Seong-un took the chicken and vegetable skewers that Geo handed him and ate them with both hands. They were full of meat juice and vegetable juice, and they tasted fantastic.

The portrait asked.

“How are you?”

“When are you opening a store?”

“Thank you for the compliment, I will contact you as soon as I have it ready.”

“I feel warm inside….”

Yoo Seong-un blinked while chewing on the skewer.

“…….”

The sound of a crackling campfire.

The whispering voice of a friend. The rustling snow bunnies. The snow storm outside the igloo. The warm air trapped under the round roof. The unmelting snow and the warm-colored fire. Delicious food… .

"…hmm…."

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“It’s romantic.”

“Right?”

“Do you want to come play again next time?”

“I am glad you invited me.”

“I am… happy.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed.

"…thank you."

Perhaps, a little awkwardly.

Just like when I first learned joy.

* * *

“I thought of that meteor shower.”

Bisabal nodded at Geo's words.

“Okay, okay. Say whatever you want. I’m listening.”

“Gardeners need unions, too.”

“I guess I earned money for this day.”

Visabal rolled his eyes and thought about it.

“It is about time that the welfare and treatment of gardeners improve.”

“I’d like to start by making a restaurant for knights. What do you think?”

“Oh, cool. This is so authentic.”

Yoo Seong-un remained silent as the guild leader applauded and the portrait looked proud.

“…….”

“…Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

Joo-hyun, who had followed Geo to the collection store, poked him in the side.

“What on earth are you blowing in the wind?”

“Mr. Joohyun, I thought about it.”

“Yes, go ahead. What do you want to say?”

“Don’t you think it would be nice if there was something like a food stall in the garden…?”

“Are you in your right mind?”

“…The gardeners are so cold and hungry….”

“…….”

Joohyun, who had been hesitating, leaned slightly towards the table.

“…Shall I get a list of gardeners?”

“Let’s take a look at Haeun first.”

“Hmm… that sounds like a good idea.”

“People must eat and work.”

Geo nodded.

“I like it.”

I felt like I could paint a new picture tonight.

* * *

A few days later.

"excuse me."

Geo went to find Cha Eun-hyuk.

“Do you sell bungeoppang?”

“Not for sale.”

“Are you going to sell it when winter comes?”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok, who was once a fish-shaped bread youth, was about to go crazy.

“…Let’s resolve this through dialogue.”

I think it's time for the Earth to end.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (305)

305

Episode 305

It wasn't that Geoman came to find Cha Eunhyuk specifically.

“I’m here too, Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok.”

“…Please speak comfortably.”

“Would that be so?”

Geo's curator, Yoo Seong-un, was also there.

Cha Ara, the second of the Cha family, went out to earn money. Thanks to the collector who had asked for permission before visiting, it wasn't that surprising, but that didn't lessen Cha Eunhyuk's psychological burden.

“So, what exactly brings you here?”

The other person said that they would talk in detail after visiting. He said that it would be too long to talk over the phone. He said that it was not such a light topic. So I couldn't figure out exactly why he came.

Geo, who was standing in front of the door, asked.

“Can I come inside?”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok looked back at Yoo Seong-woon without saying a word as if to say, “Is this right?” and Yoo Seong-woon nodded with a smile.

“I won’t eat it.”

“Please reassure me more clearly.”

“As scary as our Sergio Hunter may look, he is not the type of person who would harm good citizens, as you know. If you allow him in, you will not be cursed or possessed by an evil spirit or anything like that.”

“Thank you for reassuring me….”

Even though his energy was sucked in, Cha Eun-hyuk also admitted it.

'He's a divine being who treats Isul well too… Come to think of it, when that guy summoned him before, it ended without any problems.'

Strictly speaking, he was like a teacher my younger brother was indebted to. If we look at it a little more broadly, no, a little more broadly, he was in the same position as Priest Kang Seo-dam. He had helped me a lot, so it would be ridiculous to be wary of him now.

“…….”

Brainwashing yourself like that doesn't make it any less scary, though.

“…Yes, please come in. I don’t have anything I can offer you, but….”

“Thank you for your consideration, but as I told you on the phone earlier, we don’t need that. It was very kind of you to allow us to visit like this.”

“Thank you for saying so, Sergio Hunter.”

It was a burdensome situation. After all, it was a situation where a first-class citizen and a divine being visited. I wonder if it is okay to put a ‘first-class citizen’ and a ‘divine being’ on the same level, but anyway… .

Cha Eun-hyeok invited the guests to the living room. He also brought out a cup of roasted barley tea for each guest. It seemed like they should have at least some formality. So the three of them sat around a small table.

“Then, could you please tell me the real reason for your visit?”

“Oh, I think it would be better for me to talk about that first.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was sipping barley tea, smiled with the same innocent smile he had always seen before.

“Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok has a choice.”

“The word ‘choice’ has already been mentioned, so I’ll listen to it first.”

“Direct questions and roundabout questions.”

“Uh… Don’t you think it would be easier for both of us if you just asked right away?”

“Then let me get straight to the point.”

Yoo Seong-woon looked into Cha Eun-hyeok’s eyes and asked.

“Do you see anything strange?”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok, who had been dazed for a moment, suddenly became startled.

“Oh, yeah? Yes?”

“I see, I see.”

“What exactly are you talking about….”

“It’s something that looks like a monster, but also doesn’t seem like one.”

“…I guess Hunter Yoo Seong-un can see that too?”

“I’m somewhat of a veteran in this area.”

“I didn’t know that this was divided into professional categories.”

“The reaction is more dull than I expected.”

“I’m quite… surprised….”

Even for Cha Eun-hyuk, who never raises his voice, it was surprising to see this.

“Because no one else sees the same thing as me.”

“No, it’s not that kind of boredom.”

“I don’t really understand that word… So what kind of feeling were you talking about?”

“Usually, people like Cha Eun-hyeok are treated like crazy.”

“Ah, I understand what you are saying.”

Cha Eun-hyuk nodded with a bewildered expression, as if he still couldn't believe it.

“I thought I might be called crazy.”

What he saw was visible only to his eyes.

“I can only see them, and they don’t really have much of an effect on other people or living things. Even if they did exist, people who can’t see them somehow… create a non-existent probability and convince themselves of it.”

“Then only those who tell the truth will become insane.”

“Yes, it was obvious that I would be treated that way. So I pretended not to know anything from the beginning so that I wouldn’t be ostracized like that. My siblings also don’t know that I can see them.”

“You hid it really neatly, that’s amazing.”

Geo, who was listening to the story, tilted his head.

“You hid it well.”

“Well, that’s true. It’s not an easy thing to do.”

Most people with 'aptitude' couldn't do this. How could they hide from others what they could see and feel?

“Most children would be surprised or disgusted if they saw a puppy with only one eye. And they would tell their parents, other family members, or friends. At that age, they lack the ability to think, ‘Oh, even if I tell them this, they won’t understand.’”

“A one-eyed puppy would be cute.”

At those words, Cha Eun-hyeok opened his eyes wide and blinked.

“…Is that what it originally looked like?”

“The so-called ‘One-eyed Jindo’ is a kind of guardian deity that often stays with Korean children. It usually takes the form of a Jindo dog, but sometimes it appears as a different breed of dog or other animals. Perhaps the one that Cha Eun-hyeok saw when he was young was in the form of a dog?”

“Yes, that’s right. A black… Jindo dog? That must have been it. The one that was on the news that was successfully restored. That guy was always sitting in our yard, looking outside."

"In a world where mystery is visible, there is no stronger protection than that friend. If a sinister or violent mystery comes to the child's house, he will bark and chase it away. The problem is that in the case of a homeless child, he will not help them in that way unless they are specially trained…."

"Well, I helped you because I had a house?"

"That's right. So it's no exaggeration to say that the first thing that talented people encounter when they have a family is 'that thing.' Of course, if they go beyond a certain point, they leave that house and move to another house… or they disappear. I think the case that lasted the longest was when they were 13 years old."

Yoo Seong-un asked with interest.

"You didn't tell your other family members about that either?"

"How can I say that when only I can see it…."

"Usually you open your mouth there? You have good self-control."

He's also quick-witted.

"At that age, you were already aware of the social gaze."

Most talented people can't do that. They don't understand that others don't know what they naturally perceive. Conflicts naturally arise and distance grows due to the senses that each other doesn't have.

"Well, after being burned a few times, everyone eventually pretended not to know and lived like that."

"It's a little less embarrassing knowing that it's not just me."

Cha Eun-hyeok asked with a slightly timid face.

“…But how on earth did you know that… As I just told you, I’ve never told my family that I see ‘that’. Is there a separate way to check for ‘talent’?”

“No, there isn’t.”

"yes?"

“I said there isn't any.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed bitterly.

“If there was something like that, the gardeners wouldn’t have to work overtime like that.”

"…gardener?"

“Among those who can see ‘it’ like us, tell me about those who have come to know the garden. Well, I’ll explain that later. But first, should I answer the question you asked?”

“Oh, yes, I would appreciate it if you could do that.”

“As I said before, there is no way to find ‘talent.’ There is no special aura that only they have. Most of the time, I just observe friends who go through life and think, ‘Huh? Have you seen that person?’ and then get lucky and think, ‘Oh, that’s right.’”

“Then… wouldn’t it be difficult to find even one person in your lifetime?”

“Yes, Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok seems to have noticed it too, but these ‘talented people’ usually try not to reveal themselves. In Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok’s case, he seems to have realized that what he sees is reality, but there are probably many talented people who spend their whole lives thinking that they are delusional and then die.”

Yoo Seong-un pointed at Geo as if supporting him with his characteristically innocent smile.

“But this time, our Sergio Hunter helped us.”

“Aha… Don’t mention it. I just got lucky this time.”

As if responding to an introduction, Sergio Hunter naturally pulled down his hood, and his hair soon turned a light pink.

“Looking for a good ‘friend’.”

Above the round smiling lips.

“Well, I guess I was lucky to begin with?”

Those curved eyes were shining colorfully like opals.

* * *

A snowy field of meteors.

In that beautiful world, Geo wanted to draw more gardens.

List of suitable candidates

Garden of Delights_George

Fairy tale rate 1%

I decided to do that.

* * *

Chop.

“Oh my.”

A meteor cloud covered Geo's hood.

“…….”

“…….”

"…uh…."

Yoo Seong-woon smiled brightly at Cha Eun-hyeok who was about to say something.

“What happened?”

“Is that okay?”

“It’s okay, I’m not dead. So what happened?”

“No, nothing happened and I didn’t see anything.”

“This is the conduct of a great adult.”

Yoo Seong-un cried out to Geo.

“…Geo, please, let’s end it peacefully. Okay? Peacefully….”

“I think it was peaceful enough.”

“Please take care of the cute little liver of a weak member of society.”

“I will take care of you.”

Geo obediently put his hood back on. It was just his usual 'black cloak', with no trace of the 'something' he had seen just now.

It asked like a meteor.

“What just happened?”

“…I told Hunter Yoo Seong-un, but no, I don’t think there was anything.”

“Okay, I like it.”

“…….”

And then again 'something'.

Cha Eun-hyeok's gaze met the eyes of 'something' inside the hood, which was covered in shadows.

As when you see a wild animal on a mountain in the dark of night, all you can see is those eyes. Those gazes and pupils are so clear. All you can see is those eyes. Nothing but that ecstasy.

It was very strange. The countless colors that seemed to sparkle like well-crafted jewels and then faded away like smoke. The flow of them resembled the swaying of a burning fire or the beautiful wings of a butterfly.

And, again.

"…ah…."

It was only after a long time that I realized that what it showed was a 'smile with eyes'.

"…therefore…."

Cha Eun-hyeok asked with a blank expression, fumbling around.

“…How far were we talking?”

“That Geo helped find a hidden talent named Cha Eun-hyeok?”

“I’m not sure exactly how you found me anymore. I don’t think I need to explain in detail, so if you don’t mind, can we move on to the next topic? I just realized I asked the wrong question.”

“If only he had awakened, he would have been a perfect collector’s talent, but it's a shame he's a civilian…."

Yoo Seong-un whetted his appetite.

"That's okay, even civilians can be gardeners."

"Is that why you came to see me today? To ask me to do this thing called gardening?"

"It's not something I can order just because I want to, but roughly speaking, it's something along the same lines."

"What do I have to do? How will I be paid? Is it monthly or weekly? How much is the annual salary? Do you provide a contract?"

"Are you waiting for something?"

"I just did it the way it came to me."

Cha Eun-hyuk wiped his face.

"Of course, even if you just tell me to do it, I have no way of resisting."

"As I said earlier, this isn't something I can do just because I tell you to do it. If it's okay, wouldn't you listen to my story a little more? Even if you decline my offer, it won't be a loss since this information will be of great help to Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok."

"…I'm sorry for being so sensitive."

He let out a small sigh and collected himself.

"In my defense, this situation is too burdensome for me. It's a bit… to have a curator from a collection store bring in my work and talk about secrets I've kept hidden my whole life."

"Even I would be on guard and sensitive, so don't worry too much. More importantly, you would have been even more surprised by our Sergio Hunter's sudden actions just now. I can hear your heart pounding from here."

"That doesn't mean my rudeness goes away. I apologize again. It's not like I didn't learn from adults when I was growing up, to the point where I have to make excuses for that."

"Then I will accept your apology, but in this situation, we are the ones who made things difficult for Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok. So I hope you don't mind it so much. Do you understand what I mean?"

"……."

After a while, Cha Eun-hyuk nodded.

"I understand."

"Okay, then let's get to the real story."

"Was that just a little while ago a warm-up exercise?"

"I guess I should say that I was able to save some face."

"For something like that, the impact is…."

"The impact Sergio Hunter had was something I never expected."

"Oh, yes, I see."

"Didn't you say earlier that it's better to be direct?"

Yoo Seong-un asked.

"Don't you plan on following Geo and opening a food stall?"

"I'm sorry, I guess you don't like being so direct."

"That could be the case."

Yoo Seong-un nodded and soon smiled.

“From now on, I’ll ask in circles.”

“Please give me as much advance explanation as possible.”

“I told you this story is going to be long, right? It’s going to take some time. Is that okay? Do you have any plans?”

“Thanks for contacting me in advance, I don’t have much on my schedule today.”

“Then, should we explain it slowly?”

“Okay, then….”

Eunhyuk Cha, who had been hesitating, asked.

“…What on earth are these ‘things’ that I see?”

Yoo Seong-un explained readily.

“In gardener’s jargon, they are ‘children of the root.’”

“Children of the origin? If you say children, then the origin is… parents?”

“It was named that way because we humans think that the closest relationship is between parents and children. Strictly speaking, I don’t know if they are really like parents and children, or like bosses and subordinates at work, or just like equals and partners.”

“Then what do you know?”

“There is nothing. This being began to be visible on Earth after the Great Disaster. It has only been about 30 years since we became aware of them, and it is a miracle that they have been defined to this point. You know that, too, Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok, right?”

“…Ah, right. It wouldn’t be easy for people like us to interact… From what you’ve said, it doesn’t seem like you’re affiliated with any particular organization. Is that right?”

“That’s right, ‘gardener’ isn’t really a job. But if you prove yourself to be a gardener, the government will support you when you submit your plan. In terms of finances and other things.”

“…It’s a little difficult.”

“Most ‘talented people’ would be confused when they first hear this story.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled with his eyes wide open.

“I’ll explain it slowly, so please listen.”

“…Let’s do that.”

Suddenly, Cha Eun-hyuk thought that it was similar to the 'eye smile' he had just seen.

The reason was unknown.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (306)

306

Episode 306

“First of all, the correct name would be ‘Child of Origin,’ but usually we just call it ‘mystery.’ That’s the case with most of the strange phenomena or beings we see.”

Yoo Seong-un asked with a smile.

“Okay, do you have any questions here?”

“You’ve only said a few words, and you’re already giving me a chance to ask questions?”

“I need to quickly master the knowledge of the gardener so that I can tell you our ultimate goal. Even if that’s not the case, since this is a time to introduce a concept that I’ve never heard of before, it would be better to build a solid foundation step by step through Q&A. So?”

“…Mystery, up to that point… I’ve heard it a few times too.”

Cha Eun-hyeok asked in an uncertain tone.

“I often hear that word in religious contexts related to God.”

“Because divinity can also be seen as a kind of mystery.”

“No, if you look at it that way, shouldn’t dungeons and monsters also be considered mysteries?”

“Oh, you’ve already seen through the essence. You really have talent.”

“…? Really? Are you counting that as some kind of mystery?”

“It may be a little different, but I think it’s ultimately an existence within the same flow.”

Yoo Seong-un continued his explanation.

“Mystery can be expressed as fate, rules, or stories. In most cases, it doesn’t go beyond these three frameworks. Let me give you an example with the ‘one-eyed Jindo’ I mentioned at the beginning.”

He took out a translucent pad and showed me a drawing of 'One-Eyed Jindo' with it. It was a drawing that was almost photographically detailed.

“This is the image of the ‘One-Eyed Jindo’ drawn by the gardener. Is it the same as what Cha Eun-hyeok remembered?”

“Oh, that’s right. I was black though….”

“There’s also a description of the black friend. Each color has a different meaning.”

“That depends on the meaning. If you just say dog, then the difference in color… I don’t think there’s much of a difference.”

“When you see a mystery, you have to be sensitive to even one color like this. You have to see that they all have meaning. Black Jindo doesn’t get close to the object of protection and keeps his distance. They judged that there would be no problem with protecting him even if he was left like that. I guess he was very precocious since he was young?”

“…Is this a real dog? Or is it the spirit of a dog?”

“No, it’s just a mystery named after the Jindo dog, which is called the native dog of Korea.”

Yoo Seong-un said, showing off his 'one-eyed Jindo' in three colors.

“Among the mysteries, there are those that follow the ‘story’ in this way. In most cases, they just take on the form or repeat the actions related to the ‘story’. They are completely different from the Jindo dog that Cha Eun-hyeok knows.”

“Follow me… Then why one-eyed? Couldn’t you have followed along in more detail?”

“It’s a literal imitation. It can’t be the perfect original itself. That’s why most mysteries of this type have clear differences from the original. Like the eyes of the ‘One-eyed Jindo’ being vertically placed in the center.”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok looked at 'Sergio Hunter' without realizing it. It tilted its head.

“Is there a problem with me?”

“Oh, no. There isn’t any.”

Yoo Seong-woon said to Cha Eun-hyeok like that.

“This is an exception.”

“That’s an exception.”

“There are so many exceptions, so I wish you wouldn’t have taken it as a reference from the beginning. This guy is already in a very advanced stage for Cha Eun-hyeok to learn.”

“I will keep your advice in mind.”

“Okay, then let me explain it again.”

Yoo Seong-un pointed to the picture of 'One-eyed Jindo' again.

“These are the mysteries that imitate the story of the Jindo dog that protects its master. Except for exceptional cases, their rule is to protect only young friends under the average age of 7. So far, it has been discovered that they are at least 1 year old and at most 13 years old. After that, they disappear or find another target for protection and their fate is to cycle.”

He smiled brightly.

“The dungeons, monsters, and skills that people know are the most common mysteries that humans can see and encounter. In terms of the most basic level of mystery, it’s like the surface of the ocean, or something above it.”

“Seeing as it was specifically compared to the sea….”

“That means there’s still a long way down there. You could compare it to the deep sea and its bottom. You caught it well, it’s nice to see.”

Yoo Seong-un showed a diagram.

“In other words, mysteries also have levels, and in most cases, humans can commonly see and encounter a unified level of mysteries in one dimension. In the case of Earth, dungeons, monsters, and skills that can be considered levels 1 to 3 fall into that ‘commonly visible’ area.”

“Then what about the level 0 that is marked outside here…?”

“The best example would be to think of the Earth before the catastrophe. At that time, the Earthlings were in a state where they could not see any mysteries. That’s why they marked it outside the diagram. In fact, it would be an early form of the dimension that was least affected by mysteries.”

The meteor shower showed examples of various dimensions.

“As I said before, the level of mystery that humans of a certain dimension can perceive is relatively unified. However, among these, there exist a small number of humans who can exceptionally see and feel deeper mysteries.”

“Is that… a ‘talent’ like us?”

“Yes, I’m glad you understand. You could say that they’re a new species of humans that evolved a little faster, or you could say they’re mutants. This perspective is a little different for each gardener, so Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok, think about it carefully later. It’s important to solidify your own identity in this industry.”

“You said it wasn’t your job.”

“Well, well, if you really want to be specific, they’re more like freelancers? There are gardeners who are like immortals who live in the midst of nature and mystery… but even so, most people need money to live.”

“Well, that’s true.”

“Among these ‘talented people’, we call those who are a little more specialized and given a specific task ‘gardeners’. If it’s hard to understand, you can think of them as saints who serve divinity, although they are slightly different.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed after saying that.

“Of course, it’s a level of honor that doesn’t exist!”

“Aren’t you working on a business right now? Can you show me from the bottom?”

“So, even if it’s not something that can be done through sales? I’m just explaining it. From now on, whether or not you accept our crazy proposal is your own decision and your fundamental decision.”

“It’s complicated, so please explain it step by step….”

“Oh, right. You’ve gone down another path.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged. He finished explaining.

“No one knows what form or structure this mystery will take. Even though we have explored several dimensions through dungeons so far.”

“Is there another reason why it hasn’t been revealed yet? Even just thinking about it, it seems like a vast area to fully establish such knowledge in 30 years….”

“Of course there are other reasons. Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok, think about the universe. Can we be confident that we know everything about it?”

“Oh, that’s not it. I don’t know the end either.”

“That’s exactly what it feels like.”

It's in a similar vein.

“Why haven’t we conquered space yet? Not to mention the fact that the time humans have spent exploring space has been longer than the time they have spent exploring mystery. It’s because it’s such a broad concept and the effort required to understand it is so great. Mystery is almost the same.”

It's really a headache.

“Above all, the deeper one delves into the mystery, the more one loses one's reason and is consumed by the mystery."

"…Is it really that bad?"

"Even a person wouldn't be okay if they went into a black hole. You can't say it's the same principle, but you can think of it as something like that."

"What exactly happens?"

"For now, it would be most accurate to say that it becomes something other than human. So it becomes another form of mystery. Or it becomes a mystery cell."

"It's creepy."

"Don't worry, that won't happen at the level of mystery that Cha Eun-hyeok can see and feel at the moment."

Yoo Seong-un laughed.

"But given the stages, there must be an ultimate and deep stage, and experienced gardeners can vaguely sense its existence. The Earthlings have decided to call it the 'Source.'"

"What exactly does it do?"

"I'm sorry, but I really don't know. What it does, what its purpose is, whether it has a mind or not, whether it has a self or is just a system. What realm it belongs to, no human being has ever been able to define it."

"…It really is like space."

"It's the most convenient concept to explain to newcomers."

There are many people who do not know the mystery, but there are few who do not know the universe. Even in an era where compulsory education has disappeared, knowledge from before the great catastrophe can be passed on.

Even if it is too specialized knowledge, it is possible to convey a brief story about the universe by word of mouth. That is why I often use the universe as an analogy when trying to explain it to new gardeners.

“The humans of Earth currently divide the mystery into three major stages: dungeons and monsters, children of the divine and the source, and the source…

“The dungeon and the monsters are intertwined, and the child of divinity and origin… uh….”

“As I said before, it’s really a ‘big three step’. If you want to break it down into smaller parts, you really have to dig deep. So just ask about the parts you’re curious about. What explanation do you need?”

“…I don’t know what order it is.”

“Okay, should I organize them one by one?”

Yoo Seong-un nodded willingly.

“The reason I combined dungeons and monsters is because this is the area that everyone can see in the earliest stages. Let’s call this stages 1 to 3. Then, the children of the divine and the origin need the next stage. Think of this as the middle stage. Finally, there is the origin. Think of this as the last stage.”

He sorted it out.

“It’s like a beginning, a middle, and an end.”

“Excuse me… but don’t you think you’ve caught it too big?”

“But we can’t subdivide the areas that the Earth hasn’t experienced yet.”

“…Wait a minute, not yet?”

“As expected, you’re quick-witted. I’ll explain it to you from now on.”

Yoo Seong-un said, flicking the pad.

“The evolutionary process of a planet and a dimension includes the area of accepting mystery. The same goes for humanity. At some point, when the capacity to recognize and accept mystery is reached, or when certain conditions are met, the mystery begins to take shape and become concrete.”

“Uh… then….”

“That’s right, the Earth named that moment ‘the Great Disaster’. Most of the dimensions where humans exist have gone through this process, or will go through this process… That’s the most recent claim. The claim came from the Association’s research institute, so it’s not completely unreliable.”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok asked with a pale face.

“…Is this a story I can listen to?”

“It’s okay, I already confirmed everything.”

“Can’t I just farm and sell bungeoppang?”

“I think it would be better to do that after hearing the whole story.”

“I think just knowing it would have a huge impact on my life.”

“But don’t you think that peace was lost the moment you got involved with Geo?”

Then Cha Eun-hyeok looked at Geo, and the man in the black cloak spoke naturally, like a robot that had received a command.

“Would you like to be my friend?”

“…I’ll think about it….”

Cha Eun-hyeok looked at Yoo Seong-un again.

“…So does that mean that mystery has existed from before?”

“I think it would be more correct to say that it was accumulating.”

"accumulation?"

“What Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok said is exactly right, mystery has existed from before.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been rummaging through the pad, soon found something.

“Oh, there you are. Want to take a look at this?”

“…What is this?”

“Jangsanbeom. I think even Eunhyuk Cha has heard of this. Is it especially famous among the locals?”

“I know. Isn’t it one of those indigenous monsters that often make nests and live in remote areas of Korea? That, the one that imitates human voices… a tiger? Shape….”

“Well, Jangsanbeom is a ghost story that was created quite close to the time of the Great Disaster… but it is still a mystery that was created before the Great Disaster. This is also a mystery that imitates a ‘story’.”

“…Then, are things like goblins also a mystery that existed before the great disaster?”

“You got it right, it’s very applicable. Goblins are the most representative example of Korean mystery.”

Yoo Seong-un folded his fingers to give an example.

“There are a type of mystery that has existed since ancient times, such as goblins, monsters, demons, angels, or ghosts. Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok, do you know anything about shamans or exorcist priests?”

“Oh, yes, I know. Third-class citizens like us who live in the countryside tend to have a lot of that kind of folk knowledge. I don’t know the details, but a little bit…”

“You must have heard of seeing ghosts, contacting them, exorcising them, and similar things. And there were also cases of people being able to see ghosts before the great disaster. These people are the ‘talented people’ I mentioned earlier.”

“…that existed during stage 0?”

“Okay, I understand very well.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded as if praising her.

“Before the Great Disaster, Earthlings had no ability to perceive mysteries, but after the Great Disaster… they developed different senses, functions, and organs. You could think of it as a kind of evolution.”

“…That kind of evolution is something that happened due to the accumulation of mystery?”

“…If you look at it broadly, the great disaster is in the same context. If humans have evolved to be able to see, encounter, and embody mysteries, then the Earth has evolved to be able to open the door to mysteries.”

“Can you call that evolution?”

“There are many people who say it is a mutation.”

He laughed bitterly.

“What do you think a dungeon is?”

“Dungeon? Another dimension… I think.”

“There are also dungeons that were created from scratch. Usually, these are low-level dungeons. They are simple dungeons with no special story, where there are monsters and you just have to defeat the boss and destroy it.”

Yoo Seong-un rolled his eyes slightly.

“These friends are understood to be dungeons born from the origin. They have their own stories and rules, but they are very basic. There is no complex cause and effect.”

“Oh, that’s right. I’ve heard from my younger brother that the higher the level of the dungeon, the more detailed the story and rules are. Well, of course, he can never go to a place like that.”

“And those higher-level dungeons are usually the result of existing dimensions being distorted.”

This may sound a little scary.

“It is also a dimension completely immersed in mystery.”

“Eroded… Wait, then.”

“That’s right, the Earth is following the same pattern.”

“…Are we going to perish?”

“Oh, of course, we still have a long way to go to get there.”

Yoo Seong-un was proud.

“But the scary thing is that we could get close at any time.”

“…….”

“Um, let me explain a little more… Most monsters are born in dungeons like these. However, some create their own dungeons.”

It would be easy to understand if you think back to the mermaid monster from before.

“But the first beginning of such monsters also starts from a dimension that is consumed by mystery. The moment a certain dimension becomes filled with mystery, or rather, mystery itself, any being with a destiny, rules, and story changes into a monster. Usually, in these cases, there are many humanoid monsters.”

That was the way it was. Where there are parents, there are children. Where there is a beginning, there is an end.

“Uh… I’m not sure if this order is completely correct, but if I may summarize it….”

Yoo Seong-un organized a diagram on the pad. It was a rough sentence: [Mysterious Source (mother) → Garden (blood vessels and organs close to the source) → Dungeon (a kind of child of the source) → Monster (child of the dungeon)].

“Usually, you can think of it as this order.”

“Usually, yeah.”

“I guess it’s because it’s an industry with a lot of variables.”

So there is a lot of overtime work.

“Oh, by the way, humans and the world are on separate tracks from the mysterious vein.”

“I’m sorry, but I don’t understand at all.”

“To put it simply, science and magic can coexist, but they are completely different contexts. I have rarely taught beginners, so it’s a bit difficult to explain.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“So, um… living creatures born on Earth, including humans, and the planet itself that created them. The universe surrounding it… all material realms that the first humans could not understand, but at least recognize. Things that existed from the beginning. Things that can be seen and touched… Things whose existence can be discovered through the development of technology and civilization, things like that.”

“…….”

“Let’s put that in the realm of ‘science’ that I was comparing it to earlier.”

“…in science….”

“However, in the field of science, the widest area is the universe, and in the field of magic, the deepest concept is the source. In both cases, the probability that humans will ever see the end is extremely small.”

So there are definitely some difficult points.

“There is no telling what will happen when these different domains merge completely. One scholar has argued that when the scientific domain eventually accepts more mystery than it can handle… the end of its evolution will be mystery.”

“…Wasn’t turning into a dungeon the end of evolution?”

“No, we don’t know. We don’t know the stage after the dungeon. We only know that when a certain amount of mystery accumulates in a certain dimension, it moves on to the stage called ‘dungeon’.”

“Then what should we do?”

“That’s why the gardener’s role is important.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled brightly.

“Hey, the gardener finally came out.”

“My head is so complicated….”

“It’s okay. I just came here to give you a taste anyway, so there’s no need to think too deeply or try to learn anything. No one can force Cha Eun-hyeok to do something like this.”

He continued his explanation.

“If you’ve heard this far, you’ll know that the source is a kind of mother. It’s a concentration of mysteries, and from here, the mysteries flow out and have repercussions that reach our planet.”

“…It’s not something that is materialized separately, right?”

“I don’t know about that either. As I said before, it’s an undefined area. However, there is only one way for humans to handle the mystery flowing from here on their own….”

“Is that a gardener?”

“A gardener takes care of a garden.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“As I just summarized, the garden is the organ and blood vessel of the origin. There are such points all over the Earth. There will be some in other dimensions and planets as well. And if you manage these guys properly, you can prevent the accumulation of mysteries.”

He rolled his eyes.

“In other words, it is to prepare for a situation where mystery overflows so much that humans cannot protect themselves. To prevent any further unexpected evolution or transformation… It is to manage and maintain the garden, which is the vein and organ of the origin, and to protect the realm of reality and mystery.”

Cha Eun-hyeok asked about the long explanation.

“…so that both sides don’t overflow?”

“So that it doesn’t overflow.”

It is to prevent cold water from overflowing into hot water and eventually becoming lukewarm water. I don't know exactly what would happen in that case, but at least it wouldn't be good for the current humans.

“The most primitive form of this gardener was probably a priest or a shaman. They were not exactly aware of the existence of the mysteries.”

"ah…."

“But since they were ‘talented’ who were slightly more advanced than Stage 0, they had above-average qualities… Even before the Great Disaster, they had been managing the shallowest level of mysteries they could see and come into contact with.”

“So those people were gardeners too?”

“It’s hard to see it that way. After all, they haven’t evolved enough to perceive mystery, so they don’t know about the existence of the ‘garden.’ They can’t be called gardeners who manage the garden.”

It's a shame.

“Eventually, enough mystery had accumulated for humanity to evolve to be able to manage the garden?”

“But didn’t you say before that it was because we failed to manage that the disaster occurred?”

“Then what can we do? In a time when there was no one who could see the garden, no one who could perceive it, and no one who could manage it. In other words, a catastrophe was inevitable.”

Yoo Seong-woon looked at Cha Eun-hyeok with a big smile.

“So, even now that we have grasped the situation, we must do our best to balance mystery and reality. Otherwise, another catastrophe may occur. Wouldn’t that be too bad for future generations?”

“…….”

“Of course, just as there is an end to everything that has a beginning… dimensions and planets were created in reality, and life was born on them, so it may be the most ideal cycle to let mystery bring it to an end.”

Some gardeners say that's just the way it is.

“That’s how mystery and reality are reduced to each other, and the beginning of dimensions and planets, and the end due to mystery, occur. I don’t know if these two are really circulating, but if there’s an end, there’s a beginning, and if there’s a beginning, there’s an end, right?”

That's it.

“But that’s why so many gardeners work so hard, because they don’t want any more chaos.”

“…What do you want me to do?”

“That’s why I need your help.”

"I am…."

“Sell me some bungeoppang.”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyuk asked after a while.

"yes?"

It was calm, but it was a kind of scream.

The food stall I mentioned at the beginning wasn't a joke?

* * *

From here, let's move on to Geo's 'inspiration'.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (307)

307

Episode 307

By the way, gardeners are not only found on Earth.

“So, would you please stop drawing?”

It was the words the man spat out after a long game of tag that involved jumping around the paintings. Geo said to him.

“I don’t know what I should draw that you’ll like, so I’ll just go with quantity….”

“You’ve seen enough of that match, so stop drawing. I surrendered like this, didn’t I?”

“I understand.”

Geo blinked his eyes at the 'Geo' in front of him.

“You have less perseverance than I thought.”

“What is this? Is this a provocation? It’s so interesting that days like this come up in this world.”

“It may sound sarcastic, but I can feel that it is sincere.”

“That’s right, I’ve rarely been more shocked in my life.”

"so?"

“It was fun.”

He said that and waved lightly while holding the top hat on his head. 'Geo' skillfully drew a smile with his eyes.

“Taran.”

It looked like something that was commonly called a magician's hat. With a light tap of the wand, flowers popped out like little bombs, perhaps as a small gift or souvenir.

The man bowed down as he looked at Geo, who was wearing a flower hat.

“This is your George, Mr. Geo.”

“Thank you for your polite greeting.”

Geo, who was gently brushing away the flowers, glanced at 'George's' outfit.

“I don’t think that hat really suits you.”

“Huh? That’s strange. Sergio doesn’t seem to be in a position to harass me about my fashion sense.”

“That’s true, so I have nothing to say, but Mr. Argio has a good sense. Thanks to him, I often owe him a favor.”

“I also acknowledge his sense of style. He knows how to match clothes and accessories to the right place. He is someone we should emulate.”

“Anyway… I’m wearing light clothing.”

A loose-fitting poet shirt, black pants, and a hat. That was it.

“You don’t like shoes very much?”

“Is there any reason why I should be so concerned about saving face?”

“It looks like you’re trying to maintain your dignity as a civilized person, since you’re wearing both top and bottom.”

“Wow, you’re showing off your civilized dignity just because you’re not wearing shoes? Mr. Geo, don’t you often walk around barefoot?”

“I usually move around a lot in the house and don’t wear shoes inside the house… so when I have a formal schedule, I wear them and go out.”

“I’m not going to go into too much detail, but I’m one of those people. I spend a lot of time in places where I don’t necessarily need to wear shoes. By the way, more than 90% of my dignity is contained in this hat.”

“That seems like a good option too.”

I wonder what sin the hat committed that suddenly left me to take care of almost all of my master's appearance. But I can't say anything because it looks so shiny and well-maintained and I think it's pretty.

After I had sorted out the bare minimum of the situation, I suddenly felt regret.

“…….”

Geo muttered while fiddling with the picture I had drawn.

“I haven’t finished drawing it yet….”

“That’s enough, I’ve had my fun.”

“I didn’t draw everything….”

“How did I end up with this guy?”

Even though he said that, it was really funny, as 'George' burst into a refreshing laugh.

“Well, I did live a long time, didn’t I?”

“I didn’t call you to tell you to retire now that you’ve lived a long life. You seem to be looking at me in a very immoral way.”

“I know this isn’t the end, it’s just another beginning, so there’s no need to be so sorry.”

“Excuse me, but I wasn’t really sorry. You were having too much fun, weren’t you, Mr. George?”

“I guess this is the first time something like this has happened in my life….”

He placed his hat on my pink hair.

“Then shall we introduce ourselves first?”

“Actually, I don’t need an introduction to Mr. George.”

“We learned so much about each other while playing tag, Geo-ssi is right.”

“So, for those of you who don’t understand the situation, could you please introduce it?”

“I really like these times.”

'George' greets you all.

“George the Wanderer, or Geo as my friends affectionately call me. Pronounce it as you wish.”

Geo nodded.

“Have you been called a wanderer?”

“Oh, actually, this is a name I came up with. It’s not something that special, since it wasn’t defined by any official agency or country.”

“So in the very first world, was there a word to replace gardener?”

“No, because I was the first ‘wanderer’ there. It’s a name I made up in the very simple context of wandering around….”

He laughed.

“I really like fun.”

“Dopamine incarnate.”

“Oh my goodness, this is so sad. Why live if you’re not going to enjoy it?”

“I don’t think I can agree with Mr. Argio on this point in a different sense.”

“Anyway, it was Mr. Geo who called and it was I who was caught, so I will do my duty.”

'George' picked up a chair and sat down next to Geo.

“Okay, let’s begin.”

“Oh, shall I start? Actually, I don’t know where to start explaining….”

Geo nodded, caressing the small canvas on which he painted nature.

“I think it would be better to start from the beginning.”

“Where is the first?”

“It was after I saw Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s garden.”

“What did you see and feel there?”

“It was so beautiful that I wanted to paint the garden.”

"and?"

“I thought everyone was living such tiring lives.”

He looked at him with a warm and gentle gaze, as if he knew 'George'.

“So, in the end, you came up with this amazing idea called a food truck….”

“Actually, up until then, there were no concrete plans.”

“How are you now?”

“I think it would be a lot easier if I get Mr. George’s help.”

“Am I going to start working as soon as I get home?”

“Once the fairy tale begins, the distinction becomes meaningless, so isn’t this the work I’m doing?”

“That’s true, it’s a very interesting statement.”

“Thank you for the compliment.”

Geo continued.

“So I just started drawing whatever came to mind.”

“It’s surprising even when I think about it again. I didn’t lure you with a sweet scent or a touch, and I was caught by this ignorant method.”

“? I didn’t catch you with your ankles cut off in a bear trap, and you walked in fine on your own two feet. How do you think people will think of me if you criticize me like that?”

“Did Sergio drag me into the bear trap?”

“That would be fun too.”

“No, really, don’t draw it. Don’t try to draw a scary bear trap.”

“Be careful, I’m very nervous because I didn’t eat enough while playing tag.”

“Have you ever seen a pig like this…?”

Despite George's exclamation that seemed absurd, Geo remained steadfast.

“Yes, that’s right. Mr. George didn’t respond to my call at all. It was very embarrassing for me.”

“As we live, there are times when subordinates disobey orders or code is incorrect.”

“No, that’s completely separate… I’m sure there is a ‘suitable person’ out there, but he just keeps avoiding me. Thanks to that, I didn’t even know Mr. George’s name until I drew the 42nd picture.”

“You would never know that painting 42 landscapes to catch someone whose name you don’t even know is not something a person with a normal mindset would do, right?”

“What kind of answer do you expect when you ask me that?”

Geo shrugged.

“It’s like I said before. I was worried. What on earth could this person be dissatisfied with? What on earth should I draw to get an invitation? But after drawing about 9 pieces, I got a feeling. Oh, this person wants to hang out with me now.”

“Thanks to you, I had a great time.”

“This was my first time experiencing something like this, so I enjoyed it.”

Up until now, the method was to draw a picture after receiving 'inspiration' and then have the 'suitable person' call out Geo. But this 'Geo' was truly unique. He existed in every garden Geo drew, but he did not exist.

In short, he ran away.

“If you were simply refusing my invitation, I wouldn’t have risked my rudeness and followed you around to draw 9,421 paintings.”

“…….”

'George' nodded after a moment of silence.

“That’s why I told you to stop. Do you understand?”

“To be honest, I wanted to get 10,000 points while I was at it.”

“I’m sorry, but no matter how much I fight, I got tired and had no choice but to surrender.”

“Well, at that point, the shape of the garden and the repertoire were similar.”

“It’s also really interesting that I realized that after reaching 9,000 points.”

“Thank you for your compliments. By the way, I didn’t mean to say that I gave up on getting 10,000 points. I’ll get to it when I have time.”

“Oh my goodness, Nature, please save this wretched painter.”

“It’s been a long time since I was saved, so I guess I’ll just be roasting sweet potatoes and eating them in this hut.”

Let me get back to the main point and explain.

“Mr. George didn’t reject my invitation. If he had, he wouldn’t have been defined as a ‘suitable person’ in the first place. It seemed like he just wanted to have fun, so I followed him to the end.”

“By drawing 9,421 pictures.”

“I first realized that I could be that persistent. I don’t usually draw that much. I was aware that it was a bit excessive, so I started using smaller canvases from the middle….”

“What are you going to do with all those pictures?”

“Everyone has their own life, and I agree with that.”

I drew them all as good friends in case of any accidents.

“So in the end, Mr. George was caught by me.”

“I was so impressed by the way you enjoyed life beyond your limits….”

“It might be because you’re starting to get tired of it. In fact, wasn’t that the biggest problem?”

“The story is that I came forward voluntarily through that process.”

“Good.”

Geo saw 'George'.

“Then, would you like to introduce yourself again? I think I’ve explained the situation for you so far.”

“Hmm, good. So what should I say now?”

Soon he smiled.

“…I am a human who has become a garden.”

It was truly the embodiment of dopamine. There is no way to beat around the bush.

“It doesn’t matter how I ended up like this, at least not right now. But I ended up being a garden in my first life, and I’m enjoying my life by running around among them.”

“You are a natural person.”

“That’s a word that sums it up well in many ways. Yes, I’m a natural person, so to speak. Please be thankful that I don’t walk around naked. It means that I still have some dignity left as a human being.”

“I’m really surprised that it had such a deep meaning. Didn’t you wear it because you had to have at least a little bit of face to seduce someone?”

“Well, I guess that’s not entirely the intention. I won’t deny it. But please keep in mind that I can seduce you even if you don’t wear it.”

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.”

I'll have to use my brain a lot so I don't get sued for promiscuity.

Geo, who had acknowledged and accepted the disaster he had brought upon himself, tilted his head as if remembering something.

“Usually when we meet like this, Mr. Geo gives me a quest. Is there anything you would like to ask of me? If we set a goal through agreement, it will help me control my mind and body in the future.”

“Um… there isn’t any.”

“I’ve seen enough of this.”

“No, Sergio, you sat down in one place and drew 9,421 pictures? Don’t you understand why I'm getting tired of this? I've had enough fun and I'm going to have fun from now on."

'George', who was pretending to be disgusted, tilted his head like Geo did earlier. It was a perfect imitation.

"So to speak, I myself am being upgraded to a higher level."

"Have you already become one with me? You've been using a lot of Earth terminology since our first meeting."

"It seems like you're asking even though you already know everything… I guess I learn things as I go around here and there. That's only natural."

"I think Mr. George has a unique way of thinking. It's not easy to describe a series of events like that as an upgrade. From a human to a gardener, from a gardener to a garden, and now to a part of a haunted portrait…."

"Oh, that's all prejudice. It's something that anyone can do, for a human to manipulate their own destiny, to become nature, not a human, and then to become a painting. In fact, I think you, Geo, will understand this part, right?"

"I too, somehow, found myself becoming a portrait of a ghost. In that context, I think what Mr. George said makes sense."

"Rules don't mean anything to people like us."

Geo became serious.

"But there must be rules."

"Etiquette, social ethics, things like that?"

"Something like that."

“That’s good too.”

'George' shrugged.

“What I’m trying to say is that there’s no reason to put limits on what I do.”

“In that sense, can I keep drawing until I reach 10,000 points?”

“I don’t know about other people, but Sergio, you shouldn’t tell me what to do with my mindset, you know that, right?”

That's how the fairy tale began.

“Why, what’s the problem?”

He looked at you and asked.

“But in the end, what’s important is ‘Why does Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok have to bake bungeoppang?’ To be honest, didn’t you press the next button to hear that?”

“Certainly, Mr. George’s introduction was quite long for something like that.”

“I think it would be okay to postpone my further explanation until later.”

Haven't we covered most of the important parts?

“In short, this is what it is. I am a very capable gardener, a gardener, and a painter. If someone like me were to join in on what Mr. Geo wants to do in the future, things would be a lot easier.”

“Thanks to you, my heart is already pounding.”

“I’ve never thought of opening a restaurant, let alone a food stall. And in a garden.”

“Aren’t you a gardener? Don’t you eat? Don’t you rest? Don’t you sleep?”

“I think it will be fun.”

'George' lifted his hat and covered his mouth like a fan and laughed.

“So, please explain your plan slowly.”

“I think you all know by now, but I’m thinking of opening a restaurant in my garden.”

“Can you persuade Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok?”

“If that doesn’t work out, I’ll bake the bungeoppang too.”

“It seems like it will be a very clumsy restaurant to run.”

“That’s true, but….”

Geo nodded.

“It’s fun, so that’s fine.”

“I guess so?”

anyway.

* * *

“Do you understand so far, Eunhyuk Cha?”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok squinted his eyes as if frowning.

“……?”

It meant that I didn't understand.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (308)

308

Episode 308

“What could be there that you don’t understand?”

Visabal said with a big smile.

“Ultimately, I want to open a restaurant in the garden as a way to provide welfare to gardeners.”

“To be exact, it will likely take the form of a food stall.”

“Hmm, from a management standpoint, there is certainly no other business that is more convenient.”

“I think it would be easier for gardeners to access than a regular store.”

“Because it’s such an open structure? That could be possible.”

As the two chatted away, Joo-hyun silently organized her pad.

“…….”

“Mr. Joohyun, have you given up?”

“I don’t know the reality.”

At Yoo Seong-un's question, Joo-hyun looked back at him and smiled.

“It’s true that the gardeners’ situation is unfortunate.”

“…Your thoughts are similar to Geo’s.”

“Actually, Mr. Geo is right. Gardeners are people too, and they need to eat and rest. I learned this time that it’s really hard to do those things in a garden.”

“Isn’t that an inconvenience that all hunters experience when entering a dungeon…?”

“Yes, it seemed to be on a similar track. But in terms of the intensity of the work, the gardeners were clearly superior. I don’t know if it’s appropriate to use the word ‘superior’ in this case.”

“…Ummm….”

In fact, Ju-Hyeon's idea was right, as the garden could be said to be a superior version of a dungeon. Unlike a dungeon where you just have to fight monsters and conquer them according to the rules, a garden was very picky about the visitors achieving their goals.

In it, the gardener was basically restricted from sleeping, eating, and breathing. In other words, his biological characteristics as a human could not be respected. Ju-hyeon, who heard the story of Yoo Seong-un's work from Geo, looked at Yoo Seong-un with concern.

“In there, even having body temperature is not allowed.”

“…That’s true, that’s the rule of the snowfield.”

“In other words, so many things that humans are born with are being suppressed, right?”

“You wouldn’t call it oppression. I’m doing this because I want to. I know it might sound weird to say this, but… I love my snowfield.”

“I don’t want to insult Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s snowfield, but I can’t help but feel sorry for him.”

“That’s why those kinds of thoughts are unique.”

I don't usually think about it that way.

“But I’m kind of happy.”

“Yes, the gardeners are so cold and hungry. I don’t know what you’re talking about now, after you complained so much.”

Joohyun stared at Yoo Seong-un.

“I’m worried about what Geo-ssi will do in the future… but I think it’s a good thing that Yoo Seong-un-ssi will also be able to eat something during the process.”

“Did Joo-hyun get infected by Geo too? Why can’t you turn me into a pig?”

“Even if it’s against the garden, shouldn’t they be treated as people before pigs…?”

“Uh, what… Are you trying to start a revolution against the garden…?”

I was scared because I thought Joo-hyun could really do it. He's such a rational person that he wouldn't do something like that unless it was really 'under the circumstances', but this was a story about when it was really 'under the circumstances'.

anyway.

“…I just have complicated feelings too, that’s all.”

I have lived my whole life with the mind and attitude of a gardener engraved in my mind and body. I do not have a sense of lofty mission, but I know that I am following the path of justice. I know that it is a thorny path, but I still enjoyed it.

That 'goodness' was closer to everyday life. It was more ingrained in life than religion. That's why it was so close and something that couldn't be shaken off. Even though there was no reason for it, Yoo Seong-un eventually neglected Geo's 'change'.

“Is this disqualification as a gardener?”

“If you are that bad of a gardener, the Earth is doomed.”

“Oh, you’re going that far? You say some unexpectedly harsh things.”

“That’s because you’re saying things that don’t make sense.”

Joo-hyun glared at Yoo-seong-un as if it was absurd.

“I don’t really like that kind of thing. Mr. Yoo Seong-un, did you really want to be a tool?”

“Maybe so.”

“It would certainly be more comfortable. I can understand that feeling.”

“But I guess that’s not how people should be?”

“Rather than something so grandiose, it’s just… isn’t that too difficult?”

“…Is that really your point of view?”

“It’s better to be treated like a human being while doing good deeds.”

“I feel like I’m doing something terribly sacrilegious.”

“Isn’t it irreverent? Well, I’m not a gardener so I wouldn’t know.”

He smiled faintly.

“From a worldly human perspective, a garden is nothing more than a workplace. In today’s world, there are many jobs where people don’t even get paid properly, and people live without being treated like human beings… but at least collectors don’t do that, right?”

Yoo Seong-un laughed hollowly.

“Huh, now you’re even dragging the collector into it? You’ve gotten a lot bolder, Joohyun.”

“Even in a world where people are used as resources, if you can be treated like a human being, it’s better to do so. It’s a very simple principle. Anything better is better.”

“…It’s because it’s so simple. It’s something we already talked about in the snowfields with Geo, but it feels like eating a late-night snack or dropping snack crumbs on the blanket.”

“The analogy is quite intuitive. But isn’t it true that you just need to eat a late-night snack and digest it well, and that you just need to clean up the crumbs of snacks you ate under the covers?”

“But don’t you feel like you’ll get in trouble with your parents for no reason?”

Well, I don't know much about Yoo Seong-un because I've never felt that way before. But I knew the context.

“That’s right, at this age, it’s okay to eat late-night snacks. It’s okay to spill some crumbs. But I don’t know if that’s really a good change or development… I just don’t get it. This isn’t an exact metaphor, but…”

Ultimately, it's a matter of changing the garden to suit one's personal interests.

“Even if there’s no problem, I feel like I’m doing something wrong.”

“The flow of all times has developed based on such deviations.”

Joohyun shrugged slightly.

“Something that was illegal in one era may become legal in modern times. But I’m not good enough to judge whether the rules of that era were right or wrong.”

"then?"

“I just know that things I thought would never change throughout my life can change someday. Didn’t Mr. Yoo Seong-woon often say that?”

He rolled his eyes.

“It’s only been about 30 years, so it’s no wonder people still don’t know much about the mystery. It’s not something that can be easily solved.”

“I did say that.”

“You used the space metaphor from Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok, right? To borrow a little from that, despite its vastness, people eventually figured out quite a lot about the universe. How much change must have occurred in the process?”

“…….”

“They look the same to me.”

Joohyun laughed.

“If Mr. Yoo Seong-un could think, ‘It’s time to change.’”

“…It’s time to change….”

“We’ve been digging a well for about 30 years, so isn’t it about time for the water to burst?”

“…I’m scared to death. Why don’t all my friends look like this?”

“There is a saying that if something seems strange around you, you should check yourself first.”

“You really don’t give in to a single word.”

Yoo Seong-un also laughed.

“So you’re really doing this?”

“Who have I been talking to until now? Where have you been sleeping alone?”

“I think I was awake.”

To be honest, I broke out in a little cold sweat.

“This time Geo, his propulsion is no joke….”

Yoo Seong-un sensed overtime.

“This time, the name was George. It seems that ‘Geo’ was a nickname he had while alive.”

“I’ve heard of the introduction of the Gardener from another dimension, but I still don’t get it. I’ve never heard the exact story either.”

“Me too. When I listen to the story, I feel like it’s similar to Guild Leader Jeong Hae-woon, but for some reason, it feels a little different….”

“Would it be my mistake if I said that this Geo-ssi is also quite unique?”

“I don’t think a gardener would be that special after a saint and an evil spirit, but I have a strong feeling that he’s not a common type among gardeners.”

“Have you ever had a conversation with Mr. George? I’m embarrassed to say, but I haven’t.”

“You didn’t even show yourself to me.”

I know the general outline of it. Because Geo showed it to me briefly before I went to see Cha Eun-hyeok.

Her pink hair, resembling the sunset, was bobbed and swayed at the nape of her neck. Her eyes were filled with colorful jewels, and her attitude was strangely playful throughout.

He was a true 'garden', possessing an extraordinary talent for captivating and capturing someone's attention, acting as if he were doing something he wasn't doing, yet maintaining his balance like a ghost.

‘…but he didn’t tell me exactly what happened or who the person was.’

All of the previous 'Geos' had clear stories. This Geo wouldn't be much different, but for some reason he was putting off explaining it.

Even among 'Geo's', it is particularly difficult to know what he is thinking. It is difficult to know what he is thinking.

“It didn’t seem like you were the type of person who was shy….”

“Well, it’s not like we have the right to be friends with every ‘Geo’.”

“Joohyun is right, that’s Geo’s heart.”

I was just anxious because I couldn't figure out exactly what kind of personality he had.

'If we look at it this way, wouldn't that disqualify me as a curator?'

A gardener who can't even properly keep his distance from mystery, let alone grasp the information. I don't know where he can be used.

Yoo Seong-un watched Geo, who was smiling hollowly but steadily making plans. He looked like the familiar 'Sergio Hunter', but his face was blunt.

“…….”

Whether it will change or develop.

That was something I didn't know yet.

* * *

By the way, Jeong Hae-un also knew about this incident.

“Should I say I’m glad you didn’t do it without telling me?”

“Thank you for saying so. It was worth asking for the list in advance.”

“At the time, I was confused as to whether or not we should fight seriously, but yes, that’s right.”

Jeong Hae-woon smiled and nodded.

“Actually, I still think that maybe I shouldn’t throw it away.”

“How often do you hear this?”

“Once every ten seconds?”

“You still haven’t fallen asleep yet.”

“If you go out like that, will you be hated by your majesty?”

Jeong Hae-woon said, shrugging his shoulders.

“It is true that gardeners work in extremely harsh conditions.”

“My manager was so upset, saying, ‘How can you work without being treated like a human being?’”

“Treatment as a human being, yes. People are treated like animals and tools, and this can be found anywhere… but the way gardeners are treated is beyond that.”

It is completely different for humans to continue to giggle and commit evil acts among themselves and for nature to decide so. The former is very unpleasant, but it does not deny the roots of humanity like the latter.

Jeong Hae-woon continued speaking with his signature smile.

“Do you know? A gardener should always smile. The first thing a newbie learns is ‘how to make the opposite expression of his emotion.’ That way, he can adapt to his own contradictions.”

“You said that it is a difficult job to be honest about.”

“He who reveals his innermost thoughts transparently reveals even the mystery of the garden. Then the world will become chaotic, and the gardener himself will eventually be consumed by the mystery he serves, lose his roots, and become another mystery.”

“I dare say it will be an inconvenience.”

“Yes, it is a pity.”

There may also be a reason for the extremely small number of gardeners.

“Not only can they not be recognized by people for their hard work, they can’t even show it to them. The work in the garden is not real. Does that mean the work is easy? No, in the process of tending the garden, they witness countless fragments of mysterious death.”

It becomes ice, a flower, a tree, the sky, rain, and the soil and flies. It is like a human being, and it is like a nature, and it is like a shattering, repeating. If it is terrible, it is terrible.

Although they were born in nature, they are ultimately human.

“I actually think it’s… similar to the miracle Sergio Hunter showed. He turned people into paint in a deep sea dungeon a while ago. It was to get the hunters out of the dungeon in danger.”

“Did I cause any trouble to them?”

“I’ve heard that it’s a fairly moderate method and treatment compared to the garden’s work. But since I haven’t experienced it myself, it’s just a guess. After all, nature is really mean to humans.”

They rarely understand their weaknesses.

“But it can’t be helped. I’ve only just discovered the mystery about 30 years ago, so I thought it was natural that there were many inconveniences in the work and systems of garden management. In terms of human history, isn’t it like we’re just entering the prehistoric era? Well, it’s probably somewhere around that point. I also thought that it would develop gradually, albeit slowly.”

“Still, you accepted my offer.”

“As the first gardener on Earth, I am wary of you, but I affirm the rules and the story. Surely you are not trying to deny it. This proposal is not far removed from that context.”

“So you thought it wouldn’t be something you did carelessly?”

“I just said, ‘It’s been about 30 years now,’ but if it’s been stagnant for 32 years, it’s time to let it flow. To be honest, there’s a limit to how much I can grab hold of by the collar and spit it out. At least prehistoric people would have hunted together, but gardeners can’t do that.”

In other words.

“That’s right, I’m having a hard time too.”

Shortage of manpower, shortage of resources.

Of course, this was a very dangerous thing to do. It seemed crazy and a drastic change. But the working conditions of the gardeners were too harsh to stop it for that reason.

“How did that friend, Cha Eun-hyeok, react?”

“After some thought, he eventually accepted my offer.”

“Ha, bungeoppang… how fun.”

Jeong Hae-woon, who was rubbing his chin, asked with a smile.

“I must visit you when you open for business.”

“If there’s cream puffs inside, I’ll tell you to stop selling them.”

“It’s a bad thing to put anything other than red bean in bungeoppang.”

“Why doesn’t this change?”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon immediately crossed his arms and leaned back in his chair.

“…You just keep becoming more and more mysterious.”

“Yes, this guy is quite lively.”

“And yet I have the illusion that you haven’t changed.”

“Would a haunted portrait be foolish then?”

“What does it feel like to be stuffed?”

He asked.

“Are you lonely?”

“That’s because I have a lot of friends.”

“That’s not something a human would do.”

“……?”

Geo looked at Jeong Hae-woon with an expressionless face.

“What on earth is the purpose of building a front fence in my front yard?”

Currently, Jeong Hae-un was in 'Geo's Portrait'. In the yard in front of his cabin. No matter what, he didn't want to go inside the house.

“Anyway, thanks to Mr. Jeong Hae-un’s cooperation, I think things will go smoothly.”

“Everything is fine, but if you could just stop the destruction of the Earth, I would be most grateful, Sergio Hunter.”

“I’m not that clueless.”

Geo smiled faintly.

“Thank you for your hard work.”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon also smiled.

"you're welcome."

As expected, this existence was rough.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (309)

309

Episode 309

The change happened quickly.

“…What the heck is this….”

The garden has been painted.

“…Wait a minute, this way.”

“Yes, sir. What’s the matter?”

“Can you see this with your eyes now?”

“Oh… That’s right, I can see it. What is it drawn? Is it a jungle? I think it’s a new work by Black Cloak because it gives off a strong feeling! Right, right?”

“…The work of Black Cloak?”

“Isn’t this painting hanging in such an unexpected place usually a Black Cloak piece? Wow, this is my first time seeing it. It definitely has a different vibe from regular paintings.”

“…….”

“…Senior?”

Naturally, the gardeners were the first to notice the change.

One day, one by one, gardens of unfamiliar forms began to appear in the world. They were mostly found in deserted alleys, near temples, or in remote places such as mountains or the sea.

And it clearly took the form of a 'work' drawn by Black Cloak. Most people did not understand its meaning.

“Even though they are all painted in different ways, they somehow have a similar feel. The sizes of the works are not that big either. Considering the scale of the previous works… Is this a series?”

“I can’t call it right now because it doesn’t have a well-known name, but I think it’s probably right. It’s a series. Well, it’s something that famous artists try at least once. Is it true that he’s essentially a painter?”

“It definitely feels different from my previous works. It’s not just because of the size of the work. Don’t you feel a sense of pure mystery? Ah, it’s like fate….”

People thought it was just another attempt by Black Cloak.

“…….”

“…This, teacher.”

“…Yes, it’s a garden. I should let other people know about this.”

But the gardeners couldn't let it go so easily.

“It’s been so long since we last met that I can’t wait to see your face again.”

“What the heck is going on….”

The garden, like nothing else, came into the public eye.

Not all gardeners attended one meeting. Many gardeners, by nature, were solitary and reclusive. However, they met with most gardeners they could and relayed the situation.

In the midst of the confusion, someone put forth this opinion:

“Could it be that the previous fever was in preparation for this situation?”

“Are you saying that wasn’t just a simple stretching of the root?”

“No, well, I don’t know about that… but it might be possible.”

“It’s not often that gardens are in turmoil at the same time as they were back then.”

“I was nervous because they said that a similar time would be a great disaster.”

“Ugh, I knew it would be a different type since it’s still a long way to go before a second catastrophe occurs, but here we are again….”

“I never imagined that this would be such an unconventional event. Wow, this is crazy.”

The gardeners, who are supposed to always be calm and rational, were in a state of confusion. They were caught up in a mixture of fear, anxiety, and excitement that could not be clearly defined.

The garden was revealed to the world.

“Well, first of all, what is the condition of the gardens?”

“Nothing has changed, it’s completely blue.”

“The same goes for our garden. Above all, the piece that was shown this time, the gardener who corresponds to it, I can’t find it no matter how hard I search.”

“Is it too much of a stretch to call it the garden of gardeners who don’t like socializing? No, what on earth does Black Cloak have to do with gardens…?”

“Wasn’t Black Cloak a sun deity? Even if he were a deity, he couldn’t leave the garden entrance wide open like this! This is a disaster!”

“But the Earth is too quiet for it to be a disaster. First, everyone, please calm down….”

At that time, gardener Jeong Hae-un opened his mouth.

“Don’t worry, brother. It won’t harm you.”

“As expected, the guild leader knew about this matter.”

“I also studied this matter, even if it was insufficient.”

Jung Hae-woon did not reveal that he and Black Cloak were directly connected to 'this incident'. That fact only added to the gardeners' confusion. Instead, Jung Hae-woon intervened when the commotion had died down a little.

“The gardens that have now been revealed are not mysteries that are being managed.”

“Then, what was left unattended…?”

“To be exact, it seems that the gardens of the Earth that had been neglected have come into view. Yes, they are familiar to me. They are gardens that I have visited many times before.”

“So what on earth is going on? What does the Black Cloak have to do with the garden?”

“There must have been some mysterious happening that I, a mere gardener, was unaware of. But if it is true that it is connected with the Black Cloak, then yes, he is a mystery of rules that favor good and polite humans.”

“That is correct, guild leader.”

“It is not a relief, but it is not the beginning of another disaster. Compared to the great catastrophes that the Earth has experienced, isn’t it so mild? I find it very fascinating.”

What Jeong Hae-woon said to the gardener in my guild spread to other gardeners. In fact, Jeong Hae-woon was working overtime again today, using his various identities behind the scenes.

He took measures to prevent gardeners around the world from getting caught up in excessive confusion and causing accidents. Thanks to the 'statuses' with which he had built up popularity, gardeners gradually regained their senses.

From the beginning, they were people who were always asked to remain cool-headed.

“…….”

“…Then how should we understand this situation?”

“…How would I know? Anyway, I feel relieved that it’s not a disaster.”

“If we continue like this and another disaster suddenly strikes, what will happen to us?”

“I’m going to be brutally murdered, right?”

“Yes, to whom? To Jeongwon?”

The veteran gardener shook his head at the question from the bashful new gardener.

“No, to the pissed off association researchers.”

“Those people are always harassing us, even though they don’t do anything themselves.”

“That’s because the research funds that should be shared among those humans are being taken entirely by one individual gardener….”

“That’s a bit much to say, but anyway, what are we really doing?”

“I can’t really say anything definitively. I guess I’ll just have to wait and see how the situation develops.”

It was when 'gardens' first appeared in the world.

* * *

After some time, people were able to find something different about the 'garden'.

“It’s not just that the size of the work is smaller, but the reaction is also a little different.”

“Until now, Black Cloak’s works have shown an attitude of actively intervening in reality.”

“These children just exist. Oh, how can they be so pure and beautiful? Isn’t the attitude of the work that just looks at us so cute?”

“I feel the depth of the work more than anything else. Yes, it really just exists. It’s not like a creepy ghost story like a gray city… It’s like the feeling you get when you see a huge nature.”

“Up until now, Black Cloak has always included intention in his works. In some way, his works have been used according to his will. How do you plan to use this work?”

“I don’t know for sure, but just looking at it is healing. I guess I should say it makes me feel good. It feels like I’m sitting in a really quiet resort and just looking at the sky.”

“I think I know what you mean. It’s just nature itself.”

“Maybe that was the intention of this piece.”

In particular, it was the fans of the black cloak who gave strength to the interpretation of the work.

“Nature, nature. Is there any other nature where such a strong mystery is born? Even dungeons are not like this.”

“At least it is true that it is a sight that is hard for people like us to find. Where else can you get a glimpse of such enchanting nature? Oh my, this ridiculous ingenuity… really….”

“Then, no matter how much I think about it, it can’t be the nature of Earth. Isn’t it a nature with rules that go beyond the logic of this dimension? What kind of flower would cover the sky? Would it embrace the clouds and shine like the sun?”

“How can the word ‘nature’ come to mind immediately while looking at such a strange sight of rules? It is indeed the Black Cloak. His grace is endless.”

“It’s really unfortunate. For some reason, there are no people who went inside in this work. If there were a precedent even once, it would be worth trying again….”

Their conversation spread to several people who were focused on the black cloak's movements.

“Hey, Chaisol.”

“Huh? Why?”

“Did you know about this too?”

“Uh… I don’t really know. That’s something adults do. I’m still a kid.”

“Since when did you become such a special child who could tell the difference between such things?”

“I, I get stabbed a lot too. But it’s really none of my business.”

Chae Sol, a prospective priest of the Solar Church, felt a bit wronged by what his partner, Iru Da, said.

“I don’t know everything that adults do.”

“…? Wait, so at least you know how this works. Isn’t that what you’re implying right now?”

“But I really don’t know?”

"no…."

“I heard you’re going to sell bungeoppang, but I really don’t know anything about business.”

“…….”

Iru Da eventually took her partner to find Kang Seo Dam.

“…Are you talking about bungeoppang?”

“Yes, it’s bungeoppang.”

“You’re selling bungeoppang? The one with the black cloak?”

“Chaisol keeps saying that it’s ‘adult work’.”

“Even for a chosen apostle, it is difficult to talk about the future of the divine.”

“Oh, maybe we made a pact not to mention it? If that’s the case, I might have done something rash….”

“Brother Chaisol doesn’t seem to have any reason to talk deeply about it, so I don’t think he’s talking.”

“……??”

“Sister Iruda.”

Kang Seo-dam gave advice as an adult.

“Forget it.”

"thank you."

With this, Iruda was freed from responsibility.

However, there was one person who could not escape this terrible responsibility, and that was Kang Seo-dam, who had accidentally spoiled the fate of the Earth. After sending the young priests away, Kang Seo-dam hesitated for a while, but soon made up his mind.

He contacted the private number he had received from the curator of the meteor shower.

“…Ah, you got it. This is Father Kang Seo-dam. Would you like to speak with me for a moment?”

—We always have time to talk to our priest. I can guess what's going on, but did you even hear about the bungeoppang?

“Damn it, I didn’t mishear. What are you planning? What the hell are you talking about, bungeoppang, in the future that the divine has occupied?”

—Jio hasn't finished preparing for business yet. But when we open, we'll invite Father Kang Seo-dam. Wow, special service. Sounds good, huh?

“Is this a special service to the thorny road?”

—I don’t think the Sun Goddess would dislike it that much either.

“What on earth do you think of the sun…!!”

He didn't hate it.

“…….”

-What, you suddenly became silent.

"…no…."

He was very interested.

“…….”

—… That kind of thing.

Yoo Seong-un, who had guessed the situation, felt sorry for him. He wasn't being sarcastic, because he was genuinely feeling sorry for him.

—When I see things like this, I think getting closer to the divine isn't such a good thing.

“… Even if I don’t know if it’s okay for Mr. Yoo Seong-un to say that, no. It is truly an incredible honor to receive divine revelations in a mere human body….”

—For something like that, your voice is strong… um, yeah… I see… .

“…I look forward to hearing from you later with excitement. I wish you good luck.”

-Priest too.

Kang Seo-dam ended the call and covered her face with both hands.

“…….”

Why of all things, bungeoppang?

'Why is this trial happening to me?'

While Kang Seo-dam was quietly struggling with the unexpected and excessive honor, Yoo Seong-woon, who had cut off contact, looked at Geo with a strange face.

“It seems like Father Kang Seo-dam is under a lot of stress.”

“Oh, that won’t do. A good person like Father Kang Seo-dam should always be happy.”

“It’s not a world where good people can always be happy.”

“But it has to be that way whenever it catches my eye. I like that kind of thing.”

“Oh, that’s cool.”

Yoo Seong-un couldn't hold back his laughter in the end.

“How much do you plan on increasing my overtime mileage?”

“It makes me happy to see you happy while saying that.”

George smiled with eyes like opal.

“…Ah, this is fun.”

Everything was a mess.

* * *

The two-legged 'Garden' went to find gardeners.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (310)

310

Episode 310

“I am nothing.”

The garden said.

“I walk barefoot on all kinds of ground, look at the sky, and taste the air.”

The ecstatic eyes smiled.

“Isn’t that something that quite a few people could do?”

“…you are right.”

“But this is different, it’s a magic hat.”

“It’s magic.”

“Yes, magic. Isn’t it amazing?”

He turned his empty hat over and showed me.

“What's inside here?"

“I don’t know anything. Nothing….”

“Oh, are you scared? I understand that feeling. But look, this place is empty. Don’t you want to fill it up? Don’t you want to wonder what’s inside? Don't you want to put your hand in?"

"But how dare I…."

"Reach out and touch."

"……."

The gardener put his hand in.

"What do you feel? Oh, please tell me quickly. I am so curious."

"…It's hard, like a mineral."

"What is the temperature of that mineral? Is it cold? Hot? Lukewarm? Cool? Warm?"

"… Tea, is… it raining?"

"Does it move?"

"It doesn't move."

"Hmm, well."

Light-colored hair flows down.

"How about this?"

The hat in his hand shook playfully, and the gardener who had put his hand inside felt the vibration as well. The hard, cold mineral he was holding shook along with him in his playfulness… .

And the garden asked.

"Did it shake?"

"…Yes, I was shaken. Me too."

"Isn't it moving even now?"

“…….”

“Is it still cold now?”

“…….”

“Is it still hard now?”

"…ah…."

The gardener, without knowing it, pulled his hand out and looked at what he was holding.

"…no."

It was a rough-looking mole.

“It was a mole. A mole….”

“Oh my…! I’m so touched by such a cute friend! A mole, what a great prankster in this lush field.”

“I’m worried that moles will eat the crops in my field.”

“But that’s okay, look. This guy doesn’t eat crops. Didn’t you touch it? Didn’t you see it with your own two eyes? Now, you can talk. You’ve been patient. Give this guy a name.”

“…….”

"hurry."

“…I, my….”

A smile appeared on the dry gardener's face.

“It’s my garden, it’s my field.”

It wasn't hard. It was soft dirt.

It wasn't even cold. It was lukewarm dirt.

It was moving. It was living soil.

“Ha, hahaha… I, I never thought a mole would come to my field. In my field….”

“Since they live so hidden underground, it’s hard to see them often.”

“I’m not good at talking, so that might be good. That would be good, that’s right. Rather than a boring person like me, I’d rather be in the warm ground. That’s what a mole is.”

“I feel like I’m going to be raised beautifully, and this irresponsible person’s heart feels relieved.”

“What are you?”

“I am a human being.”

The garden said, "People are like that."

* * *

“I am nothing.”

The garden said.

“The only thing I know how to do is make a garland out of these pretty flowers. That’s all.”

“…A crown… Could you make one for me too? I was just curious.”

“It’s really not that hard. I’m very handy, and you seem to know it well. It’s really amazing. How did you know it? Just tell me.”

“I thought maybe it was because your fingers are long and delicate.”

“The hands of a mischievous wanderer must always be graceful. Since you guessed correctly, I will give you a reward. It is a crown that suits you very well."

It's a fluffy crown.

"…It seems too beautiful for me to write."

It is a crown that makes you feel the warmth of life.

"Ah, it is beautiful… It is alive even though it has been cut off. It is alive while being woven. What should I call this? Perhaps people might call this work a mutation."

"It is for the beholder to decide, not for others to decide."

"A flower that is still alive, even when broken, is beautiful. That is what I have decided. A crown that is more than enough for me. A crown made from the flesh of my flower garden. It is really wonderful, really."

"If you want, you can wear this on your head."

"It's too much for me. I'm just grateful that you showed me. When will I ever reach that state? Becoming one with the garden, life, and mystery, harmless to anything… their own…."

"You're just too busy lowering yourself, so I guess I can't help it either."

The gardener shows his hat. He turns it over, puts the wreath inside, and covers it with his hand.

"What do you think will happen in here?"

"I don't know anything."

"Such a pure love, such a lonely wanderer would desire. Your gardener has been blessed with a wonderful priest."

"It seems like a dream that the day will come when my love will be acknowledged by such a noble person. Will such a day ever come to me again? Will I ever be able to do so…?”

“Okay, guess.”

“…….”

“Close your eyes.”

“…….”

“Listen.”

Close your eyes. Listen. Put your hands together and pray.

“What do you hear?”

“…I can hear the sound of a small, rasping breath.”

“The sound of their delicate breaths, how do they breathe? These delicate flower petals?”

“So delicate, perhaps… is it flying? Like the flower petals covering this garden? Like the warm air?”

“Where did that rumbling breathing sound come from?”

“It came from the flapping of their wings.”

“You guessed right, Priest of the Garden. You heard the right answer.”

The gardener removes his hand. The hat opens. Inside it is a butterfly… .

“…….”

Hundreds and thousands of butterflies fly.

“…Ah, aaaah….”

“Oh my goodness, your crown has turned into a butterfly and has flown away. What should I do about this?”

“There, in my garden… there’s a butterfly flying in my garden. Oh, it’s so beautiful. So beautiful…”

“They are so light that if you lose focus for even a moment, you won’t even notice that they’re sitting on you. Wouldn’t the butterflies be sad then? They don’t even have a mouth to call you….”

“How could I dare to do that? I worship them, I adore them, I love them. Whenever and wherever they choose to make me their torch, I will gladly serve them.”

“So now you have to focus, my friend. You have to.”

The garden takes the gardener's hand.

“Concentrate.”

On the back of the hand of the gardener who has climbed up above, a butterfly as colorful as a flower petal lands.

“The garden is calling you, my loving priest.”

“…Can there be such a delicate call…?”

“Can you hear the sound of your gardener’s wings fluttering in your ears?”

“…If I don’t concentrate even for a moment, I don’t think I’ll be able to hear it.”

“Always love, and you too. The moment you lose your form, they cannot call you.”

“I will keep that in mind.”

“Remain human.”

The garden said.

“Just as I intended.”

The garden said to love.

* * *

“I am nothing.”

The gardener retorted.

“No, you are a garden. A garden that walks on two feet and sees the world with all its eyes.”

The garden was magnificent.

“Oh my, I didn’t know I would be getting refuted so soon.”

“I heard that you are giving families to gardeners. Will you do the same for me? Is this the mercy of your gardener?”

“It’s love.”

“I don’t know.”

The gardener couldn't understand.

“If you love everyone, how can that be called love?”

“Some people call it heartless. Do you think I am that heartless?”

“It is all the more heartless because it is so rich that it can contain anything.”

“That could be my love.”

The garden spread its arms.

“Look broadly, very broadly. As if I could be everything because I was nothing.”

The gardener did not dare to contradict that statement.

“…I want to be like you someday. But that would be difficult. So I want to become the eyes, flesh, and blood of a being like you.”

“I guess you don’t want to remain human.”

“I sometimes imagine that my end is set as a cell in a garden.”

“That’s also very romantic, I really like that kind of thing. It’s wonderful.”

“You are very generous with your compliments….”

It was quite different from his blunt garden.

“…….”

It was really hot here.

“…What should I call you?”

On the desert hill, he saw two feet of a shadowless garden. Its feet were like spotless white marble, but somehow they seemed connected to the sand of the desert. They were indistinguishable, just one.

It's like a mirage, the gardener thought, calling it.

“Mr. Gardener?”

“That’s good too.”

“If you want, I can call you human.”

“Oh, that’s good too.”

“Then what about the wanderer?”

“That too is ecstatic.”

“Why don’t you deny anything?”

“Because that is my love.”

“…Isn’t that just trash….”

Strangely enough, I felt empty.

“You claim to be a human and take the form of a human, yet you say such irresponsible things.”

“I see, I am a really irresponsible lover. One of my pleasures is picking on a bunch of fun people like you and then leisurely walking away.”

“Those who are so in love will be desperate to feel your touch once again.”

“There is a saying in Chinese characters, ‘Gyeonggukjisae’. How many times do you think I have ruined a country? Once? Ten times? A hundred times? Perhaps it is meaningless to estimate.”

“You are so harmful, I am really scared.”

How can you manipulate a mere human being like this?

“You are cruel.”

“That’s how love is.”

“How can you be so loving?”

“Why would I limit my love for people? If you start looking at me with such a narrow perspective, you’ll only see fragments. Why don’t you just look at me?”

“People don’t necessarily look at the sun with their eyes.”

You will go blind.

“This is a desert. There is not a single blade of grass, not a single drop of water, just a dry desert. But I love this desert so much. My garden makes me feel at ease.”

“Do you want to become a cell of the garden?”

“I want to be a grain of sand here. Someday, when I turn into a solid stone, or when my body sinks, and reaches the end, I too will be granted that peace. I don’t need life or shade.”

“Does that also mean garden?”

“…….”

“I don’t think so?”

The garden collapses.

He sits down like a child and fills his thick hat with sand. The fine, reddish sand is gradually accumulating inside.

Suddenly the gardener felt sorry for the hat. It really was swinging.

“…If you treat it so roughly, won’t the hat get angry?”

“Since you are a friend who has helped me with a lot of things, I believe you will be tolerant of this much.”

“As expected, you are irresponsible.”

“You too.”

The hat soon falls flat, then is picked up again. Another mound appears on top of the desert mound.

“Let’s see, who could be in here?”

“There might be nothing.”

“Aren’t you curious? Come here and let’s clear some sand together?”

“You’re trying to hold me accountable for things I don’t even know how to do….”

Still, it suits the joke.

“…….”

Perhaps my desert has called me, for my love and loyalty to him are not false.

“Can I just leave it like this?”

“I’ll clean up first. Now, put the magic wand here….”

“I’ve seen little kids do similar pranks.”

“There’s no reason to lose your childlike innocence as you grow older.”

"ha…."

The garden once. The gardener once. The garden once. The gardener once. Hand after hand, they scoop out the sand little by little. Even though they scooped it out like that for a long time, for some reason, the sand did not decrease.

I don't know how they can play such childish pranks.

“…….”

“…Ttaran.”

In the sand, a fennec fox shakes itself off and reveals itself.

“Oh my god, I have a new family. What do I do?”

“Why do you want to keep me as a human being?”

“Why do we need a reason to remain human and die human?”

The gardener picks up a tiny fox and places it on the gardener's head.

“They fit together so well.”

Then he bumps his lips into the fallen fox.

“Please do not run away from fate, from responsibility. The garden does not want that, so how can you treat yourself so carelessly? In the end, falling apart as a human being is also a way to return to the garden’s providence….”

“…That takes too long.”

“That is the responsibility that humans must bear. Since you were born from nature and have reason, look at the world with your two eyes and devote yourself to life as a human being. That is what it means to be human. That is the qualification of a human being. It is your duty and right. Please do not abandon it.”

"you are…."

This mystery, this world.

“You are irresponsible to the end.”

“That’s love.”

“It is also nature. It is providence and destiny.”

He laughed hollowly.

“…Fuck.”

The fox on top of my head was really fluffy.

“It’s hard as a dog, living as a human being.”

“And yet, aren’t we humans the ones who struggle?”

“Will you have mercy?”

“No, I just love you.”

“You love so much, it’s dirty.”

“I love everything in the world and take it in with my eyes.”

A lukewarm hand caressed the gardener. Light, light, like a ghost.

“…….”

“Live as a human being.”

The garden told him to survive.

* * *

“Oh, wait a minute.”

Yoo Seong-un asked Geo, who had returned home.

“But why is it only me who has 194?”

“I wonder if there are still 194 of them?”

“Stop making me more anxious. Is this favoritism?”

“Then it must be the garden’s favoritism.”

“Aren’t you going to be a gardener soon?”

“If that’s what you want to see, then that’s what it must be.”

“This is the most ambiguous Geo I’ve ever seen, really….”

“Isn’t that my charm, Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

George just laughed.

“But you will still take good care of me. You will visit me often and ask me how I am feeling today. You will place me in a pure white gallery and stuff me, and enjoy watching the colors change over time. I really cherish that sincerity of Yoo Seong-un.”

“…It’s really different to hear you say that, Geo.”

“I’ve never made up stories, but the response is not as good as I thought. That’s too bad.”

“More than that… to the gardeners, why are you creating a family?”

“…? Well….”

Geo answered simply.

“Because the easiest thing to love is family.”

Of course, Geo also knew that there were many families in the world that weren't like that. But even so, the word 'family' had a magical power that made people love those they didn't even share blood with.

The lonely gardener, of course, needed love. A big love, a childish and naked love.

“In other words, it is a gift of love that I give you.”

“There is so much love there.”

“If I didn’t have this much love, how could I have been human until now?”

“…Do you still want to call me a human? Even now, in this state?”

“There’s no reason why not, right?”

Geo laughed, holding his hat to his mouth like a fan.

“Love makes people endure.”

In any way.

“So what we need now is, of course….”

“Is it a union?”

“It’s welfare, I guess.”

Geo called Cha Eun-hyeok, who was waiting in his cabin.

“Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok.”

“…….”

“Let’s go.”

“…Where…?”

Cha Eun-hyeok asked inwardly.

'To the afterlife?'

As of now, it's the most likely destination.

* * *

The collection officer asked Joo-Hyeon.

“I heard that Geo-ssi’s food stall also has bungeoppang.”

“Oh, rather than adding it… I’ve been planning it for quite some time.”

“Did you say that the person you’re with is Cha Eun-hyeok? He must be having a hard time. I should bring him a snack.”

“…I see, that would be good too.”

Joohyun nodded.

“Eventually, Mr. Geo will bring you out after feeding you well.”

“Huh? Weren’t you going on a sales trip? It wasn’t sales, it was more like a restaurant tour, right?”

“Since Mr. Geo cooks, there’s no way he wouldn’t eat his own cooking.”

His haunted portrait friend had a pretty big stomach.

“And he’s not a great person who wouldn’t feed the person next to him while eating himself….”

Joohyun smiled bitterly.

'Just looking at this person's words about needing to pack a snack, what.'

Pigs were contagious. Geo had that power.

I don’t know why it had to be that kind of power, though.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (311)

311

Episode 311

There has been a story going around like a ghost story among gardeners recently.

“What do you think about that story?”

“What are you talking about?”

“I’m talking about a garden shaped like a human being.”

In fact, it wasn't just a simple ghost story. Of course, it was a ridiculous and bizarre story like the common novels floating around the world. But they knew that it was an event that actually happened.

The man looked fed up.

“…Was that true? No, I didn’t think it was a lie, but….”

“There’s no such thing as just a rumor going around between us.”

“I thought about it that way, but it was such a far-fetched story, I don’t know. I guess I didn’t think much about it because it didn’t feel real.”

“I think I know how you feel.”

The woman smiled faintly.

“A garden that looks like a person.”

It was a scary thing.

“I don’t want to believe it either.”

“Then that must be true, right? I think I heard a story about a garden that visits gardeners and creates families for them. Is that right?”

“I’ve heard from some people that that’s true. Well, it hasn’t happened in my garden yet. Maybe it never will.”

The woman shrugged.

“I guess not all gardeners get to enjoy such a miracle.”

“I can’t even figure out what kind of rules this garden has….”

“There are things you can only feel by seeing them in person.”

“It seems like you are a very fickle person, since the story keeps floating around like a ghost story.”

“But there are some things in common, things that gardeners who have families have in common.”

“What is that?”

The woman answered the man's question.

“They were dangerous people.”

It was really hard work to make a living as a gardener.

“Some people were going crazy with loneliness, some were struggling under the weight of the garden, and some gave up and just wanted to become a part of the garden.”

“So to speak, they must have been people who had difficulty living as human beings.”

“Maybe so? One of them was a friend of mine, and I thought he would be reduced to a mystery before the end of the year.”

He said that he would disappear without being able to die even as a human.

“I saw that guy who used to be like that is now living a life of his own.”

I tried to hold on, even though I melted several times in the damn desert heat.

“I asked why. He said he couldn’t go now because he had a family to feed. Isn’t that funny?”

“…What’s funny?”

“The family that the ‘Garden’ created for him was a part of the desert. It was just a piece of desert flesh that was taken away, remade, and reborn as a cute desert fox.”

The desert gardener knew that too.

“But then they said we have to feed them….”

“…That’s right, it’s nonsense to say that a gardener feeds a garden.”

“There’s something even funnier when you say something without even knowing it.”

“I wonder what kind of family the ‘garden’ gave that friend.”

The man looked fed up.

“It seems like the more you dig into this world, the crazier things that come out.”

They were not the only ones having these conversations and being lost in confusion. Any gardener with even a minimal network of connections had heard the term 'garden' at least once.

However, the uproar did not spread much. That was the way it was with gardeners. This place was originally closed. They had to be rational even though the entrance to the garden was exposed to the world.

“Let’s make sure there are no commotions.”

“In this already tiring situation, there is no need for us to make a fuss.”

“Didn’t Gardener Jeong Hae-un say the same thing? This isn’t a disaster. If so, it’s just a change, so there’s no reason for gardeners to buy it and make a fuss.”

“That ‘garden’ is also a great mystery. Even if it looks and acts like a human, it is no different from the divinities. It will be similar to our garden.”

“Even if there is a purpose, in the end, it is also a part of nature.”

They decided that the 'garden' was just a phenomenon, just as the staff of the collection had treated 'Mr. Sergio' as a natural phenomenon or a house plant. Or a ghost, or a fog, or a disaster… .

Around that time, another change occurred.

“Did you hear that?”

“What the heck….”

“I heard there’s a food stall in the dungeon.”

“……??”

This was an absurd story even to gardeners.

"yes?"

“They also sell bungeoppang.”

"why?"

It was a situation where questions arose naturally.

No, really, why?

* * *

“I thought you were going to work in the garden right away.”

George, who had been lying still at Juhyun's words, looked up at him.

“Why did you think so?”

“It was a plan created with the welfare of gardeners in mind from the beginning.”

“Yes, what Joo-hyun said is true. But since it’s come to this, there’s more… something….”

The garden laughed.

“Wouldn’t it be nice if it was fun?”

"…okay!"

As expected, his way of thinking was different.

“But I still don’t know what the criteria for Mr. Geo’s ‘fun’ is.”

“Oh, no. Are you worried? I don’t hurt people….”

“I think that standard is also quite vague. People in the world are not as mentally strong as Mr. Geo thinks.”

“When have I ever harmed a good citizen?”

“At least not by Mr. Geo’s standards.”

But Joo-hyun's friend was really big-hearted. He was so big that he believed that everyone would think like him. In other words, he had too much faith. He believed that everyone would be like him.

'Mr. Yoo Seong-un said that this is a common mistake in Shinbi's thinking. It's because he believes that all humans can do what he does. It's because he lacks information about the human race.'

Joo-hyun did not deny that viewpoint. This portrait friend often turned people into 'paint' without any thought. It meant that he did not consider the mental burden that others would feel.

Most people who have come to be paints now are probably those who voluntarily asked to become 'paints' in order to appreciate Geo's work.

“…Mr. Geo, you need to be a little more careful.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un actually asked me not to do that.”

“That must have been a request made solely for the convenience of the curator.”

The more human-like the 'Portrait of Geo' became, the more troublesome it became for the curator. The better his human imitation became, the more abnormal Geo became. This was like a minor disaster.

“What I meant was, Geo-ssi often gets into trouble without thinking about it. It really confuses the people around him.”

“There is no reason why I shouldn’t do it, and no reason why I can’t do it, so why should I hesitate? After a brief moment of confusion, we can live more enjoyably.”

“I’ll ask again, but where did the ‘fun’ of this project come from? Why was it a dungeon and not a garden? If it’s you, Geo, I’m sure there’s a reason for it.”

“Well, I guess.”

He covered my mouth with his hat.

“…….”

“…….”

“…Wouldn’t that be more fun?”

“I understand that you have no intention of explaining it to me.”

But Joo-hyun had guessed too. He also had a brain.

'I hope this situation becomes familiar to everyone.'

Clearly, Geo's motivation was 'I didn't want my friend Yoo Seong-un to have a hard time'. That's true. However, even though the trigger was trivial, 'Geo's Portrait' has always caused events that changed the world.

'So this incident will probably be along similar lines. That's probably why so many garden entrances were scattered throughout the world. This person must have known that the world didn't fall into chaos because of the gardeners' characteristically fierce cool-headedness…'

If Geo knew about Joo-hyun's thoughts, he would feel a little wronged.

The reason he drew so many garden entrances was to catch 'George'. He didn't block them even though they were appearing all over the world because he knew they weren't dangerous. It was just an incident of that level.

But Joo-Hyeon, who knew him through the eyes of the origin, couldn't help but think more deeply.

'I'm trying to make the unknown mysterious realm known to everyone because most people have never seen it. That's probably why I chose a dungeon as my first business location instead of a garden. That way, people's eyes will naturally move without feeling burdened.'

Well, as a result.

"……."

It didn't seem like anything bad.

"…It may seem a bit extreme."

"Am I being harsh? It's strange, I've heard a lot of people say I'm soft and sweet."

"This time, Mr. Geo is a bit burdensome."

Joohyun quietly distanced himself.

"Where did my blunt Mr. Geo go? Where did Mr. Giovanni and Mr. Argio go?"

"Here it is."

"I don't know."

"It breaks my heart when you pretend not to know like that, Joohyun. We're friends."

"It's strange, the Geo I know wasn't such a water ghost-like person…."

"Oh my goodness, a water ghost. If you are this scared, I, a kind soul, should step aside."

George smiled broadly. His eyes curved like a butterfly playing a trick.

“You must be very scared.”

“…Please don’t go to a strict place and fool people….”

“It’s unfair, I was just in love.”

“It’s trash to make someone unable to live without that love and then just walk away.”

“Then I guess I’m a pretty piece of trash, right?”

"aha…."

“Then I have already fulfilled my duty, haven’t I?”

“…….”

“Mr. Joohyun?”

Joohyun just kept her mouth shut.

‘… How could such a ruffian happen to my kind and honest Geo-ssi?’

I felt heartbroken, as if my gentle youngest sibling had been swallowed by bad water.

* * *

“Captain, captain.”

“I’m so tired I could die, don’t talk nonsense….”

“I heard there’s a food stall roaming around the dungeon these days.”

“Fuck, I told you not to talk nonsense.”

“Oh, really?”

The team members started crying as the leader, the hunter, started to harass them.

“I told you, I’m not the only one who heard that?”

“We barely found our safe zone. Aren’t you tired? Why don’t you sleep instead of talking?”

“How can I catch him while the captain is awake? There is a sense of duty.”

“Then, are those rags lying around out there really so corrupt that they can’t sleep? Stop talking nonsense and rest while you can. I’ll be asleep soon anyway. Next time, you guys have to watch out….”

“No, really.”

"…ha…."

The captain nodded with a tired face.

“Okay, let’s go in and see.”

The place they were in was none other than a B-class dungeon. It was a tough dungeon for them, whose average rank was C. They knew how important it was to rest at times like this, but they persisted.

I had to assume that he had some kind of idea or intention. It could have just been a story he brought up because he was really bored. When the leader nodded, the team member brightened up and told me the rumor he had heard.

“Selling bungeoppang in the dungeon….”

“Just grow up, you little punk.”

“Oh, no, no, really?”

“Where on earth did all this bluffing begin?”

“I didn’t say that out loud. I heard it from a friend I can trust.”

“I have to be able to believe what you say.”

Why on earth did the word "bungeoppang" appear in a dungeon?

“If it’s bungeoppang, isn’t it that? A lump of flour that sometimes appears in the winter, pulled by a cart.”

In today's world, bungeoppang is not a snack that is in high demand. To be more specific, it is not a particularly delicious food, although it has a fan base. This is because there are fewer resources available than before the Great Disaster.

“Well, that’s delicious on a cold day. It’s hot and….”

“It’s just a bite, though.”

“So why did you come out all of a sudden?”

“My friend came back from a chilly dungeon and saw a food stall there.”

“Isn’t this a hallucination?”

It was the most likely guess.

“I was just so hungry.”

“Oh, that’s right, I said it was a distress situation….”

“Look at that.”

“But it’s not just one guy who says that.”

“What the heck… Then it’s not a dungeon trait.”

Very occasionally, in high-level dungeons, monsters like 'merchants' would appear. In other words, they were monsters that were part of the story of the dungeon. They would sometimes sell tools or food materials that were helpful to hunters.

“If multiple people said that, then it wasn’t seen in the same dungeon.”

Does that make sense?

“Are there any food carts that wander through the dungeon?”

“Yes, I heard they sell a variety of things besides bungeoppang.”

“That’s funny. Let’s go in, and what else do you sell? Street food? Skewers or something?”

“Fish cake skewers, kimbap, tteokbokki… Oh, and they said they also sell sundae.”

“…Is it a snack shop-like concept? The menu looks better than I thought.”

The captain hunter also heard from his parents. Before the great disaster, snacks were sold in places like food stalls. Now, you have to go to a proper restaurant to eat them.

“It’s quite funny that they sell that kind of food at a street stall.”

“Right? Oh, I’m hungry… I wish you would come to us too.”

“I’m already starving, so why are you saying something like that?”

The captain clicked his tongue.

“Okay, then rest.”

They were isolated.

The blizzard that swept through the area was stealing away my body temperature every moment. I barely managed to find a safe zone in the shape of a cave, but it was wide and there was no food or weapons. Dangerous monsters were lurking around here.

‘Damn, if only there were fewer monsters…’

I brought the kids here to have a blast and ended up killing them all. I frowned in disgust, and a team member who had been hesitating took something out. The captain saw it.

“Over there, this….”

It was a blue jewel.

“…An artifact? I don’t feel anything different, but why did you bring something like this? Isn’t it just a jewel?”

“No, I got this from volunteer work.”

“Volunteering… Oh, right. You said you were a member of the Cloak Church.”

“Hey, I’m not a believer. I’m just participating in club activities.”

“But it was recognized as a religion. So what is this? Can I eat it?”

“How do you eat this, are you crazy?!”

The teammate who had been jumping up and down hugged the jewel tightly.

“I got this directly from Black Cloak!”

“…What? Black Cloak gives you jewels too?”

“That, something… It’s something that members who have been active for a while have at least one of. It’s like a badge for veterans.”

“So why did you show me this?”

“…My friend also had a piece of jewelry like this, and after it broke, a food truck came….”

“…….”

“…Shall we try it?”

The captain nodded.

“…Try it.”

There was no way to know if what the team member said was true. It could have made things even more complicated.

The Black Cloak is a divine being. It is said to be a friendly being that shows quite a human appearance, but its essence is ultimately close to a natural phenomenon. And the captain thought it was crazy to trust such a natural phenomenon.

'There are many hunters who have performed summoning rituals in the dark in situations like this and passed away.'

But at this point, it's time to do something crazy.

“What difference would it make if we fail even more since we’re already failed anyway?”

“Oh, a little.”

It was when my teammate got annoyed and tried to break the jewel.

“—Are you going to break it?”

“…….”

“Don't break it.”

A pure white hand wrapped around the hand of a teammate.

“What a pity.”

“…Uh, uh….”

The team members and the captain turned their heads and looked at the owner of the hand.

“Just call me.”

A being like a flower garden in spring.

It was quite natural, I blended in with them.

* * *

Why do people keep trying to break my gifts?

Geo, who is soft-hearted, has been in deep trouble these days.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (312)

312

Episode 312

Geo's gardener welfare plan was nothing special.

“Become a pig, yap.”

“Gururur!”

That was all.

Those countless garden friends I had drawn before? They have egos. They have the right to be independent. In other words, there was no indication of the world that the garden friends had secretly offered in Geo's plan.

'But it's not a big problem.'

That's because I only drew good friends just in case.

'They're not the type of kids who would cause an accident.'

Geo believed in my so-called children.

But when we actually tried to do business, there were no customers. Of course, we could have provided door-to-door service, but that wasn't a food stall. It was just a common business trip these days. I'm sorry to say, but it wasn't romantic or fun.

And George, the incarnation of dopamine, wouldn't allow it.

“Is there no romance in human life?”

It's not even fun?

“That’s not right.”

Additional plans arose from there.

“Let’s start marketing.”

"meow."

“Okay, Dana. Just ask them, whether they’re alive or dead. I’ll try to persuade them. It’s my specialty.”

“Kung?”

“Honey, if you can catch your little brother, then do it. Of course, I won’t just sit still.”

George was quite determined.

“This is a tragedy that happened because there were few people floating around in the garden…!”

So I targeted places with a lot of floating population. That was the dungeon.

Dungeons were usually populated by people. There was even a saying that if you own just one decent dungeon, you can support a guild for three generations.

So, while there may be unpopular dungeons on this planet, there have never been undiscovered dungeons. Probably.

“For a restaurant to become famous, it must first be known. That’s how people come from far away. A truly famous restaurant should be able to attract people even from far away….”

“Huh…?”

“Father, please trust this beautiful son. Even though he looks like this, he has traveled a lot. There is no way my perspective is wrong… If that doesn’t work out, I will kidnap him as a last resort.”

"dream??"

“Fortunately, this is still a blue ocean. There are no competitors. There is demand, but no supply. Could there be a better environment for starting a business? I am confident.”

That's how Geo started his first business in the dungeon.

“…….”

The only problem was that most dungeons weren't that… narrow.

“…? There must be someone there, but why can’t they come to me…? This is strange, this can’t be happening.”

“Kung.”

“Oh, there are some bad things about the synchronization. My presence is overshadowed by the naturalness.”

“Kung?”

“It’s sad, I’m the type of person who gets entangled with people even when I just sit still.”

Flowers go to bees, or bees don't come to flowers. As the saying goes, a thirsty person digs a well. I thought they would come if they smelled honey, but the problem was that the energy of 'George' was obscured.

The reason it was covered up was because of his business partner,

Eunhyuk Cha.

“I’m sorry, but I don’t think that partner is right. Please leave him out.”

“Ahh… You don’t want to make money with me? I’m really hurt, how could you do that after coming all this way?”

“Please don’t make things difficult for the people with your crocodile tears. Seriously… I think… I think just being a part-time worker would be enough. A business partner is supposed to have a stake or something.”

“I wonder, why did I think it didn’t exist?”

“…Please tell me it doesn’t exist….”

“Why are you crying?”

Cha Eun-hyeok was a civilian. A non-Awakened person who was not a hunter, a gardener who was not a gardener. A rookie among rookies.

There was no way Geo's brain wouldn't vote on Eunhyuk Cha's safety.

-Is it really necessary to vote?

-Yes, that's right. No matter how much I think about it, I don't think Mr. George would hold back if I didn't tell him in advance.

-I don’t think it will harm Eunhyuk Cha’s health if I don’t exercise self-restraint…

- Mental health is also health. Please do not discriminate.

—Wouldn’t being captivated by the beauty of nature be a pretty good experience in life?

Three Geos opposed it.

-I don't think so.

-I don't think so.

-I don't think so either.

- The motion was rejected by a majority of the votes against. Mr. George, please refrain from doing so.

—I thought Mr. Argio would take my side, but surprisingly, you are much more delicate than I thought.

—Originally, weak subordinates need to be taken care of with care. That's the only way they can become adults who do their part.

-Aha, that kind of perspective?

Wasn’t it obvious that I wouldn’t be able to withstand the full force of ‘George’s’ temper while maintaining my sanity? That’s why I tried to control my energy as carefully as possible… .

Unfortunately, we ended up in a situation where we couldn't promote ourselves.

“…Is that what you meant by marketing? I mean, the face?”

“That’s included too.”

To be exact, it was a belief in George's characteristics.

“I’m such a sweet person that people come to me even if I just stay still.”

“…….”

“Don’t look at me like that. I’m hurt. I was just talking about my physical characteristics.”

“So, face….”

“No, there are other things besides that that naturally attract attention.”

They say that each person feels something different. Some say it's a scent, some say it's beauty, and some say it's comfort, excitement, or love.

“Yes, love.”

He was the type of person who would be loved even if he just stayed still. That was his fate.

In a garden that was the very embodiment of mystical nature, there was no human being that George could not enchant, especially if he was in some way entangled in love.

“This is difficult, if we go like this, we’ll have to provide on-site service.”

“How about putting up some flyers? Don’t move around yourself.”

“Why are you stopping me?”

“I’m afraid that innocent civilians will fall into the fire pit….”

“I am not an evil person who pushes innocent civilians into a pit of fire.”

“Don’t moths fly to the light? Our country will be ruined if you do that.”

“Even though I compared it to a beautiful country, I really have no intention of ruining the country.”

“You said you ate it, you said you had a record.”

“That’s the karma of those who stabbed the side of someone who had no intention of giving them rice cakes until it bled.”

But there was another problem here.

“Where do we find people in such a large space?”

“…? You came to my house, didn’t you?

“I can’t find anyone who doesn’t have the qualities of a gardener. Isn’t that a shame?”

“That’s… uh, is that what you meant by garden?”

“You could say it’s similar to a cat trying to figure out the qualities of a can opener.”

“Can opener?”

“To put it humbly, it’s like instinctively finding your soulmate.”

“In some ways, it seems more rude than a can opener.”

“Ha, there’s nothing I can do. I really have no choice but to search for them one by one.”

So, for now, Cha Eun-hyeok was left in the food stall.

“Promise not to come out.”

“…Curator Yoo Seong-un said that I shouldn’t make promises with Sergio Hunter so easily. Am I allowed to put my finger on that right now?”

“Um, this is a decision made out of consideration for the weak Cha Eun-hyeok. Cha Eun-hyeok, who is not awakened, may face trouble at any time or in any way if he goes outside our business premises….”

“I will stay here.”

“Right, be good.”

That is how the journey of the two-legged garden began.

Of course, the road wasn't easy. Dungeons that needed a 'food stall' were usually so big that they were dirty. Geo had no choice but to run around and show off his sales skills.

It was quite an interesting process though.

“…….”

George was very temperamental.

“Hmm, I’m sick of it.”

“Kung?”

“If you think about it, why do I have to go out of my way to do this, honey?”

“Kung…?”

“You must come and catch this precious body.”

So Geo decided to become the 'hidden picture' in the hidden picture game.

Surprisingly, people responded to it. The sweet scent of the 'garden' was not completely hidden, although it was suppressed. As soon as you approached a certain radius, guests would naturally become captivated.

“You are my first customer.”

“…Ah, ahh….”

“Come here, are you tired? Let me help you.”

"you are…."

“It only costs a very small price.”

“…….”

In this way, Geo succeeded in his first sale.

"excuse me."

And there was a bit of backlash from Cha Eun-hyuk.

“What if I really get possessed?”

“But you’re still eating.”

“No matter how I look at it, the customer is not in his right mind.”

“Are you out of your mind? You’re even having a nice conversation with me….”

Geo smiled, caressing the hunter's cheek.

“Right?”

“Yes, yes.”

Cha Eun-hyeok drank the cabbage juice without saying a word. It was one of the employee welfare items that Geo had placed inside the food stall because Joo-hyun had said she might need it.

At first, he said it was burdensome and difficult to eat, but now he is eating it. It seems like it was worth encouraging him, so Geo asked with a smile.

“Oh, that tastes good, right?”

“…? Is this… cabbage juice? Why is it so sweet and rich? No matter how much I think about it, it doesn’t taste like it should come from cabbage.”

“This is the juice I squeezed myself from the cabbage I grew myself. I remembered hearing somewhere that cabbage juice is good for stress-related gastritis.”

“I don’t know how to react when you look so refreshed even though you know why I drank it.”

“Isn’t it okay to smile after eating something delicious? Well, it’s hard to imagine Cha Eun-hyeok smiling like that, so it’s okay to just stay that way.”

“Excuse me, when do you close work here?”

Anyway, this ridiculous 'romantic marketing' had its own success. The existence of the 'food stall' became known among a very small number of hunters. If you find something beautiful, it will guide you to a safe zone of a different dimension... .

Surprisingly, the detailed appearances and numbers of the staff were not known.

“Why?”

“Because you’re not in your right mind…?”

“You said you were in your right mind.”

“Now that I think about it, I don’t think that’s true.”

Most of the 'guests' were so fascinated by George that they were unaware of his objective information.

“…Then why can I perceive it?”

“Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok and I are friends, right? Then it’s only fair that we can see each other.”

“I don’t think I should say we’re not friends here.”

“Try it, that sounds fun.”

“I won’t do it.”

Cha Eun-hyeok decided to stay true to his role as a worker.

'What would Cha Ara say if she saw me like this?'

I tried to explain it in my own way because I thought it might surprise people if they found out later, but no matter how much I thought about it, I felt like my explanation wasn't enough. Even while thinking that way, Cha Eun-hyuk diligently baked bungeoppang. He had to work as much as he was paid.

And it was around that time that Geo fell into a bit of confusion, which was unusual for him. Rumors spread among a small group of hunters, and the government and the association learned of the existence of the 'food stall'. And the gardeners shared that information too...

"……?"

Geo felt his gift broken somewhere.

"Oh, what is it?"

I'm sad.

When I went to find him, I found out that he was none other than a member of the Mantle Church. I wondered what was broken, and it was a jewel. The jewel that had been given out as a 'portrait of Geo.'

It seemed to have broken while moving around too much in the dungeon. I decided to let it slide since it wasn't intentional.

'Rather, wouldn't it be a profitable situation since we found a new customer?'

It all started with me smiling and welcoming the guests. No matter how much I think about it, this was the root cause.

This time, it felt like someone had deliberately broken the gift.

“Hey, what is it? What is it?”

“Why are you doing that?”

“People keep breaking my presents.”

“Why on earth would you do such a terrible thing?”

“I see…? Why is that?”

Geo went to find the people who broke the jewel. But they looked too pitiful to say, 'Hey, I'm a little upset.' My good club members were starving. I had to feed them right away.

“Oh, thank you. Thank you so much….”

“Yeah, it’s okay, so eat it.”

“In exchange, my life…!”

“It’s burdensome.”

I thought it was a bit much to give up your life for a few bowls of ramen. In the end, Geo received the broken jewel and the Hunter's headdress in return. This was also a form of business, so it wasn't something you could give away for free.

Anyway, except for a few minor issues, the 'food truck' business was going well. Geo said with a happy smile.

“Now that we’ve done a trial run, I think we can slowly resume normal operations.”

“Then what’s different from before?”

“Now you will receive the money.”

“Do you accept money too? Mr. Geo?”

“Of course I am a natural person, but I am a natural person who has become civilized in a way, so please don’t look at me that way.”

A few days later, when it seemed as if the jewel-breaking incident had been forgotten, someone was trying to break the jewel again.

“Oh no, it won’t work.”

“Ah… who else said they would break the jewels?”

“Yes, no, really, why are you like that… You are really strange people….”

Of course, Geo wasn't really unaware of why people made such choices.

The jewel was shattered by accident, and a 'food cart' was summoned. However, when I broke the jewel myself afterwards, a 'food cart' really came. In other words, it was a situation right before the premise that 'when you break the jewel of the black cloak in an emergency, a food cart is summoned' was established.

But it was a misunderstanding. Geo was just a pitiful portrait that was causing a little chaos because people broke the gift he had given.

This shouldn't continue. Geo became anxious.

“Are you going to break that?”

Anyway, that's what happened.

* * *

“…What next?”

Hunter hesitated and answered the researcher's question.

“I, this really isn’t a story that would be harmful to you, Cloak-nim….”

“We, the Korean Hunter Association, interpret Black Cloak in a favorable light. What you experienced this time was not harmful or negative to humans, so please feel free to answer. It is just one of Black Cloak’s affectionate characteristics.”

“If that’s the case, then that’s good.”

The hunter sighed deeply.

“Oh, what should I say? It was really… really pretty.”

“You don’t remember the specific gender or appearance?”

“Did all the people before me testify like that? Oh, right. She was so pretty… and wonderful… and she smelled sweet, and her smile was gentle and all. But I can’t remember what she actually looked like.”

“This is one of the common symptoms of people who are fascinated. But don’t worry too much. The medical report came back and there is nothing wrong with your health.”

“He must be one of Black Cloak’s disciples, but I don’t think he would harm me, a member of the club. No, actually, just looking at him… really….”

“You said it was beautiful?”

“You were lovely.”

The hunter smiled sheepishly.

“You say such things even though I don’t even know your face.”

She continued her explanation.

“Then my friend… Oh, the hunter I reported to the association before is my friend. I went through a similar process as that friend. He kindly guided me to a warm and cozy food stall.”

“All the hunters who were there.”

“What did I eat? First, I ate the bungeoppang. Wow, it was really delicious. It was amazing. I wondered if bungeoppang could be that fancy. The red bean paste was really thick and fluffy….”

“Yes, and?”

“The captain ate fish cake skewers. No, actually, I think he ate everything they sold there. And he paid for it.”

"aha?"

The researcher asked back.

“You paid money in return…?”

“Yes, yes. My friend said he gave me some odds and ends, but we… paid with money.”

“Does this mean you had cash with you at the time?”

“That’s not it, but I heard that you can transfer money through an account…? They said that I could transfer money within a month of exiting the dungeon, so I ate something, cleared the dungeon, and then went out and transferred it right away.”

“…….”

“The city of emptiness patted me on the head and said I did a good job. It was awesome.”

The researcher, who had been silent for a moment, asked.

“When you deposited the money, wasn’t the recipient’s name not provided when transferring the money?”

“Huh? Oh, no. I don’t remember well because I was so out of it… I don’t think the name showed up. I checked the bank transfer records later, but there was nothing.”

“So, do you remember the account number? If you don’t mind, I’d also like your consent to check Hunter’s bank records.”

“Oh, I’m fine. And if you give me a pen, I can write down the account number for you.”

“Thank you for your cooperation.”

The researcher quickly checked the account Hunter had provided. It was definitely an account in the format used by one of the commercial banks.

It wasn't long before we figured out who owned the account.

“Oh, can I ask you something? Has our Cloak-nim finally created an account?”

“…I don’t think it’ll be a problem if I tell you up to this point. But, um, no. It doesn’t seem like Black Cloak created the account.”

“Then who on earth did I send the money to…?”

“It was delivered to one of the second-class citizens. Perhaps you, Hunter, know this person. Do you recognize his face?”

"…uh!!"

The hunter jumped up.

“This is the grandmother who was assigned to the volunteer work that I was in charge of!!”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“…I never told you that, so how do you know?”

“That’s what the association does, you know.”

“That is true, but.”

The hunter, who had been feeling uneasy, crossed his arms.

“But not now. The Hunter thing got a little busy, so the opportunity went to someone else.”

“The account holder recently broke his ankle while cleaning the street….”

“It’s broken?!”

“No, it’s just a sprain. But at this age, it’s something to be concerned about.”

“Ah, what should I do…! When will this end?! I have to go see you right away!!”

“I think it will be over soon.”

It seemed as if there was some sort of regularity there.

* * *

“Geo, where did the money go?”

George, who was lying down in his house, answered Yoo Seong-un's question.

“…? It must have gone to someone who needed it, right?”

“…Why do you react as if you don’t know?”

“I don’t necessarily need to know everything.”

“Then how did you fill out the account?”

“I just took it out of my hat and put it on.”

"hat…?"

His gaze fell on Geo's shiny hat.

“You just came out of there?”

“This is actually a magic hat.”

“Oh, that’s great.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently.

“I think it would be better for me to be human in my next life.”

“You keep saying that these days. What is your intention?”

“I’m asking you to look after me a lot.”

Because I'm scared to death.

* * *

And a few days later, the number of gardeners increased rapidly.

“Hey, Geo’s portrait, talk to me.”

“The price of talking to me is quite expensive.”

“Oh my, what is this? Why is it so bright? No, that’s not it.”

Jeong Hae-woon came and asked.

“What did you do?”

“What did you do? What are you going to do?”

“Please accept my bow first.”

“I really like the way this great adult conducts himself. He’s amazing.”

“Teacher, you are the savior of my life.”

“Mmm, this candy coating. It’s so sweet.”

“Is there anything else you need?”

He swore allegiance to this benevolent garden.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (313)

313

Episode 313

Although it is a very inefficient method, gardeners are usually selected and created.

The garden had to select only the most qualified people, but there were several problems with this. First of all, most qualified people did not reveal themselves and lived in hiding.

“Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok is considered a nobleman.”

Jeong Hae-woon pretended to sob and wiped his tears with a handkerchief.

“It’s only been 32 years since the great disaster. So many superstitions are still prevalent in the world. In fact, there are some real mysteries among them that should not be called mere superstitions.”

“Oh, that, yes. I see.”

Cha Eun-hyeok nodded with a trembling face. Jeong Hae-woon continued.

“How creepy would it be to have a ‘being who sees what others cannot’ in a situation like this?”

“Uhm….”

“Oh, I definitely didn’t mean to offend Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok. It’s just an objective fact. People who see hallucinations even though they’re not hunters are bound to be ostracized.”

“I didn’t feel bad. I fully acknowledge that.”

“Thank you for your understanding. You are indeed a very patient person. There was a reason why you were chosen by Master Sergio.”

Of course, this is an era where the soul is acknowledged to exist. However, this is limited to hunters. How can a non-awakened person without such skills see something that others cannot? In the worst case, it could even lead to witch hunts.

In the case of small towns that managed themselves, such incidents, big and small, actually happened. To people with an old-fashioned mindset, a being with such qualities would seem like a harbinger of catastrophe.

So what can we do? We have to hide ourselves.

“But in cases where the surrounding people are overly stimulated, it can really go so far as to kill the precious talent. In fact, there are quite a few such cases, especially in the case of local residents.”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyuk's expression became subtle.

“…I, so I too… was in danger?”

“Didn’t you hide those characteristics because you thought they were dangerous?”

“Oh, that’s just… I didn’t see my siblings so that’s why I did that….”

“I think it was one of those instincts that ultimately made me not want to be alienated. And when alienation becomes severe, it becomes exclusion, and when exclusion becomes severe, it becomes hostility. Especially in these tough times, hostility tends to turn into murderous intent.”

“…That may be true.”

Cha Eun-hyuk couldn't deny it in the end. Geo asked him.

“Have you ever seen such a case? It’s quicker to understand than you think.”

“Murders among third-class citizens… Yes, they are quite frequent. There are no hunters or personnel to systematically manage the town like in a city, and the number of police officers is very small. I understand that there are many cases of fifth-class citizens, who are vicious criminals, hiding out.”

“Then isn’t it almost isolated?”

“It’s a little better in towns like ours where there’s a terminal connected to the city. But there are many towns that are completely isolated and don’t even have a terminal. Those places have a really closed atmosphere.”

Jeong Hae-woon gave a kind explanation to Geo, who seemed to be having a hard time understanding.

“Why aren’t there a lot of those in old movies? Villages with closed cultures. They reject outsiders, are easily influenced by cults, have strange traditions, and are a bit creepy… Villages that seem like they would appear in a thriller or horror movie.”

“I just understood.”

“This is just a fragmentary example that shows that the aftereffects of the disaster are still lingering. Of course, the association and the government are trying to understand and manage it… but with the resident registration number system gone, it is also difficult to figure out where and what kind of villages have been created.”

Above all, such a town is hated by the association and the government. Very likely.

“I guess you could say it’s a somewhat hated position.”

“Why does the village reject outsiders so much?”

“Well… this is a boundary that has quite a reasonable basis.”

“Is there a reason? For hating the Association and the Government?”

“The government did some stupid things in the early stages of the disaster.”

Joohyun, who had been listening quietly, nodded.

“I had a lot of work to do.”

“That’s true.”

Yoo Seong-un also agreed.

“To be blunt, there were many cases of human trafficking and biological experiments. The idiots who tried to overcome the fear of the new concept of mystery with science caused a huge accident.”

"oh my god."

“The problem is that those idiots were the ones in power in several countries. I think I told you this once, but the heads of the previous governments weren’t cut off for nothing.”

“You did that even though there was a real threat from the Awakened?”

“Ah, until then, the Awakened ones… how should I put it….”

When Yoo Seong-un trailed off, Jeong Hae-un smiled and explained on his behalf.

“Even if you hit them hard, they were nothing more than mercenaries. In other words, the status of the Awakened was almost like that of slaves. The eyes of other people were not kind either.”

“But each and every one of those individuals must have been strong. I don’t quite understand why they rejected the only strong person who could stop the oncoming monsters instead of being grateful and clinging to him.”

“That’s why it was only during the early and middle stages of the Great Calamity. At first, the Awakened were also afraid of their own power. The government was also pushing the atmosphere that way… In the opposite case, it was people who were drunk on power, but this side did things that could be called monsters.”

“Oh.”

“But Korea was a case where it recovered quite quickly. It was worth it to blow off the lid several times. After repeating the process of large and small coups and recovering, Korea became what it is today. Isn’t it strange?”

Geo looked at Jeong Hae-woon with pitiful eyes.

“Thank you for your hard work.”

“Thank you for your understanding.”

Jeong Hae-woon raised both thumbs up and continued his explanation.

“Anyway, the hunters of the past didn’t have much say. And the Korean government only tried to control those hunters and all citizens. In the process, several incidents occurred…."

"Is that the human trafficking and biological experimentation that Mr. Yoo Seong-un just mentioned?"

"There were other incidents as well. There were instances where innocent people were beheaded and falsely accused in the wrong village. This was broadcasted live and was seen by all the citizens."

"In short, it was politics of fear."

"That's right. And as history has proven, this kind of politics doesn't last long. Even with the real danger of the Hunters, what's the big deal? The Hunters soon realized the extent of their power and turned the country upside down."

Joo-hyun intervened and pointed at Jeong Hae-woon.

"One of them is the guild leader, Jeong Hae-un."

"Oh, it's so embarrassing when you praise me like this."

"At least in Korea, there is nothing they can't do with the name of 'Symbol of Eternity.' Such treatment is a respect and gratitude for the achievements they have made. They have created a world worth living in."

"If it fails, it's a rebellion; if it succeeds, it's a revolution."

Jeong Hae-woon smiled and nodded.

"In our case, it was a revolution."

"……."

"You look so salty."

“My heart is breaking.”

“I guess it was right that you gave birth to us.”

“It must have been hard.”

He knew that Jeong Hae-woon was old on the outside but still childish on the inside. Thinking that a child who hadn't grown up yet had walked that rough, thorny path while wearing the mask of an adult made him feel more than bitter; it made his heart ache.

Geo thought he should grill some meat before going out.

“…….”

“Well, well… let’s leave that aside.”

Jeong Hae-woon naturally avoided Sergio's gaze. It was a slightly awkward avoidance.

“It hasn’t been that long since we replaced that crazy government. There are probably a lot of citizens who remember that time. Those who could hide hid as much as they could… Thanks to that, the government can no longer figure out how many citizens there are in Korea.”

Before the great disaster, wasn't this Korea's strength and weakness? Resident registration numbers for administrative convenience, and CCTVs installed everywhere. Thanks to this, crimes could be caught if possible.

But now that wasn't possible.

“Of course we know that. If we want to figure it out, we can figure it out. Our hunters are so capable that if we put our minds to it, there’s nothing they can’t do. However, if we want to do this, we’ll have to go through a lot of resistance.”

“If you call it a backlash….”

“The hostility of the hidden people, the worries of the city dwellers who want to focus on city management, the stress of the hunters who have to deal with people instead of monsters. And so on. Korea is not yet that relaxed enough to handle all of this.”

“That may be true too.”

“In the same vein, installing a teleportation terminal in a local village is also extremely difficult. First of all, how are we going to deal with the suspicion and fierce opposition of the villagers? Also, there needs to be personnel on site to manage it, so I’m worried about whether those people will be able to integrate well into the village.”

“It’s a people problem after all.”

“As always.”

Jeong Hae-woon laughed in vain.

“That’s why most villages naturally have a closed culture. They reject outside influences, so they easily harbor hostility toward ‘unfamiliar things.’ So when a ‘talent’ born in such a village is discovered for their uniqueness, they usually… well… end up having a lot of bad experiences.”

He shrugged.

“That may not be the case. If you’re lucky, the atmosphere in the village is mild.”

“I don’t think there are that many cases like that.”

“Normally, the elders of the village are the ones who are on high alert due to the aftermath of a great disaster and the government’s nonsense, so there’s nothing we can do about it. The person with the most say in the village hates the outside world, so we all have to hate it together.”

Jeong Hae-woon smiled brightly.

“This is one of the reasons why I run around every day until my feet sweat.”

“I heard that you have to work overtime every day. Is that true?”

“Oh, of course, of course. If I don’t work, there are a lot of people who would die.”

"hmm."

Geo took out a sandwich with meat in it. Jeong Hae-woon stopped him.

“Why are you locking me in this shack? I would greatly appreciate it if you could put me in there.”

“Eating won’t kill you.”

“Please, Mr. Child, please forgive me. I don’t want to live in this peaceful cabin forever.”

“I don’t imprison people arbitrarily.”

“You must be crazy. I don’t trust the pink-haired portrait, but I don’t trust the current you.”

“It seems like you know how to trick people pretty well. Since you trust me now, I’ll stop for now.”

“I am so grateful that I could cry.”

anyway.

“How did gardeners find talent until now? They just had to go out and do it. They would see them in person, take tests, check their aptitude, and then sneak up on them and kidnap them.”

“Kidnapping? Did you really have to go that far?”

“It’s called kidnapping, but strictly speaking, it’s scouting. Without checking each and every one of them, it was impossible to buy… no, recruit them. It was so hard that everyone was just hiding.”

Cha Eun-hyuk apologized with a slightly embarrassed face.

"sorry."

“I didn’t mean to ask for an apology.”

There wasn't really anything to apologize for.

“You can’t force talented people to work if they don’t want to. But it’s a huge psychological blow when talented people easily abandon you, disappear, and hide. It makes me think the world is going to end.”

furthermore.

“This isn’t the only problem.”

“Yes, because the gardener must choose that talent to become a gardener.”

Geo asked in response to Yoo Seong-un's question.

“How do gardeners usually choose their gardeners?”

“Uh… I think Mr. George used a similar analogy. It’s like a real cat choosing its owner. That, that can opener, that thing.”

“So you’re just doing whatever you want.”

“I guess so.”

At that point, Jeong Hae-woon intervened.

“There is a commonality. The talent chosen as a gardener is usually a good fit for the garden. In other words, it is a matter of selecting a ‘capable slave who seems like he will adapt well.’”

"slave?"

"slave."

Jeong Hae-un did not correct his words.

“The garden seems to have a sense of self. Maybe it does. It’s to the point where we have to wonder whether we should treat an extremely well-made artificial intelligence as a person or not. But that makes it all the more cruel.”

They usually had no mercy. If we were to give an example of a human being, they could be compared to a sociopath or psychopath who lacks something.

“I think it might be easier to understand if you think of it as a black company.”

“Are you manipulating your employees?”

“Let’s say that you need to replace 10 people to get the results you want. But in fact, you can get similar results by replacing 1 person. So, should the company hire 10 people or 1 person?”

“If you had a conscience, you would use 10 people.”

“If there isn’t one, it would be one person. That’s exactly what happens when Jeongwon is a company without a conscience. They have no humanity, so they have no mercy or consideration. If one person breaks down, it’s more efficient to hire another person and replace them.”

Cha Eun-hyeok asked quietly.

“But the garden… isn’t a real company. It doesn’t need money either.”

“Oh, that’s a good question. It’s in this sense that you can feel that the garden is truly a neutral entity and a natural disaster. Did Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok hear this explanation from Mr. Yoo Seong-woon?”

“Yes, what explanation?”

“The world can be divided into two disciplines: mystery and science.”

“I heard it.”

“Then where do humans belong?”

"…science?"

“What about the garden?”

"mystery…."

“So where does the gardener belong?”

“…Aren’t those people also human?”

“That’s right, a human being. A person. A real person.”

Jeong Hae-woon nodded as if he had guessed correctly.

“The garden requires a high-functioning computer with the delicate talents and abilities of a human being, but that human being is not a mystery. It is just a human being who can be deeply absorbed in mystery. In other words, it is a case of borrowing resources from other areas.”

That is why gardens usually employ only one gardener, so as not to break down the boundary between mystery and science. There is no greed or resource issue involved.

It's just a matter of balance and efficiency. And this again means the law of nature. Just as cold water goes down and hot water goes up. Just as ice floats on water and air circulates.

That's all.

“That is why gardens are usually so merciless to gardeners.”

“Hmm.”

Geo's hair was dyed pastel tones.

“It’s trash?”

“Oh, my goodness. I can’t believe I’m hearing this from a two-legged gardener.”

“Are you not even treating me like a human being right in front of my face? It’s sad.”

“What’s sad about calling a garden a garden?”

Certainly, by human standards, the garden had to be trash. Usually, the garden bewitches the gardener. It makes you love it deeply, and then takes that love hostage and shakes it up. Make you work. Make you do better.

And then, when the gardener is ruined, they find another gardener. They replace him without any regrets. That's because it's efficient. Because they are devoted to love and desperate because they are devoted, that desperation is bound to be expressed in the most efficient way.

Gardeners usually split up like that.

“If we are to judge by human standards, there is no other trash like this.”

“I treat you with love and kindness, so please don’t treat me the same way.”

“…Can you please go back to black?”

“Yeah.”

"phew."

Jeong Hae-woon, feeling relieved, quickly got up from his seat.

“In that sense, our ‘Portrait of Geo’ has done a great job. Now, everyone, applause.”

Clap clap clap… .

Awkward applause followed.

“Now, shit, I! With my feet! I don’t have to run…!!”

“Oh.”

“This is mercy! This is consideration! This is love!!”

The applause for Jeong Hae-un, who stood up, was extremely loud and clear.

* * *

“The reason why the number of gardeners has suddenly increased….”

Seo Seo-hee pointed to the landscape painting in front of her.

“Thanks to these guys?”

“Yes, that’s what I’ve figured out so far.”

“How on earth?”

“These paintings are looking for ‘talent.’”

“So what do you do?”

“If it matches well, you swallow it, but if it doesn’t, you spit it out.”

“What kind of crap are you talking about?”

“But it’s true.”

A total of 10,000 landscape paintings by Geo were being selected by a gardener.

“They say that the gardeners who were successfully swallowed are spat out on Gyeongbokgung Palace or some other landmarks. The association is currently inviting such talented people and providing them with detailed explanations.”

“Gyeongbokgung Palace? Landmark?”

“That is….”

The association researcher, who had been hesitating, said.

“Gardeners say it seems to spit out a mysterious vein or spring located in a place with a lot of human traffic.”

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee couldn't help but think of her portrait teacher.

‘… It’s something to give a standing ovation to because I like Jeong Hae-woon.’

What on earth does that portrait artist want?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (314)

314

Episode 314

Most gardeners have a deep mistrust of humans.

“I want to go back to that tree…! Heheheehe…!!”

“Relax, sir. Just take a quick quiz and we’ll be done in no time.”

“Lies! You’re going to feed me to monsters! You’re going to experiment on me! You’re going to sell me to slave traders!!”

“Please fix it, that won’t happen.”

The 'talent' who will take care of the garden is randomly generated. And within a country, the cities are small. The provinces are large. Therefore, most 'talent' are born and raised in the provinces.

Many of them grew up in a closed culture, in a town where outrageous conspiracy theories circulated. No matter how politely they were treated, such a person could not possibly remain sane within the Society.

“Are you feeling calmer now?”

“I, I’m really not going to eat you…? No, I’m not…?”

“If you want, we can write a soul contract for you, so please trust us just a little.”

“…Yes, yes, I will do that. I’m sorry.”

“Here, bring me the contract.”

But the staff of the association were experienced, especially veterans in the field of mystery, and they easily managed to control the anxiety of the new gardener. It wasn't that difficult.

Consistently and politely, in a place where the surroundings are clearly visible, with the door wide open, and giving the other person the confidence that they can act on their own initiative.

Then, shortly thereafter, the new gardener opened his mouth.

“Oh, I was in the village… and suddenly a picture appeared….”

“Was it by any chance the same type of painting as the landscape depicted in this photograph?”

“Huh? Oh, yes, yes. That’s right. It felt exactly like that.”

What they saw was definitely a new series of works by Black Cloak, 'Landscapes'. Black Cloak's work was the only one that could give the same feeling as seeing the real thing through a photograph alone.

“But it felt really good. Me, those, those, those monsters….”

“It’s okay, we know about that monster’s existence. You’re not crazy.”

“…Yes, it felt completely different from those monsters.”

“If it’s okay, can you tell me how you felt? We know of your existence, but we don’t know what a talented person like you feels. I just wanted to share a little bit.”

“Oh, that’s it. That feeling when you see a really pretty flower or a nice tree…? It’s really refreshing, and something like that… I think. When you climb high up on a mountain and look down, you feel like your insides are wide open.”

“Indeed, it’s the feeling I get when I see natural scenery….”

This was also the same opinion as the rookie gardeners who spat out the mysterious vein. Even if they were not necessarily 'talented', everyone who saw this series of black cloaks said similar impressions. It felt like seeing a grand nature.

But the 'talented' ones went a little further.

“And it smelled so sweet.”

“Was it the scent of flowers?”

“It’s like honey… and, um. It’s not burdensome… but soft?”

“At least it wasn’t an artificial scent.”

“Oh, a flower garden? I thought lying down in a flower garden would give off a similar scent. Um, sorry. I want to make a proper analogy, but I don’t know much about it.”

“Just letting you know would be a huge help. Is there anything else you noticed?”

“…I felt like it was calling me.”

What should I say?

“It feels like someone is whispering next to me.”

“Is it different from telepathy?”

“T, telepathy? Was that really something?”

“It’s a skill that some hunters possess.”

“Wow, that’s amazing….”

'Injae', who grew up in a closed village, didn't know much about the Awakened. Even though he heard stories, he doubted the reliability of the information. He grew up in an environment where it was difficult to distinguish the truth of information.

And a beautiful painting, a 'landscape painting', appeared before a young man who grew up in such a village. It is said that when the young man, who was completely absorbed in it, approached it, the painting whispered softly.

“I asked if I could come inside.”

“Is that a picture?”

“Yes, that, that tree painting….”

“Did you come to talk to me?”

“I don’t really know. It just felt like he was really talking to me, uh… If you ask me what language I spoke, I can’t tell you. But it really felt that way. I, really do.”

“We’re not disbelieving you. We were just trying to make sure I understood correctly, so don’t worry. It’s really fascinating.”

The researcher skillfully tricked the opponent and obtained information.

“So you went into the painting, right?”

“I was feeling dizzy… I blinked a few times and it felt like morning? When I came to, the tree I saw in the picture was right in front of me. Wow, it was so beautiful and magnificent…!”

“That’s amazing. Did you also say that you were chosen that way?”

“Yes, I felt like I belonged to that tree. And then my hair turned brown like this… and my eyes turned green… is this how it’s going to be for the rest of my life…?”

“As far as we know, yes. Depending on the state of the ‘tree’ you are talking about, it may change slightly. It can be dyed using skills or items, but the state will remain the same. If you wish, we can lend you the item.”

“…Oh, no, I like the color now….”

The new gardener smiled shyly and stroked his hair.

“I, that, but.”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“Is there, by any chance, a place where I could… work? Th, that.”

“Oh, I understand what you mean.”

The researcher nodded.

“Are you hesitant to return to the village where you used to live?”

“…Actually, that’s a little bit….”

Superstitions were already rampant, and people did not look kindly on her. Ever since she was little, she was regarded as an 'unlucky child who sees illusions' and was regarded with hostility. And now that even the color of her hair and eyes has changed... .

“If I go back, I might get beaten to death…!! Please save me!!”

“We’ll take measures to prevent that from happening, so you don’t have to worry too much. We can also help you find a place to live in a town with an open atmosphere. Oh, of course, it won’t be free, but you can pay it back little by little while working…”

“What, what can I do? I’m good at anything! Just tell me what to do and I'll do my best!"

"Then, please listen to my story from now on."

From here, the association staff informed the new gardener of his or her identity.

"You have become a gardener. The huge tree that you encountered, sir, is called a 'garden,' and you, chosen by that amazing and mysterious nature, are called a 'gardener.'"

"Uh… yes, yes?"

"Let me tell you in advance. If you want to pay back the housing and living expenses we are supporting you with, I think it would be the fastest and most suitable way to pay it back while working as a gardener."

"Uh uh…."

"Okay, that's fine. I'll explain it to you step by step from now on."

In this way, the association staff instilled knowledge in the novice gardener. Then, by mutual agreement, they recorded the gardener's personal information. Information such as his address, name, and age.

"We have recorded this, but we will not be monitoring or suppressing you as you are worried about. However, if you seek help from the association or the government, we need to have a record of the gardener so that we can decide whether or not to help you."

"Ah, yes, yes. Yes."

"If it's okay with you, I can introduce you to some other gardeners. The people on this list have agreed to share their phone numbers with other gardeners. You'll probably need help from these colleagues to get used to working as a gardener."

“Well then, can you recommend someone… please?”

“Would you be comfortable with a woman of the same age? Then I will recommend someone of similar age. I think this person would be good. She is the same age and gender as you, but she has been working as a gardener for a long time….”

And naturally, in this process, a department was created to manage new gardeners in the association. Because the Black Cloak series, ‘Landscape Painting’, was closely observed, changes could be made quickly.

Naturally, the one who was happiest in this situation was gardener Jeong Hae-un.

“Hey, Hara, I’m crying.”

“Cry.”

“I'm really crying.”

He cried with emotion.

“Oh my, are you really crying?”

The president of the association, Dan Hae-ra, enjoyed watching the scene for the first time in a long while. It was rare to see a friend with a rough and rebellious attitude show such behavior. It was worth putting aside work for a moment and watching it.

Dan Hae-ra, who had seen everything, nodded and asked.

“I heard that you have a good rapport with Black Cloak.”

“I did not recognize that noble person and dared to act presumptuously. There was a reason why I served and served you in the past.”

“Would you like to serve and receive it?”

“Oh, of course. I could not have received the mercy of that good man without getting down on these cheap knees. Believe me, sir.”

Jeong Hae-woon reflected. Why did I forget and not recognize that good person? He vowed and vowed again that he would never make a fuss again. Jeong Hae-woon, who had slept soundly for six hours for the first time in a long while, felt very good.

“Can you believe it? I slept for six hours? Without waking up even once?”

“That’s definitely surprising….”

“When the gardens I used to visit often and only knew their faces were spread all over the world, I wondered what they were doing. Well, wouldn’t such a mysterious thing have a great meaning? The magpie didn’t understand the meaning of the phoenix, but the precious portrait always looks down on the peace of the earth….”

“Why don’t you just keep such pseudo-remarks to yourself within your guild?”

“Oh my, there are still so many who don’t recognize the innocence of my guild. Anyway, that’s why I’m saying this.”

“I’ve already created a department. I thought you agreed, didn’t you?”

“While you’re at it, let’s also have a few gardeners from our side. I think it would be better if there were a current gardener so that the new gardeners could grasp the situation more quickly. That department only provides information and helps with personal matters, and doesn’t help with gaining practical experience.”

“…That’s true.”

Danhae nodded.

“It’s nice to see you so motivated.”

“I can finally see the future, and I can’t help but feel motivated. I thought I would stay up all night and stay up all night like this for the rest of my life, and it would take 10 centuries before I could retire.”

“It’s certainly a lot sooner to retire, isn’t it? Compared to 1,000 years ago.”

“I am so touched.”

Jeong Hae-woon held his nose with a tearful face.

“Oh, I’m crying. I can finally take care of the welfare of our poor gardeners….”

“Because the system wasn’t very well organized until then.”

“It’s not that I didn’t catch it, it’s that I couldn’t catch it. How can I head it on bare ground?”

There are few gardeners. There is no way to find them. Therefore, education is difficult. It is also difficult to gather them in one place. The personalities of the children are all strong, so unless they are kidnapped, there is little interaction. It was not for nothing that Jeong Hae-woon had over 50 identities.

But not anymore. A large number of relatively young and motivated gardeners had come in. Now was the time. Now that the water has come in, let’s row. Jeong Hae-un was thinking of taking charge and creating a system.

“I don’t mean to burden the association too much. The gardening work was originally our guild’s. You guys should just do the training like you’ve been doing so far, okay? Just do the training. I just want you to comfort the newbies who are out of their minds because they don’t know what’s going on.”

“That’s not difficult.”

“If you hand it over to us, I will educate you well. Oh, I am so touched. The time has come to realize my fantasy that I thought would take 800 years to challenge. I already have countless curriculums planned for that day.”

“Was it possible that you were more qualified to be a teacher than I thought?”

“Well, that’s not it.”

Jeong Hae-woon shrugged.

“What, teacher?”

It was a bit of a rough word.

* * *

And a few days later, a 'food stall' was opened in earnest in the garden.

The concept of 'garden' was made known in an unimaginable way.

"…why?"

“Because of the food stall.”

“No, so why?”

“Uh… Didn’t we have a similar conversation a while ago?”

“Whether it’s a fish-shaped bread shop or a food stall, it’s all the same, I guess.”

There are many gardeners who have been experiencing absurd things these days.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (315)

315

Episode 315

The story of what happened was like this.

“I heard there’s a food stall in the dungeon. It must have something to do with Black Cloak.”

“Can’t we go there?”

“It seems like there are places you can go and places you can’t….”

“What? Are there places where it’s allowed and places where it’s not? Aren’t they both the same dungeon? Aren’t they both the work of Cloak-nim?”

First, members of the Mantle Church expressed their doubts.

“Why can’t we go?”

Most of the believers of the Cloak Church gathered to receive the overflowing grace of the Black Cloak. In other words, they were captivated by the benefit of being able to be the first to 'experience' the works of the Black Cloak. It was a benefit that not everyone could receive.

But recently, there is a place where that is not the case. It is a small and romantic restaurant called 'Pojangmacha'. It is a picture and a mysterious safe zone in the middle of nature.

The first-class citizens who could solve everything with money, power, and fame were the most troubled. This was another difficulty.

“I guess they’re taking you there because you’re working hard at volunteer work.”

“Isn’t it something that requires some qualification?”

“No, it doesn’t matter because it’s natural for civilians not to be able to enter the dungeon….”

“The problem is that there are dungeons that even hunters can’t enter.”

“That dungeon just so happens to be our Black Cloak’s work.”

They didn't know the concept of a 'garden'. However, they easily realized that this Black Cloak's work was more stringent in terms of qualification than a regular dungeon.

They were in a bit of a mess and tried various methods. But the results were the same. It was a difficult task.

“I guess this can’t be done through volunteer work alone.”

“But Lord Black Cloak is the one who sees the value of good deeds more highly than anyone else.”

“I guess it’s true that just doing volunteer work isn’t enough to qualify you to enter that dungeon.”

“What exactly are the conditions for entering that dungeon? My family has finally received information that someone is entering.”

“What on earth is the standard? Why is it different from a regular dungeon?”

“The conditions are completely different from the previous works of Black Cloak, right? So what on earth do I have to do to get into this series?”

They were anxious, even though they knew it was greed and avarice.

It couldn't be otherwise, because this work was the first in the Black Cloak series. All lovers want to have the first thing they love. Since this was a group of people like that, it was bound to be exciting.

“Oh, you might not be able to see that enchanting natural scenery in person…?”

“At this rate, I guess I won’t be able to find the difference between you and the non-awakened ones who can’t enter the dungeon.”

“The only dungeon I could experience as a civilian was his work!”

The most sorrowful were the members who were first-class citizens. Strictly speaking, the non-Awakened ones, not Hunters. Their only hope, unable to appreciate the mysterious dungeon, was the work of the Black Cloak.

“Of course, I don’t think you’ll continue to block the entry of non-awakened people like us after this work, but I’m not sure. Now that it’s come to this, I feel a bit uneasy.”

“This foreshadows the possibility that there will be works that the unawakened cannot experience in the future. I am proud to say that I have lived an overflowingly abundant life thanks to the grace of the Black Cloak, but… my heart aches.”

“I thought I had the qualifications I couldn’t possibly obtain. I thought I would finally be able to enjoy all that freedom in the arms of the Black Cloak.”

But the sadness was short-lived.

“…So what are the conditions?”

“…Let’s try to move the family a little more.”

“…My friends might know.”

They did not give up. They had made the impossible possible with money, power, and fame, but they learned another kind of tenacity in the arms of the black cloak. They decided to knock on even the door that would not open.

So I came across some information and it turned out to be a 'garden'.

“A garden?”

“The garden? You mean the one in the yard…?”

“No, I heard it’s a little different.”

“What on earth does that mean?”

The gardener was not an employee of any organization and therefore was not subject to any systematic management.

However, it is not that the concept of a 'garden' was a secret. It was just that no one knew about it because there was no need to know or inform anyone.

However, in the face of enormous rewards and persuasion, some gardeners opened their mouths. Some spoke even though they knew the impact of spreading the word about the 'garden', while others shared their knowledge with pure hearts. As a result, the members of the Mantle Church hesitated a little.

“…Is this the knowledge we should know?”

“At least it doesn’t seem like there will be any benefit to radically unraveling it.”

Canary, who had become a cult leader by accident but was adapting well, also agreed.

“We must be careful not to let information leak out within the church. This may also be the natural course of action of the Black Cloak Master, but… shouldn’t we prevent excessive confusion?”

“Then how long are you going to hide it?”

“Let’s not be so tight-lipped. I said we should keep our words to ourselves to avoid ‘too much confusion.’ I think I understand what you mean, Black Cloak.”

The canary nodded solemnly.

“It is clear that He is trying to teach the Earth again.”

It wasn't exactly like that, but it was a situation where it couldn't be helped. How many balls of this size had 'Portrait of Geo' shot up until now? It was inevitable that there would be room for interpretation.

“A garden and a gardener, I see. It seems that Black Cloak wants this knowledge to be known to the world. Otherwise, he would not have planned the ‘food stall’ or the ‘series’ in the first place.”

“Pirororong.”

“Our Leah says it’s the same.”

The yellow water bird, the child of God and the symbol of the Mantle Church, cried out in affirmation. The members of the Mantle Church nodded their heads in a sense of mission. They were already like a family. They were a group with the utmost cooperation.

“That food stall… It’s a kind of safe zone, right? The one in the dungeon?”

“I heard that it’s much more advanced than the safe zones in regular dungeons.”

“They said it was safer than just keeping monsters out, and you could also sell food and rest more comfortably.”

“Strictly speaking, it’s a restaurant to help hunters and gardeners.”

They quickly came to a conclusion and leaked information little by little. In fact, even if it wasn't them, the Black Cloak enthusiasts who weren't members of the Cloak Cult also showed their moves. Naturally, the concept of the 'garden' was bound to become known.

Only a few people found it a bit absurd.

“Wow, the garden is so famous? Because of the food stalls?”

“What the heck is this…?”

Not just gardeners.

“Team leader.”

“Are you working overtime?”

“Yes, I have to work overtime.”

“What a dog life.”

“Let’s go to the conference room.”

“Why are you so busy these days?”

Association staff.

"dismissal."

“…….”

Even members of the government.

“…I heard the news.”

President, Cha Eun-hye smiled.

“It’s surprising that the garden is already becoming known to the world.”

“Starting from the time the Black Cloak series appeared, cracks began to appear little by little.”

“Yes, I know because I saw it. So what should I do about this….”

Cha Eun-hye was really an ordinary person.

She was a C-class hunter who was lucky enough to awaken well. She couldn't use flashy skills like my friends or fly around to catch monsters. She wasn't a gardener either. In the first place, Cha Eun-hye didn't even have the eyes to see the mysteries my friends could see.

What are you particularly good at? Nothing in particular, that too. If you were particularly good at dancing or singing, you would have debuted long ago in high school. Are you good at acting? Actually, you weren't.

What she does best is…

“I think I should go to school.”

“…School, are you talking about that?”

“Oh, right, you forgot? It’s okay, I remember.”

“Just tell me and I’ll have it ready right away.”

“Um… It’s okay, I think our guild leader remembered.”

“Wouldn’t you need separate security personnel?”

“I think I should go.”

Only Cha Eun-hye, her.

“…….”

She is the only one who remembers everything.

“…Please contact Guild Leader Seo Seo-hee.”

“What should I tell you?”

“It’s been a while since I’ve gone to school.”

“Yes, I will do that.”

“Please take care of me.”

Then, Eunhye Cha looked at the mirror on the table.

"…huh."

Still smiling.

'Not yet.'

Well then, that's how it should be.

* * *

Seo Seo-hee came straight to find my friend.

“You came to me as a friend, right?”

He asked with a smile.

“I said I wanted to go to school after a long time, right?”

“That’s right, I needed my friend Seo Seo-hee. Can you take me to school?”

“To be honest, I’m a little worried.”

Seo Seo-hee opposed Cha Eun-hye moving to school.

“There’s something at that school.”

Seo Seo-hee still remembered Jung Hae-woon’s reaction. His pale face seemed as if he was trembling with fear. At least, as far as Seo Seo-hee could ‘remember,’ Jung Hae-woon had never made such an expression.

It was after he had gone to that damn 'school' that he showed such a reaction. Until then, he had maintained the attitude of 'Isn't it my business, teacher?', but now he was drenched in cold sweat.

Seo Seo-hee was worried about her friend Cha Eun-hye.

“You might as well come in with me. I’ll protect you. You never know what might happen. I clearly ‘remembered’ that it was almost like a monster nest. You said there were many children of the Origin gathered there… It’ll be dangerous.”

“It’s more dangerous for you to realize ‘memory’.”

“…What on earth is there at that school?”

At this point, I just felt wronged.

“In the end, it was just a closed school. No, I heard about it too. Unlike Hae-ra and Jeong Hae-woon, I didn’t erase my ‘memory’. I heard that Sergio Hunter… often stayed there with the black cloak. Even if it’s erased now and no one knows.”

“That’s different.”

“What, how, how is it different, huh?”

“You know I can’t tell you.”

Cha Eun-hye patted Seo Seo-hee.

“Understand. We’ve held up well so far. I’m just moving to check.”

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee, who had been silent, smiled awkwardly.

“…He seemed like a good person.”

“…he was a good person.”

“Enough to make me want to throw everything away and become close to you.”

“But we’ve built up too much for that, Seo Seo-hee.”

“You’re right, I know that too. I know that, but….”

My stomach lurched. I had been feeling this way several times since I learned about 'Sergio Hunter'. It was quite miserable and horrible to not be able to remember something that I should have.

Yes, I could just start over. I could just become friends again from the beginning. But even so, I couldn't shake the feeling that I had forgotten something precious.

Because it's true.

"…I am…."

I was sad.

"…Sorry."

"no."

“You must be having the hardest time, but you’re sitting there talking nonsense.”

“I’m really okay.”

“Thank you for always being so patient, and I’m really sorry.”

"…so do i."

Cha Eun-hye hugged Seo Seo-hee lightly and patted her. Just like her teacher once did to her close students. She imitated the comforting words of that big, kind adult.

Cha Eun-hye was the only one who knew how to do this. Leaning on my talented people and borrowing their strength.

“…Let’s talk about it when we get back.”

“…I’ll take you there.”

“Yes, please.”

It was time to see him.

The great ghost we love.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (316)

316 Episode 316 Before he had forgotten his 'memory', Jeong Hae-woon had visited the abandoned school. I would like to briefly talk about that time. “…….” At that time, Jeong Hae-woon was suspicious of the simultaneous fever of the source. Thanks to that, he had a conversation with Curator Yoo Seong-woon, but that alone was not enough to reassure him. 'A mystery of that magnitude can become capricious at any time.' Just because it was a mystery, he couldn't just blindly believe all of their rules. It was a world where even mysteries whose 'rule' was to deceive humans were widespread. And the bigger the mystery, the more irregular it became. That's why Jeong Hae-woon had to step forward himself this time too. He had to see, hear, confirm, and then make a judgment. Otherwise, he might have to face a huge disaster that he couldn't even handle. 'They said that the fever and change started after that damn portrait settled in the abandoned school...' So he went to see it. The reason was simple. 'Geo's portrait' was said to be part of the source. He had the authority and the ability to intervene in the simultaneous fevers in the garden. He had to know exactly what had happened. And Jeong Hae-woon could see himself gasping for breath. “…What the hell is this…?” Did this crazy mystery create a spring in the abandoned school? After the great disaster, the earth had originally been filled with a mysterious pulse. If we compare it to humans, it would be similar to blood vessels. And the ‘garden’ was created by the gathering of those blood vessels, flesh, and bones. It was an existence that could be likened to human hands and feet, or organs. However, in reality, on the earth, on this rough land, such a direct mystery was rippling… This was the first time Jeong Hae-woon had ever seen it. This was definitely worthy of being called a ‘spring’. ‘It was on a completely different level from the small springs I had seen so far.’ It was too strong. “This is driving me crazy. With that fierce face, I thought I wouldn’t cause trouble. What the hell do you believe…?” Jeong Hae-woon grumbled. 'That's why you can't trust a mystery.' Even so, 'Portrait of Geo' would not recognize this as an 'accident'. It could be close to not being able to do it. It wasn't a day or two that a mystery of that magnitude would cause a disaster without awareness. Sighing deeply, Jeong Hae-woon studied the spring created in the abandoned school. It was the first time he had seen it, so he needed some time to analyze it. Somehow, I thought that the children of the origin were gathered in such a dirty way, but it was even stranger that they weren't gathered in such an abundance of mystery. "....." And after a long time, he realized it. He realized it, he figured it out. He saw it. Oh? Oh, that's it. That's it? That's it? That's it? That's it? "....." After a long time, Jeong Hae-woon had only one question. "...Why?" How? And why? "Why is this happening..." Why did this happen? Jeong Hae-woon knew himself. An error occurred. He would soon do something foolish. I really didn't know I was going to do something completely crazy. At least I had to stop that. That absolutely couldn't happen. That was really crazy. Error occurred It would have been better if I hadn't come here in the first place. And Jeong Hae-woon knew someone who could make that happen. His friend, his colleague, and the pitiful wedge of the Earth. Error occurred Dan Hae-ra needed help. Would you like to proceed with the recovery? [Yes/No] "...I have to erase it." ... Yes, erase it. "Let's forget it." Only then. Only then, what? "I..." What can I do? How can it get better, what was I originally going to do, and what happens if I don't do it? What will happen? Don't I have to do it? Don't I have to? Do I have to erase this? Why? Why? Why do I have to do it? Just stop for a moment, okay? Just a moment is enough. If I think about it a little more, I might be able to remember something. I'm forgetting something very important right now. I, I can't do without it. I can't… . Recovery in progress_0% ... No, no. No. No, no, no. '... All, let's go... let's go now, no. Let's go find Seo Seo-hee first... ' Let's not think about it. Let's not think about it. Recovery in progress_0% Let's not think about it. Recovery in progress_1% Then that's okay. Jung Hae-woon thought that and ran away. Yes, running away would be the most appropriate way to describe it. Hiding while leaving his memories behind and avoiding using his promise as a shield. It was a truly pitiful sight, but Jung Hae-woon ran away. Even so, you will always be here. * * * Recovery in progress_99.9… 9% Recovery complete_100% … … . Taran * * * Cha Eun-hye was the only one who remembered 'that day'. "...." "Are you really going in alone?" "...Yeah." "You're going to see 'Sergio Hunter' alone?" "Well, I guess I'll have to see who I'm going to see myself." "...Well, if I was going to see that person, then there would have been no reason to come here." "The 'Sergio Hunter' you mentioned is in the collection." Eunhye Cha nodded, smiling at Seosuhui. “It’s okay, it’s not like there’s no artifact protecting me.” “I’m worried because I know you’re not the type of person who can deal with that.” “…I understand.” However, Seosuhui was the one who worried about Eunhye Cha because she didn’t know what kind of person he was. Eunhye Cha couldn’t bring herself to say those words and just lowered her eyes. She saw the ground covered in grass. It was very different from what she remembered. “This place is a mess too.” “It can’t be helped because no one lives nearby.” “I didn’t even think about making this a place where people could live.” “It wasn’t a place with very good memories.” Seosuhui added lightly. “At least, except for you.” “That’s right.” “…I didn’t know because you didn’t seem to welcome this place that much either.” “Now that I think about it, there were a lot of fun things that happened.” Eunhye Cha looked at the playground overgrown with weeds. “When it snowed a lot, we made a snowman there.” “…Um, I remember that. The kids all came out and made it.” “Do you remember the giant snowman that was a few meters tall?” “…….” Seo Seo-hee shook her head. “No.” “Yes, that’s right.” “Was that person the one who made it? The teacher?” “Yes.” “That’s unique.” “We all made it together.” “…….” “It’s just so-so.” It was a little disappointing, but it was okay. In fact, it was something to be thankful for just remembering up to this point. Everyone had forgotten the ‘teacher,’ but they were thankful that at least some traces of him remained. Cha Eun-hye, who was quietly looking at the playground, asked, “Are you going to stay here?” “You shouldn’t be the one who sees him off, you’re the president.” “Well, if you weren’t here, our family wouldn’t have wanted to see him off.” “Things are different now. It’s not the chaotic Korea that was at the beginning of the great disaster. You’re the great president who stabilized that chaotic country. You’re not wishing for him to retire in death now, are you?” “You guys work hard too, so how could I run away?” “…Don’t try to die early.” Seo Seo-hee’s face distorted awkwardly. “You…” “You’re not included in the promise.” “…That’s why.” Cha Eun-hye couldn’t live forever, and her body was so fragile that it could easily break if she got seriously injured. Unless she was in the same situation as them, no matter how much of an awakened person she was, she couldn’t get away from death. In the end, you too would die someday. Or maybe you would be killed. Seo Seo-hee felt sad about that as she imagined the distant future over and over again. Loneliness and misery always came back to her like the first time. Cha Eun-hye’s smile also faltered at the sight of her friend. “I feel weak when you make that kind of expression.” “If you put it in the promise now….” “How could that work? When was that promise made? Where are you going to get that kind of compensation?” “I know. I know, but I told you once because I was upset.” “What are you saying….” Sighing deeply, Cha Eun-hye wiped her face and smiled brightly. “I’ll go.” “They say it’s as scary as a haunted house.” “Let me scream a few times.” Despite her age, Cha Eun-hye was still scared of horror movies. When she watched the dungeon footage, she would get goosebumps in her chest. She couldn’t stand things that were so frightening, so scary, or so brutal. But even so, Cha Eun-hye was an adult. She had become so grown up that it made you wonder when she had become like this. She had to take responsibility, and she had to fulfill her duties as much as she had power. She wasn't in a position to stop crying because she was scared. Now was that kind of time. "…I couldn't pretend not to see it anymore." Should she let out a word of resentment or extend a hand of love? She didn't know how he would react. However, she felt she had to hear what he was thinking. "I couldn't put it off." "While you're at it, tell him." "Um, what?" "I want to eat a packed lunch." "……." Cha Eun-hye just smiled. "Yeah, I'll tell you." Seo Seo-hee really liked the lunchbox her teacher made for her. * * * "Yeah, that's right." "……." "That's right." Sergio admitted. "For some reason, Seo-hee's parents don't pay much attention to her son's meals." He couldn't help but worry. That was the way the family was. They always wanted Seo-hee to be a trustworthy and polite son. They always wanted him to be the best in the school and be polite to adults and listen well. But they didn't really pack him food. "Seo-hee, right? She asked for a lunchbox?" "… She said so." "Maybe it's because she's been feeding him so well these days, but he asks for it more often than I thought." "That's what the teacher taught us." Cha Eun-hye said with a smile. "You told us to get into the habit of asking for help when things get tough. To find one reason to trust even when there are hundreds or thousands of reasons not to trust people in the world. To live together so that we don't feel so lonely." Her voice cracked a little. "That's why I did that." My hands were shaking. Even though I clenched my fists, they were shaking miserably. "Did you do well, teacher…?" "You did well." "……." "You worked hard." "……." I opened my lips, but no words came out. I felt as if hot water was filling up inside me, and it was hard to even breathe. The hot heat gathered in my head and my eyes stung. I lowered my head. The words would never come out. "……." I felt like if I made a sound, it would be nonsense. "……." "Why did my students become cowards without me even noticing?" "…We were originally… cowards." "I never thought that way." "I still can't watch horror movies. I need someone with me." "You used to scream that it was scary, but you always came out smiling?" "I really can't do anything by myself…." My throat was sore. “…Teacher, why are you here?” Why are you so miserable? “Why, why, why… why? How? Why…?” Did I really want to say something like that? Come here, really? “Are you mad because of us? That, that day, did we do something wrong? Were we wrong?” “…….” “No, that’s not it. What’s your current state, teacher? A ghost? A monster? A child of the origin? I don’t know. I always read the reports that come in, but they’re just memorized. I’m not sure if I’m doing it right because I only remember what I saw. Oh, oh, this isn’t it, really… I didn’t mean to say that.” “…….” “What do you want? What should we do? If you tell me, I’ll have to consider various situations and conditions, but I’ll try my best to listen. There’s no way you’d do anything bad to us, teacher. Right? Right? Not anymore?” “…….” “… Now….” Right? “…….” “Eunhye.” It was the same voice I always heard in my dreams. “Why are you so scared?” “…W, there were so many scary things here. There was a weird CRT TV… and stuff…” “People were really scared of me.” “…You’re really scary, teacher. It’s even more scary when you see me from here. You’re really scary.” “Am I still your teacher?” “Yes, yes. He’s our teacher.” I’ve grown up and become an adult. I don’t want to act like a child who’s being unreasonable, but the words just spill out because I feel so wronged. “He’s our teacher, right….” The teacher who always wore a black suit. The teacher who didn’t know how to buy a single proper outfit with that handsome face. The teacher who gave sweet snacks, gave career advice, and visited their homes despite his blunt face. The teacher who was scary and strange, but always helpful. Sergio was their teacher no matter what had happened or would happen in the future. That was the only thing he had to do. That was the only thing he couldn’t give up. “…….” It might be too unscrupulous, but that was the only thing. “…No way?” “There’s no way he wouldn’t.” “You said you’d always be here.” “I guess so.” The teacher wearing a black cloak approached. He approached without any footsteps, breathing, or any of those common signs. It seemed like he had no intention of hiding the fact that he wasn’t human. Then he asked. “Why are you scared when you know

I’m your teacher?” “…I’m sorry.” “Why are you trying to be more mature than me in front of me?” “…Uh, we…” “You remember me, Eunhye.” “…….” “Then I’m your teacher. Because that’s what you want.” No matter how much I thought about it, I couldn’t call him human, but he was still affectionate. “Do you want a macaron?” “… Yes.” He was still our teacher. * * * Oh, it rang. (To be continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (317)

317

Episode 317

It sounded like a casual joke, but why did it feel so comforting to hear that I didn't have to be an adult? I wondered if maybe I had been waiting for something like this.

I cried because I felt a little wronged.

“…….”

Because I didn't want to be like this.

Out of habit, he imitated 'me'.

* * *

Originally, Cha Eun-hye was a person who cried a lot.

“Teacher, hiiiim….”

But it was surprising that he cried like this even after he was fully grown.

“Didn’t you say you were the president?”

From what I saw on TV, it seemed like he was managing his image well. It seemed like he was deliberately whining like a puppy that got wet because he was embarrassed by his crying, but he really wasn't any different from before.

Then the president grumbled.

“I don’t want to be president….”

“Your Majesty, please keep your dignity.”

“I don’t know, I’ll just beat them all up…!”

“There was even talk that the president would be beaten up because of a few words I said.”

“Teacher, you’re so cruel, how could you do this to me…! I’m so pitiful, so please hurry up and comfort me warmly, gently, and kindly!”

“…….”

… No matter what, 32 years have passed and nothing has changed?

'That's strange, I heard he's definitely over 50.'

But that fact did not lessen Sergio's surprise.

'Aren't you definitely older than me now?'

I'm 29, and you're 51.

I don't know about Hae-ra because I haven't met her yet, but I've met Seo-hee and Hae-woon. They all look like they're in their 20s, but it seems like they can't overcome the passage of time, so they've changed to some extent, but Cha Eun-hye's personality is exactly the same.

Although he felt a bit dizzy, his body was steadily trying to comfort his immature student.

“Hey, stop crying. If you keep crying like this, it’ll seem like you made the teacher cry.”

“It’s true that the teacher cried…!!”

“If I do this, I’ll get beaten up by my parents, arrested, and kicked out.”

"ah."

For some reason, Eunhye Cha stopped crying at those words and became serious.

"stop."

“Oh, yes, that’s right. I have a lot to say, but I’m curious, so let me ask first. What exactly do you want me to stop doing?”

“Forbidden, forbidden immediately. Forbidden all negative assumptions about yourself.”

“Oh… Are there still parents out there who are after my neck? Even after 32 years?”

“Oh, teacher, I really told you not to do that. It’s not fun at all. I’m serious.”

“It’s surprising that you still say and do the same things even after 32 years.”

With that mature appearance, she's called 'Teacher'. It seems that all her friends around her have remained young, so Cha Eun-hye's attitude toward life has remained the same. Her personality is the same as when she was a high school student.

Sergio nodded, understanding without being told.

“I understand why you do that.”

It was understandable why Cha Eun-hye was being so agitated.

“Look what happened to me 32 years ago.”

“…Don’t you remember?”

“…is there any reason for me to remember that day?”

I asked because I really didn't know.

“I was trapped in a burning school and became a haunted portrait. That was the last thing I remember from 32 years ago. But as I’ve been walking around lately, I’ve been thinking that maybe that memory isn’t true.”

“…….”

“Then why did my memories of that day change? Or was it erased? It probably has something to do with Hara’s power. It also has something to do with your promise. But I still don’t know what I did to get caught up in that promise….”

“…….”

“I guess my empty memory wasn’t something we agreed on?”

It may have been unpredictable that he came back as a haunted portrait, but it was a bit unfair.

'... Why is it that even Eunhye doesn't seem to know much? It could be just my side effect, but anyway... Didn't you say that promises are usually made through agreement?'

Of course, there was a condition attached. It was a condition based on the assumption that the other party was alive. Then Sergio had no choice but to think of two cases. It was a natural guess without having to think hard.

Either he really is dead, or the situation is too urgent to compromise.

'And isn't it a hopeful situation either way?'

I understand.

“That could be the case.”

Sergio called that time, unknown to him, the Great Disaster. It would have been terrible even if it had been confined to a small town, but this was something that changed the entire world. In the midst of all this, tragedy could have happened at any time.

And when tragedy strikes a person, Sergio always makes choices he will not regret. He does not think long, so he makes quick decisions, and he is even more capable of taking action.

Such a Sergio may have been at greater risk of injury and death than others.

'Even back then, I would have been a teacher with students to look after.'

There must have been other priorities than his own comfort, perhaps.

“I wonder what the promise was.”

“…I won’t say anything.”

“Why is that so?”

“…….”

“…….”

Sergio shrugged.

“Let’s move on.”

It didn't seem like an atmosphere for joking.

'I have that much insight.'

If it weren't for you, I wouldn't have been able to be a teacher.

It seemed like he had no intention of telling anyway. Sergio had no desire to know either. As he always said, he was quite satisfied with the current situation. He didn't want to bring up the past while poking a crying child.

I wonder if this is why I cried so much.

“Looking at the reaction, I feel like if I tell the truth, there might be some unknown side effects.”

“…Yes. You know very well, considering you say you don’t remember.”

“It’s not like I’m trapped in a gallery like a haunted portrait.”

“A haunted portrait….”

Cha Eun-hye looked like she wanted to say something. But that expression quickly passed. This, too, seemed to be one of those ‘promises’ that couldn’t be said. That was also a little surprising.

'Is there a reason why I became a portrait?'

I wasn't particularly curious.

“Okay, that’s it. How about yuzu flavored macarons?”

“…Did you remember that I like yuzu-flavored macarons?”

“Don’t you remember the times when you would come to the principal’s office every day and harass me?”

By that time, it was harder not to remember. He was a guy who didn't eat lunch because he was trying to control his weight, but he would stop by the teachers' office every day. I was proud, but at the same time, I always felt strange. He was a really contradictory student.

Sergio said confidently, handing me a round, yellowish macaron.

“I made this.”

“Teacher, you don’t look like that, but you’re surprisingly good at cooking….”

“Why do you start crying again while eating the macaron I gave you?”

“…Ah, even though I really don’t want to cry, Teacher…!”

“You’re blaming me for this, it’s ridiculous.”

Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.

'I feel wronged.'

What did I do wrong to be like this?

* * *

Eating a sweet yuzu macaron that didn't fit the situation and acting as lightly as possible didn't make the situation light.

‘… I’m a little out of it.’

After crying for a long time for the first time in a long time, I felt dizzy. My nose was blocked, my ears were stuffy, and my eyes were sore. There was a time when I was struggling with all sorts of emotions, but now only the remnants of those emotions remained. It gave me a strange sense of emptiness.

The situation where they sat across from each other on creaky, dusty chairs. In this unrealistic situation, Cha Eun-hye unconsciously grabbed the hand of the teacher sitting across from her.

“…….”

"why?"

“…No, just.”

It's cold.

“I was wondering how this happened.”

I wanted to squeeze it once, but I flinched in surprise at the cold temperature. I pulled my hand away as naturally as possible. But if it was the teacher, I would know. Cha Eun-hye cursed her stupidity inwardly.

'What are you trying to do?'

I've never held my teacher's hand before. It was a bit awkward, but it wasn't common. But now, I just wanted to hold it. It was really an instinctive action.

'Did my brain leak out along with the tears as I cried?'

As I was quietly holding both of my hands, the teacher asked me.

“Want to catch it?”

“…Is that okay?”

“It’s a little cold, but it’s okay to hold on to it without getting sick or in pain.”

“They’re saying something really bad because I hesitated for a moment….”

“I meant it as a reminder not to worry, but it’s really harsh. I didn’t mean to force you.”

“I wasn’t saying I wouldn’t catch it.”

The teacher's hand that I held for the first time was so cold that I suddenly thought I should have held it at least once before.

“…….”

So it's like.

“…He looks like a dead person.”

“Is that so?”

“Or I thought it would be something like that.”

“The original portrait didn’t have body temperature.”

“Oh, that’s true….”

That was right. That's why I laughed in vain. When I thought of it as a portrait and not a corpse, I felt much better. The strange fear and sadness that had filled my insides, the resignation and misery, all eased a little.

So I put a little more force into her hand and grabbed it. Then I shook it gently, awkwardly, like a child playing with his parents. Without any resistance, the large hand swung at her.

"…haha…."

I couldn't help but laugh.

“It feels strange because there is no body temperature. Is this what it feels like to touch the undead directly?”

“Are you comparing a perfectly healthy person to the undead right now?”

“Actually, I’ve never directly touched or dealt with monsters. At best, they’re just the native monsters that have come to live on Earth. The rest of them were dealt with by other friends.”

“Not a subordinate?”

“Well, that’s what you call it, anyway.”

It was just useless babbling. I felt like I couldn't handle the situation if I didn't babble like this. Should I cry like I did when I was little? Even though I knew that the situation wouldn't get any better if I did that...

“…Well, maybe this is what it would feel like to touch a living statue. It doesn’t have body temperature, but its hands are definitely as soft and mobile as a human’s. It’s so contradictory and fascinating.”

“But you can’t just cut it and take it. It’s a hand that needs to draw and cook.”

“Do you know that when you say something like that, it doesn’t sound like a real joke? You always make creepy jokes that fit so well, it’s the same now as it was then. You’re a really weird teacher.”

“That’s why it was fun. I know you guys have similar tastes, and we had fun together, so why are you shirking your duties now?”

“I think it was like that….”

Should I really cry? Should I cry to cover up this awkwardness and nervousness? I thought about it several times, but in the end I couldn't. I had had enough of the nonsensical crying I had just done earlier.

“Teacher, can I ask you something?”

“What are you trying to ask that makes the atmosphere like this?”

“There must be a reason why I came all the way to Gangwon-do at this time. There are things I want to ask you about him.”

“I know this might be a long conversation, but will Eunhye buy you breakfast?”

“…….”

Was this the 'condition' or 'price' for him becoming non-human? Or was it a 'deal'? I hesitated for a moment as I let go of his hand.

"…sure."

“Okay, what are you curious about?”

"who are you?"

I asked anyway.

'... Let's cheer up, please. I've been crying so much, so now let's do what I have to do... Cha Eun-hye.'

Even though she was teased as a pants president, she was the president of a country. Many people criticized her for being in a position that was half forced during a time of great turmoil, and many people were disappointed. However, she eventually did it.

The reason she, who had no special abilities, was able to endure until now was because of her sense of responsibility. Yes, she had to take responsibility. This position was prepared for that. Cha Eun-hye was facing a dangerous target that could shake not only a country but also the entire planet.

You have to figure out the other person's intentions. You have to figure out why they exist. So you have to figure out what they're going to do and why they have to do it.

'So stay calm, be careful not to approach too quickly and get them off guard… .'

My two hands, which I had collected, were shaking, so I tried to hide them by holding them together. Even though they were shaking slightly, it was better than not doing anything. It felt like I was holding on to a rope, so I felt much more stable.

“As far as I remember… the teacher shouldn’t be like this.”

How much should she reveal? How much should she reveal and what should she hide in order to maintain this dangerous peace? Cha Eun-hye hoped that the dark teacher who did not know her true feelings would not think too deeply about it.

Just like you always did before.

“It’s actually impossible. That you exist like this now, sir. Yes, it’s beyond the level of a simple resurrection… how should I put it… it’s really ridiculous. Honestly, I still don’t know.”

“What don’t you know?”

“Is the person in front of me really my teacher? Of course, yes, I think so. I think so. But when I think about it rationally, it’s impossible. It doesn’t make sense.”

“What doesn’t make sense? A person who was thought to be dead has returned? And that person is a possessed portrait?”

“I’m sorry, I can’t tell you. I’m really weird. I must have changed a lot. But you’ve also changed a lot. The lowered body temperature, the black cloak, the lack of shadows….”

“Oh.”

At that moment, a shadow appeared beneath his feet.

“I forgot again.”

“…It’s really absurd. What if it disappears if I forget about it?”

“This friend is a bit capricious, so it’s hard to get help from him. If you let your guard down even for a little bit, he’ll try to tease you like this.

He could really have made a mistake, but I don't think he's that kind of friend."

"That's a bit hard to understand, friend?"

"A friend who helps me live in society with the body of a possessed portrait. It's not that important, because in the end, I'm still the same as you remember. Nothing has changed."

"It seems to me that things have changed quite a bit, but I'm not sure… maybe you're right."

"I don't know why I became like this. You said my existence was impossible, but in the end it became possible. So I guess I can't answer any of your questions."

"…That's also true, teacher."

It's such a shame. She mustered up the courage to ask, but her question was one that could not be answered.

Then what should I ask? Cha Eun-hye rolled her eyes into space and then asked a question along similar lines.

"Then is he really my teacher?"

"At least that's what I remember."

"It's really creepy to hear the word 'memory' coming out of your mouth, teacher."

"Did you have any trauma?"

"It's kind of similar, but, um, I'm not sure."

Words that once contained memories no longer have a pleasant meaning.

It was now a restraint for her and my friends, a chain that kept people from going crazy, the one remaining pillar. It was really contradictory.

“What do you want to do, teacher?”

“Life in the countryside?”

“…Oh, um, really?”

“There’s nothing I really want to do.”

“For that reason, I heard your story all the way to the President’s Office.”

“If rumors spread all the way to the presidential office about running a street food stall, doesn’t that mean there’s a big problem with our country’s welfare, Eunhye? When you first came out into the world in your frail, portrait-like body, you were very scared. There weren’t many restaurants.”

“Tseup, when you say it like that, I feel a sense of responsibility again.”

I tried to smile awkwardly.

“So it sounds like you didn’t have any grand intentions. Is that right?”

“I’m trying to take care of the welfare of my new friends. It’s nothing special, it’s just a job of running a food stall and feeding hungry people.”

“Haven’t you ever thought that the scale is a bit large?”

“It just so happened, you, gentle-hearted Eunhye, understand.”

“I don’t know if this is something to be understood as being broad-minded or weak-minded.”

“Are you saying that the gardeners don’t feel sorry for you? I didn’t raise you so cruelly.”

“This is really absurd….”

Cha Eun-hye, who had been hesitating, asked.

“Can I trust you?”

“I would appreciate it if you could be more specific.”

“I don’t know if I can trust you, sir. I don’t know if I can trust you when you say you don’t have any grand intentions. I’m not sure if you’re really harmless.”

“Well… Well, humans can’t be completely harmless, after all.”

The teacher said calmly.

“In other words, we need new trust between us, right?”

“…Maybe?”

“It’s a simple matter. Seohee and Haewoon treat me like that too. Trust isn’t something you can build overnight.”

“…That’s true, but….”

“Then, in the end, there’s nothing we can do right now. We have to rebuild trust from scratch.”

“…That’s right.”

“I know you’re a smart student. You could probably come up with this kind of question and answer while sitting in one place. So the reason you came here was because you wanted to see me.”

“…….”

“Maybe it was both. Maybe it felt like some kind of homework that had been put off?”

There was nothing to say because it was the correct answer.

Cha Eun-hye felt a little embarrassed. Her heart was empty, but she felt at ease. In the end, there was nothing Cha Eun-hye could do but watch. She was just tormented by a sense of responsibility and longing.

I just opened my mouth.

“…I thought things would be a lot different if I came here because I remember everything.”

“I don’t think I can live up to those expectations, I’m not a very fun person.”

“I told you that you don’t know that you are a fun person.”

The conclusion was easy to come to.

'Nothing changes.'

As long as Cha Eun-hye herself kept her mouth shut, this situation would continue. The Earth would be dangerous but peaceful, and the Black Cloak, who was kind to humans, would make the Earth better even while causing accidents.

There were many things I was worried about. I still wasn't sure if he was my teacher. If he was, I didn't know why this happened. It wasn't clear how long the Black Cloak would be friendly to humans. And the position of the President couldn't be easily swayed.

‘… But if I feel like relying on you, am I too weak?’

But if it wasn't a public area, that might have been okay. Cha Eun-hye asked after a while.

“…If I believe in you, teacher, will there be a disaster in the world?”

“There’s no way that could happen.”

“I would really appreciate it if you could answer with yes or no.”

"no."

“Teacher, are you the teacher I know?”

“It might have changed a little, but the teacher in your memory wasn’t a picture at least. So no.”

“You won’t betray me, you won’t betray us, will you?”

I asked, even though I thought it would be obvious. What was important was not Cha Eun-hye’s own thoughts and beliefs, but objective evidence. She needed the ‘promise’ of the teacher who had become a mysterious being.

“You said you’d always be here….”

“Was it like that?”

“…That’s right.”

Just mentioning the existence of the blank space made my heart ache and I felt like I couldn't breathe for a moment, but he said it anyway, even though I couldn't remember.

“You said you’d stay by our side, right? Right?”

“…It feels like solving a Korean language passage. But if you look at the context, that makes sense. If that’s what I wanted to leave you with, I would have wanted to give you a sense of stability somehow. So, yes.”

“So you’re saying that you’re the teacher we know, and that even though you might be in danger for a while, you'll ultimately do something objectively good for the Earth that anyone can see, and you won't suddenly disappear or anything. Am I right?"

"Maybe…? Yes. But you can't know the future, so don't trust it too much."

"Then will you trust me?"

It would be okay to call it irresponsible. But I have been watching this for a long time. I have been in the center of a country where all information comes in, and I have constantly checked the movements of the 'Black Cloak'.

And now I even saw that face. There were so many things that had changed, but the most important thing was still the same. Sergio was still their teacher. They needed him.

'That's what it is in the end.'

It was simple logic.

'The teacher has no memory of that day. So he has to be the person we remember, the one who is completely affectionate. The teacher who has no risk factors at all… the one we can completely rely on and trust.'

I still don't know how this was possible. It could be the influence of 'The Promise of Eternity' or another prank played by his teacher.

But the part that she had been most worried about since she noticed his appearance, to her dismay, had completely disappeared, if, as he said, the being in front of her now was indeed 'our affectionate teacher who had returned as a portrait'.

And if that's really the case, then

“…I don’t care if you’re just a copy of my teacher. Even if you think of yourself as a teacher, you’re still my teacher in terms of appearance and speech, and even if you’ve changed a lot, if you don’t commit evil acts because of that changed appearance, then it doesn’t matter. That’s my teacher, what’s different?”

Only after rationalizing it to that extent was she able to face her honest truth.

“…So, can I feel a little more relaxed and happy now?”

“…….”

“The person who left… came back even though it was impossible….”

I thought it would be impossible.

I didn't even expect it. How could he come back after what we did to you? He had gone a long way. He was a scar, a memory, a miserable memory.

Yeah, it was better not to remember that day. If he did, his teacher might hate us. I know he wouldn't do that, but how could he know what didn't happen?

So maybe this is the best, the best situation that you can't remember that day. The anxious part still remains, and the sins that you committed are truly regrettable, but... that's why.

“Can I be happy?”

“If that’s what you want, then do it.”

“…Can you tell me this isn’t a dream?”

“No matter how much I think about it, it doesn’t seem like a dream, Eunhye.”

“…I think I’m going to cry again….”

“I’ll wait until you all cry.”

“…….”

So I cried.

"…sorry."

I'm happy, but I'm also miserable.

* * *

“…Is this correct?”

Jeong Hae-woon asked.

“Hey, is this right? This, this is how you do it….”

“…Then what are you going to do?”

“Seo Seo-hee, you….”

“There’s no time, Jeong Hae-woon.”

“…Ha, shit, I know there’s no other way!!”

It was a long time ago, over 30 years ago.

“But no matter how much I think about it, it’s still like a dog, so I’m asking! Is this right? Seo Seo-hee, why are you doing that! Dan Hae-ra, do you really think this is right?! Cha Eun-hye, hey! Cha Eun-hye…!”

“…….”

“Stop crying and say something! Say something…!!”

“…But, but….”

Eunhye Cha, who is a crybaby, was crying that day too.

“Then, then what should we do? Sir, teacher… if this happens, really, really… if we leave it like this…!”

“Does it have to be this way? No, this, this… This is crazy, do you know that? This is fucking crazy…! You guys know that too. If it fails, it’s not just one person who fails! Many people fail, how are you going to take responsibility for all of that!”

“Oh, I know, but….”

“And even if I succeed, teacher!!”

Jung Hae-woon was furious. He didn't want to believe his friends' choices. But Jung Hae-woon also felt an irrational temptation in that situation. So he must have been even angrier because of that backlash.

“What the hell are we going to do about our teacher? Even if he succeeds, he will always be a teacher…!!”

“Forever, good.”

“…….”

“…It seems good.”

Danhae muttered absentmindedly.

“I like it.”

“…Hey, do it. Do it….”

“The teacher said the same thing, that we should live together while relying on each other.”

“…You know we’re all out of our minds right now.”

“So let us all live forever.”

“Simple.”

“You will live forever atonement for the sins you have committed.”

Then he looked into the air and chuckled.

“I don’t even know what I did wrong….”

It was a self-deprecating laugh.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (318)

318

Episode 318

Even though the garden became known to the world, confusion did not come.

“Hey, this time the work drawn by Black Cloak is a garden.”

“Garden? You mean that thing in the yard of a rich man’s house?”

“No, something is a little different.”

“What’s different?”

“It’s a dungeon with extremely strict conditions… I heard that there are almost no monsters, but the terrain is rough. That alone makes it almost a B or A-class dungeon.”

This was the fault.

“Is this a new type of dungeon?”

“Well, since only people with rare qualities can enter anyway, I guess there won’t be a problem. I heard there’s no dungeon break either, so I wonder what that has to do with people like us.”

“But what is it, the chosen ones? There are many people who want to be in the Black Cloak work. I heard that the food stall I heard about this time also comes from there.”

“That’s a bit special, but… I heard that food stalls appear in regular dungeons too. Honestly, I don’t know what’s good about going in there. Maybe it’s because I’m not an artist.”

“That’s… Shit, yeah, we don’t have the emotional capacity to cry while watching the Black Cloak artwork. I would rather they just release another decent artifact.”

People didn't think of 'gardens' as a separate concept. This was because 'food stalls' appeared not only in gardens but also in regular dungeons. Furthermore, there was no real benefit to being chosen as a 'gardener'.

The chosen gardeners knew their subject. They did not dare to make the outrageous claim that the garden was theirs. It may seem so at first glance, but it was also known that it was not so.

“Then what good would it be if I actually went in there…?”

“Uh… admiring the view?”

“I guess I’m not that romantic of a person since I’m even thinking about what to do.”

"me too."

That's why most hunters reacted lukewarmly.

“Well, it’s a bit strange that even civilians can enter.”

“What’s strange? It’s not like there haven’t been such cases before. If you think about it, weren’t the dungeons that non-awakened people could enter also the type of dungeons that were like gardens?”

“I heard that the association research lab got really busy because of that distinction. Anyway, they’re working hard. Hey, but what do you do with the person who was chosen as the gardener? He’s practically a slave to the dungeon.”

“What can I do? The association said they would provide support. I guess I’ll just get by occasionally while receiving that. My nose is already three inches too short to worry about those people.”

Hunters were usually materialistic. I'm not criticizing them, but it was an environment that made them inevitable. How could it be so in a capitalist era where rankings and grades are constantly given?

This wasn't just a story about hunters. It was the same for ordinary citizens. They had a hard time making ends meet, so they didn't have the luxury of worrying about other people's fortunes. If it was a story that made them so envious that it made their stomach hurt...

“What bad luck, tsk tsk. Isn’t this a punishment?”

“What happens to the person who wins the prize even though he’s not a hunter? He becomes a complete slave.”

“Come to think of it, there’s nothing good about being chosen like this. What the… isn’t this a punishment from heaven?”

I wasn't particularly jealous. Rather, I felt sorry for him. In most people's eyes, the gardener's pure love was worthless. They didn't see it, and even if they did, they just thought, 'Oh, I'm bewitched.'

That was the reality. There was nothing particularly good about being a gardener, except that the gardeners themselves had their own passionate love and were directly permitted to do so by the person in question.

“Isn’t that a very romantic scheme?”

Someone's bright yellow eyes widened.

“Ah, such a radical yet affectionate conspiracy….”

“…I don’t think this is an act that can be called a scheme or a conspiracy, Guild Leader Bisabal.”

At Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un’s words, Bisabal smiled as usual.

“Oh, I apologize if my words sounded unpleasant. I don’t think our guild leader, Jeong Hae-un, is the type of person who would be interested in such artistic subjects.”

“I think we need to reconsider whether this is truly an artistic subject. Of course, I am well aware of the extent of the tolerance that the Guildmaster of Bisabal has, and I understand.”

Jeong Hae-woon also smiled brightly.

“However, it is sad to see that the Master of the Visabal Guild does not believe in goodwill and good intentions… Don’t you think so? Even though it is about your son, of all people.”

“Then, Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un, do you really think that our Sergio Hunter would have done this without any thought? Do you, who are suspicious and rebellious in everything, really think that way?”

The visage was so funny that it made me laugh.

“You had no intention of using the unusual subject of a street food stall to save the hungry, of capturing all sorts of bizarre and beautiful natural landscapes in 10,000 paintings, and of inviting Eunhyuk Cha, a talented gardener you knew, to utilize his career?”

No, Geo did it without really thinking about it.

“I don’t think so.”

“…I also do not intend to ignore his insight and vision for the future.”

“Ah, I thought Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un would understand.”

“It was probably something that was planned from the time I became friends with that guy named Cha Eun-hyeok.”

“If not, would there have been someone so perfectly suited to this case?”

Visabal pretended to have a refined smile and spoke softly.

“He has no master, but he is a great gardener. As the head of a household, he has a strong sense of responsibility and cannot easily run away because he has a family to take care of….”

“I even ran a bungeoppang food stall, which is hard to find these days. Of course, it was on a much smaller scale than what Mr. Sergio runs now… Yes, in that sense, it’s a career that fits well.”

“Hmm, now that I think about it, I can’t help but think of the words scheme, conspiracy, and plot. Isn’t it as sinister as it is affectionate?”

It would have been heartbreaking and heartbreaking to hear this, but no one had yet reached that shocking truth. They continued their conversation.

“How meticulous is this, Guildmaster Jeong Hae-un. My son continues to change this small country called Korea. He is a teacher, and we will be good examples.”

“I am also aware that the Black Cloak… is trying to teach the Earth. It is a bit burdensome to continue to act like a cultist who is doing missionary work.”

“If it seemed that way, I am truly sorry, I apologize. But I hope you can understand my feelings a little. Ah, such a romantic bomb exploding on this boring Earth…!”

Jeong Hae-woon called him again with a smiling face.

“Guild leader of the Visabal.”

“This guy really is unromantic.”

“Even among hunters, such topics often cause disagreement.”

“It became even more so with the advent of the garden.”

To the public, the garden was a very unusual type of dungeon.

First of all, it looks nice. Even if you leave it alone, monsters won't pop out. Since not just anyone can enter, there's no damage. Even if a few talented people are swallowed, no one dies. In the meantime, I'm envious of the fact that food stalls pop out more often than in regular dungeons.

But now, the existence of the 'food stall' was a lifeline. It only appeared in front of hunters who were truly on the verge of death. There was no way that anyone would easily enter a garden where such food stalls frequently appeared.

“What….”

Except for the chosen gardeners.

“People in love are truly romantic.”

Jeong Hae-woon nodded mechanically. There was no reason not to agree.

“I admit, he is very affectionate and sinister. I also think that his hands and eyes are very refined. I never thought he would reveal his garden to the world without any side effects.”

“Isn’t the idea itself simple? Who would have thought you would say something so weak….”

“Don’t talk nonsense, Master of the Bisabal Guild. You know why the government and the association have been so hesitant. Just because they are famous doesn’t mean they are omnipotent.”

The idea was easy. Dungeons and gardens are completely different, but they may look similar to others. Among the types of dungeons, there were virtual dungeons where, if you met certain conditions, you would be taken to a completely invisible place.

But in comparison, the 'Garden' series of Black Cloaks was even visible. The sense of alertness was lowered. The influence of the Black Cloak believers was also great. They continued to show their pursuit of romance and art.

They served as a kind of breakwater.

“…If nothing had come first, it wouldn’t have worked out this well.”

Unfortunately, the government and the association were unable to do so, just like the Black Cloak.

First, more than 90% of the gardeners were wary of them. Second, they were cautious because it was too early to reveal the mystery, and third, there was a risk that the gardeners would be ostracized if they failed.

'... If we fail once, it will take at least 300 years to turn back, and there is no guarantee that the Earth will not be eroded by mystery during that time and a second great disaster will not occur. In order to avoid such a risk from the beginning, I was also generously thinking of 800 years into the future... .'

And the government and the association did not have that much leeway. Even if they ruled out the risk of gambling, they did not have enough money, people, or time to push it that far.

It would have taken a lot of work for the public to accept the presence of gardeners as familiar allies.

'But just maintaining the creaking Earth in its current state consumes all kinds of resources…'

The Black Cloak solved such a troublesome situation so coolly. The reason was simple. He could show the 'garden'. That was why he could captivate and convince the public.

Bisabal smiled as if he knew what I was thinking.

“People always doubt what they cannot see and what they do not know. They easily become hostile and reject others, and soon they hope that the unknown variable will disappear. I think you were worried about that.”

“Why was someone who knew so well so uncooperative with my friends… It’s not the time to say this, but I can’t help but feel disappointed. They did their best.”

“And that troublesome matter has been resolved by our Sergio Hunter. What do you think? My painter who showed the existence of mysteries to those who do not believe.”

It was a miracle that no human could ever accomplish.

“…I am grateful.”

I was sincere.

“That was the biggest problem, because you couldn’t see it, there was no guarantee that people would believe you. The world was too bizarre to accept a minority of people who were different from others. So there was no assurance that witch hunts wouldn’t happen again.”

Gardeners have always been lonely. They have to see, interact, deal with, subdue the invisible, and sometimes run to their beloved master and offer it all.

The public does not know how beautiful that huge thing is. They do not know how much love it holds hostage. This is not a world where the weak are protected, nor is it an era where each individual's circumstances are listened to.

Who would understand their love? Who would believe in it and look after it? So I was grateful.

“Quite a few gardeners are overcoming loneliness.”

“It must have been the gardener’s greatest enemy.”

“Yes, that’s right. Why wouldn’t there have been gardeners who felt skeptical about love but still held on and died?”

“I, too, have always felt very sorry for them as they pass away.”

“…That is truly appreciated, I am grateful.”

So much so that I can't even spit on such obvious empty words.

“Why are you so affectionate?”

Jeong Hae-woon was curious about that and came to find Bisabal.

“You have really good eyesight, don’t you?”

“I really don’t know what to do with my son’s overflowing love.”

“Where on earth is the source of that love? Even if his existence is part of the source. The source alone… There is no reason for this, not at all.”

“That’s right, the source is indescribably sophisticated, but in the end it’s just a system. So, is Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un trying to find the destination of the mercy my son has shown, or is he trying to find the starting point?”

“Both. The destination must be known when I assist and dare to test his mercy, and the starting point must be known when I measure the end of this mercy.”

“Oh, I see. But I’m speaking rashly….”

The visage tilted its head.

“My son will love everything forever.”

“Where have you seen that fountain of mercy?”

“Love, mercy, affection, sacrifice, affection. He is made up of all these similar words. He is a spring in and of himself, being such a being.”

“Where on earth have you seen that, Guildmaster Bisabal?”

“…….”

“…….”

After a while, Jeong Hae-woon realized.

"…under."

In those eyes, I was contained.

“…You saw him in me? That vast, gigantic being, in me?”

“Didn’t Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un ask me about his destination and starting point?”

“…That, to me… No….”

Jeong Hae-woon wiped his face and asked again.

“…You are saying that we have it.”

A symbol of eternity.

“It’s really unpleasant.”

“Have I done something very rude?”

“I just… feel bad.”

Dragon's Eye.

If I could, I would pluck out those squinty eyes and put them in my own eye sockets. So I could see the world as the author sees it, and know what he knows. What on earth did he see in those pitch-black eyes of the portrait?

What did he see in Jeong Hae-un, who was his 'student'? And what did he see in others? Perhaps it was funny to see Jeong Hae-un struggling, so Bisabal gave him some rare, affectionate advice.

“Haven’t you seen it?”

“…….”

The answer was set.

“…Thank you, Guildmaster of the Visabal.”

What did I forget?

I must have forgotten, but what did I forget?

* * *

Error? Occurred

■Ryu丅ㅂ¡saeng

■■■■

■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■….

Waiting for command

* * *

And around that time, Sergio.

“Let’s eat.”

“Wow, I love you, teacher!”

"know."

I was feeding Cha Eun-hye.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (319)

319

Episode 319

Sergio was a fairly popular teacher.

It wasn't just Sergio's unrealistic looks. He was a great cook, had big hands, and most of all, he carried them around the school. Some students often called him the pig maker.

“…….”

Cha Eun-hye was troubled while looking at the beautifully made tiramisu.

“I ate it with a relaxed mind… but, how much fat will I get?”

“Why should a skinny, groaning kid worry about such things?”

“Teacher, you shouldn’t provoke people, you know? Don’t provoke people.”

“I made this because I thought you might want something sweet after finishing a salty meal, but it’s a shame you won’t eat it.”

“No matter what, it’s unconscionable to give it away and then take it away. I’ll have some time to sample it, so please understand.”

Cha Eun-hye ate the tiramisu whole.

“Oh, I really can’t handle it.”

“You’ve gotten so skinny since I last saw you. You can eat more. How much have you suffered without me, my dog?”

“Honestly, the worst one is the teacher. Teacher, I have to manage my image and live like that. These days, people look at the president’s appearance a lot.”

“What good would it do to elect a president based on his looks? And it seems a little late to retire now. As far as I can see, as long as you have your friends, you will be able to sit in the president’s seat semi-permanently. I think it would be better to give up and give in to your desires.”

“Do you know that every time you feed someone something, they talk a lot more?”

“Isn’t it natural for someone to talk more when they are worried about the other person?”

Sergio's voice was genuinely sympathetic as he spoke. He seemed to really think that Cha Eun-hye had not eaten regularly for 32 years, even though she was of average weight.

Cha Eun-hye smiled and prepared herself for the familiar resignation. She was secretly delighted by that absurd remark, but it had been so long since she had heard it that she felt as if she were dreaming, and it was unrealistic.

“There’s a report that somehow the curator named Yoo Seong-un seems to have gained weight….”

“Why on earth do they send such reports?”

“I’ve been observing you closely since you first appeared.”

“Is it legal to investigate the president these days?”

“Uh… I heard it originally had a similar feel, but otherwise, I don’t know.”

“I can see that you were very interested in me.”

“Oh, no… Don’t look at it like that.”

Cha Eun-hye made an excuse while buying tiramisu at the gaze that was falling steadily.

“I’m not a very precious person. Why would I go see the teacher without being sure? I went because I thought, ‘Oh, this is the right time.’ And to figure out that time, you need to have a lot of information about the other person….”

“I wonder if Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s weight was really needed there.”

“That kind of thing can also be important clues. Especially for someone like you who likes to fatten up the people around you. How come people don’t change even after they die and come back to life? Do you enjoy seeing other people get fat like that?”

“Rather than that, I thought it would be a bit sad if it was too thin.”

“I’ve said this over and over again, but the teacher’s standards are really too, too… Should I say it’s low or high? Either way, it’s not normal. I’ll say it again, I’m average.”

“These days, kids have this really sad habit of calling something that is thinner than average average. I don’t think that’s right. So what if it’s a little fat?”

Then Sergio lifted the tray and showed it to me.

“Madeleine?”

“Just give it to me first.”

“It’s so nice to see you eating so well.”

“Teacher, are you my grandmother…?”

Next, various fruits, cheeses, and crackers were prepared. Anyone could tell that these were snacks that would go well with wine, but Cha Eun-hye knew that her teacher liked to just eat the snacks.

‘…Because it was like that before too.’

As expected, there was no alcohol among the food served.

“As we live, days like this come.”

Eunhye Cha asked Sergio what he was saying as he sat down on the sofa opposite him.

“…What day is it?”

“A day to eat cheese in the Oval Office.”

“Have you ever imagined that your disciple would become president?”

“Did you do it?”

“I couldn’t do it, you piece of shit, I couldn’t do it either.”

Eunhye Cha pretended to cry and ate a cracker.

“Ha… No alcohol, alcohol? This kind of thing is best enjoyed with alcohol.”

“I’m not sure if you’re talking about crackers or history.”

“Of course I’m complaining, but since I’ve come this far, please listen to me.”

“You said you had the only memory, but you’re the most blunt.”

Sergio looked at Cha Eun-hye intently.

“And I’m just saying this because I suddenly thought of it. What are you talking about drinking in front of the teacher? I know you’re an adult, but I’m still shaking from the sight of you being such a great member of society, even though it feels like it was only yesterday before the catastrophe happened.”

“Oh… Is there a liver? Wow, what’s the detail? Didn’t you say it was a portrait?”

“There’s no guarantee that there won’t be a liver in a portrait. Of course, I have no way of knowing for sure until I cut open my abdomen myself. Can you introduce me to a good surgeon?”

“So when you say that, teacher, it doesn’t sound like a joke at all. I don’t want to confirm it, so please don’t say things like that. I know I’m not the one who’s going to open my stomach, but I’m still scared.”

“Let’s say that’s the case for now.”

Across from me, a handsome man who looked like he might appear as a stuffed corpse in a horror movie asked with his hands clasped together.

“How have you been?”

"no."

“Yeah, I was just saying that out of courtesy. You must have had a hard time.”

“At school, if you whine, they will comfort you.”

“Time has passed since that day and the expiration date has passed.”

“Oh, it’s spicy.”

“In the meantime, I prepared some food for Seohee. I was happy because she seemed to like it.”

Cha Eun-hye kept her promise to Seo Seo-hee. She asked Sergio to pack her lunch, and 'Sergio Hunter' obediently packed her lunch and visited Justitia for the first time in a long time. Anyway, Seo Seo-hee liked it.

Eunhye Cha nodded as if she had known this would happen.

“He likes everything the teacher gives him.”

“No, he’s secretly picky. He pretends not to be.”

“Don’t you eat everything they give you?”

“If you don’t consider it a picky eater to avoid eating things you dislike in the first place, then yes, what you said makes sense. If you tell them to eat, they will eat it without hesitation.”

“Why does it look like there’s so much piled up?”

“I’m not trying to start a fight with you. I’m just talking about objective information since I have more data than emotions.”

A man in a pitch-black suit and a black cloak tilted his head with a blunt expression. It seemed more like a habit when he looked away than a question. He spoke while looking into space.

“I know it must have been hard for you.”

“I know it’s not something I should be saying, since I’ve been avoiding meeting you because I’ve been suspicious of you for so long… but still, please come a little earlier.”

“It wasn’t something I could do as I pleased, and above all.”

“More than anything?”

“Aren’t you going to be independent?”

“…….”

“Oh… Really?”

Sergio was impressed.

“That’s a bit surprising.”

“…Ah, no, we’ve already achieved independence, so the answer didn’t come quickly. We’re all grown up already. What kind of independence are you talking about now? Ha, really, even without our teacher, we all did well on our own. Look at me, I even became president. Isn’t that no joke?”

“It’s hard to say that it was a joke that you became president because your friends insisted on it. When I heard that story, I was so afraid of your growth. I wanted you to grow, but I didn’t want you to grow like this.”

“Um… That’s something I have no words for as a modern person who still has a sense of democracy from before the great disaster….”

I admit, this is still a subject of criticism. The so-called 'Symbol of Eternity' used their authority to put Cha Eun-hye, who has nothing, in the position of president. If this isn't a dictatorship, then what is?

Eunhye Cha, who had finally finished eating the madeleine, asked for some cheese.

“Can I make an excuse?”

“What excuse? An excuse for craving cheese?”

“No, other than that, the excuse for my becoming president….”

“I always enjoy hearing students’ stories.”

“Then let’s begin.”

Then Cha Eun-hye shrugged.

“…Actually, even if I say this, there’s nothing grand to say. The country was just a mess.”

Even if Cha Eun-hye, an idol trainee with average grades and an ordinary family, became president, she would have been better than before.

“Other children are already perfectly balanced with the separation of powers as the ‘symbol of eternity’ to become president… so it was impossible to add the title of president to them.”

“I'm listening.”

“They didn’t really try to get me to sit down from the beginning, but… I don’t know if you know, but the previous government made a lot of trouble. Because of that, Hae-ra and Seo-hee had a real headache. Hae-woon even got to the point of misanthropy… and disappeared for about two years.”

“2 years?”

Sergio tilted his head. This was a sign of questioning.

“It’s shorter than you thought?”

“Oh, I thought you’d say it was long.”

“Two years is not a short period of time for a fully grown adult to wander around with misanthropy.”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hye laughed.

“…I think the teacher knows our 32 years very well, even though he has never seen them before.”

“I gained weight while feeding you, so how could you not have guessed that much? It’s obvious even without looking.”

He shrugged.

“Haewoon in particular is the type to just leave once he starts acting up. His bold behavior patterns are always similar.”

“But I’ve never had any major accidents. It’s not like I’m always trying to fix things, but I’m just trying to hold back. I guess I should be thankful that I don’t explode.”

“I understand what the situation must have been like back then. You must have been pretending not to feel that way, but you must have wanted to control yourself before causing an accident.”

“That’s right. If he hadn’t disappeared like that and stayed with us, he would have definitely died. He probably didn’t want to become a murderer, so he just left.”

“You must have had a hard time.”

“…Me, me too.”

Cha Eun-hye broke the cracker in half and laughed awkwardly. It was a laugh filled with embarrassment and subtlety.

“I had a hard time too.”

“You’ve become a lot more mischievous since I last saw you. You’re more active than other kids.”

“Should I not do it? Is it disgusting, being older than me and doing this?”

“Actually, you guys are past the age where you can be cute. You’re cute no matter what you do until you’re 19.”

“…….”

“…Why is it like this?”

Sergio blinked twice.

He couldn't even take a joke as a joke. The Cha Eun-hye he remembered wasn't like this, so there must have been some differences. The student's appearance, which hadn't changed in 32 years, was strangely unfamiliar.

But I didn't really like this feeling of discomfort.

“Why haven’t I become an adult yet?”

To be honest, Geo was a little taken aback.

“I thought you were all grown up. I mostly met students who had forgotten about me, so I thought you, who still had memories, would be different. But now that I think about it, you and the other students aren’t all that different. What did I do wrong?”

“…The teacher did nothing wrong.”

“It’s not my fault, well. It’s not a very good situation for a teacher.”

“So you tried to pretend not to know?”

Even as Cha Eun-hye spoke, she stared at Sergio. Even though her gaze was pitch-black and unfathomable, Cha Eun-hye simply accepted it. There was no trace of the awkward smile she had shown while breaking the cracker.

In the end, it was Geo who blinked first. It was too obvious a gaze to just pretend not to notice as usual. A slight sense of eeriness and fatigue made me sigh.

“I will not leave you or forsake you.”

“…I know, you always do that, teacher.”

“Yeah, I knew you wouldn’t believe me so easily. But I thought there might be a chance you’d believe me if I said it anyway, so I said it.”

“I will believe you even if you just tell me, teacher.”

“How can you say you believe with such a face? It’s amazing.”

“Yes, I don’t actually believe everything. But at least I have some idea of the context in which things are going.”

Cha Eun-hye lowered her head and looked at the broken cracker in her hand.

“I don’t know why, but it’s true that the teacher came back, and I have no intention of changing anything… so I thought I’d just enjoy it.”

“That’s smart.”

“In the meantime, I’m scared that everything could fall apart. My teacher might suddenly disappear, or the world might collapse, or my newly built relationship might deteriorate.”

“So you’re going to keep pretending you don’t know?”

“That’s right, thank you for that. It’s because you pretend not to know each other and hang out together. It feels so good to eat the course snacks you prepared for me after such a long time.”

“…It seems like I grew up in a strange way.”

Geo got up from his seat. He wasn't going anywhere. He picked up a piece of cheese from the table and placed it on top of Cha Eun-hye's broken cracker. Then he tapped Cha Eun-hye's hand.

“Food shouldn’t be used for tactile play.”

“It wasn’t really a tactile play.”

“Then show off your strength?”

“Shall we try something like that….”

The cheese was delicious. Of course, what Sergio brought was the food that was on display at the official residence. They were tailored to Cha Eun-hye’s taste. The round Brie cheese melted in her mouth along with the crackers.

“Can you come like this sometimes?”

“Is that also for the sake of new trust?”

“Probably so.”

“It’s quite ambiguous. Your attitude and your demands.”

"teacher."

Cha Eun-hye smiled faintly.

“If possible, we tried not to see each other.”

“If you guys are really adults.”

“If I had become the adult that you said I was, I wouldn’t have watched it at all?”

“I would have thought about it a lot more than I do now, and I would have pretended not to know anything and created a new relationship.”

“You know how secretly cruel you are, don’t you? How can someone be like this?”

A little resentment, a lot of longing, and a huge lack.

“…I’ll try to become an adult. Because that’s what you want me to do.”

“If you’re going to do it, let’s become healthy adults. I’m worried because you guys seem to be just getting older.”

“Yes, I will aim to become a healthy adult, so please come visit me often.”

This was a deal. It was a rule that Shinbi liked so much and followed, and it was Cha Eun-hye's stubbornness that didn't last long.

“Please stop by now when no one is looking and chat with me like this.”

“If that’s what you mean by trust, then I’ll do it, I’m still a teacher. But I want you to know.”

Sergio sat down again. He leaned back on the sofa and looked down at Cha Eun-hye.

“I should have just been passing by.”

Cha Eun-hye also answered calmly.

“It’s a little late for that.”

“I wouldn’t have known that even 32 years ago.”

“I keep telling you, you’re secretly harsh, teacher.”

“And yet, we ended up here.”

It asked.

“Was it my choice? Or….”

“…….”

“…was it your choice?”

It is to this great deficiency that his name is given.

“…….”

“…….”

Geo didn't hear an answer until the end.

“That could be possible.”

He was still there with them and was still their teacher, so he didn't really need a plausible answer. Still, he kept poking the crying child's side because he was curious.

I wondered what I had done in the past to ruin the kids like this. I wondered if I was really qualified to be a teacher who could lead and teach others. That was all.

“Should we stop here for today?”

“Then please ask me again tomorrow?”

“No, if you don’t want to, I won’t ask you again. I’m not desperate for the past and you don’t want to have it back. Sometimes it seems like it’s not that bad….”

“Yes, well, there are those who want to do that, but… I can’t do anything about it because it’s a situation that can’t be helped. I don’t know what you’re thinking, teacher, but it’s a dangerous situation. And it’s not a situation where you can hope for a miracle, so if possible, teacher, please pretend not to know.”

“A miracle, I think I know exactly what you mean… Well, I’ll do it depending on the situation. As you know, I tend to be soft on my students and I don’t know what the future holds.”

He said calmly.

“I don’t know much about matters that affect the fate of the world or the country, but if you’re confused and need a clear answer, call me. That’s the role of a teacher. I’ll always be here.”

That was all I could do.

“How about something like that?”

“…Then can you put some more cheese on me?”

“Let’s do that.”

I guess you were hungry.

He pretended not to care, but he was still sensitive, and he even had a scary look on his face.

* * *

And Jeong Hae-woon went to see Seo Seo-hee.

“Hey, give me some food.”

“You left it to me, you crazy bastard?”

“Brother, have you been eating anything delicious lately?”

“Are you really a gangster…?”

Seo Seo-hee opened her lunch box like that.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (320)

320

Episode 320

Of course, Jeong Hae-woon didn't just come here to rake over lunch boxes.

“Hey, but it’s delicious.”

“The teacher gave it to me, you punk Jeong Hae-woon. Don’t you think it’s a bit much for a bribe?”

“Happiness doubles when shared.”

“Then where on earth did my happiness go…?”

It was absurd for Seo Seo-hee, but she couldn't help but give him a lunch box. It was thanks to the fact that Sergio Hunter had left a lot of lunch boxes when he stopped by last time.

Since there was subspace, I didn't have to worry about it getting spoiled, so I decided to eat it slowly over time. There was always something about the lunch boxes Sergio Hunter packed for me that warmed my heart.

And it was stolen by the gangsters.

“What can you say about having one thing stolen?”

“I didn’t say anything.”

“It was snowing.”

“It really does all sorts of things.”

Seo Seo-hee sighed and asked.

“…Is this okay?”

“Can’t you tell when you see someone filming a mukbang?”

“The earth knows that you are healthy, and heaven knows that I asked a foolish question.”

“It would have been better if I knew now.”

“I didn’t really think it would do any harm, but….”

The gifts given by the Black Cloak are usually food. The Black Cloak does not prohibit sharing food unless it is taken by force or persecution.

Perhaps Jeong Hae-un wanted to check if this kind of playful robbery was okay.

“…….”

It was a bit questionable to insist on making it mine. In fact, it was closer to annoyance. One of the few pleasures Seo Seo-hee had recently had was taken away by that damned bastard.

'Did you know this would happen and give me several?'

No, it was just that Geo had big hands. However, Seo Seo-hee's illusion of not having any memories of 'Teacher' spread freely. Even before Jeong Hae-woon, who had finished all the lunch boxes, called him.

“Hey, if you eat this, won’t there be any big changes?”

“Hmm… Does it make you feel more energetic? How about you?”

“I don’t feel anything either. I can feel that the gardeners who signed a contract with me are a little happy, but I’m not sure if it’s because they’re not that close.”

“It’s strange.”

“It’s certainly a curious thing.”

It was also surprising.

“It’s amazing that such a huge being can control his energy so well. If it were a meal prepared by a being of that level, it wouldn’t be strange if he were dragged into their spirit world right now.”

"you…."

Seo Seo-hee's expression became a little strange.

“Wasn’t that something you saw in the old collector’s parade?”

Even at that time, Jeong Hae-un looked quite tired of the sophistication shown in 'Portrait of Geo'. I wondered why he was having the same doubts now.

“In the first place, the history of Black Cloak giving out snacks as gifts has been around for quite some time, and you also admitted that there was no problem with that.”

“That’s right, even recently I pledged allegiance to the Eyes of the Merciful Source.”

“I guess the loyalty I know and the loyalty you know are quite different?”

“I think it’s a habit, a habit. I don’t deny that I have developed a great fondness for that being. But the other person is no ordinary person.

Being able to show a human-like appearance is a mystery with many variables.”

“You’re not explaining it because you think I don’t know, are you? Or is it just an excuse?”

“That’s… a little bit. But habits aren’t lies. Do you know how many times I’ve seen someone get screwed over because they ate the wrong food and their life was ruined? I think it was a survival instinct, a conditioned reflex.”

“Poor kid….”

“If you look at it that way, there’s no one among us who isn’t pitiful. Anyway, you know that liking and trust are two different things. I think you’ve become suspicious. It’s similar to how nobles used to carry silver spoons.”

“This time, Lady Kimi is making excuses again.”

Seo Seo-hee laughed in vain. She seemed to be doing her best to make excuses, so she obediently went along with it.

“Anyway, this is different, right? There’s a clear difference between the lunchbox the teacher gave you and the food that regular mysteries give you.”

“What… I thought you said that because it was a hobby you were really into. There’s nothing special about it, so why would I be suspicious? Again, I just tried it to check.”

Jeong Hae-woon's face became strange.

“…More than anything, I want to know what it feels like.”

“…….”

Was there something I didn't notice in the cube steak I ate last time?

“It’s not like there’s even a single grain of rice left, just to check?”

“If you leave even a little bit of it, who knows who will eat it later? Maybe it’s only okay if we share it among ourselves. Of course, someone this experienced wouldn’t make that kind of mistake….”

"so?"

Seo Seo-hee shrugged.

“Are you really here to check that?”

“I’ve been too busy lately to do that.”

“I even heard that you went to the collector’s shop.”

“Fuck, my private life. This damn rat is endless no matter how much I catch him. Why?”

Jeong Hae-woon was disgusted. The collectors were a guild that strictly controlled information. There was no way the story could have leaked from there, so it was one of two things. Either the collectors intentionally released it, or the other side had eyes and ears.

There was no reason for the collector to get involved in the childish quarrel between the two. So it was probably the latter. Jeong Hae-woon humbly accepted it. After all, they both pretended not to know each other even though they already knew each other.

“Anyway, there’s a reason I came here.”

“Yes, what on earth would you say, leaving my dear Guildmaster outside?”

“No matter how much I searched, I couldn’t find anyone else to ask but you.”

“…This is a bit ominous, wait a minute.”

“I’ve been to a closed school before.”

“I said it was just for a moment, I’m really going crazy. Why are you doing this to me?”

Seo Seo-hee hit her forehead in frustration. The one who filmed the mukbang in front of her was Jeong Hae-woon, so why was she getting slapped? It was extremely unfair, but she understood. She understood that she was frustrated.

Anyway, Seo Seo-hee maintained her characteristically peaceful expression.

“I guess it’s no use trying to catch him since he’s already busy and came all the way here to eat.”

“I told you earlier, no matter how much I thought about it, there was no one else I could ask but you. If I erased my memories, then of course Danhae’s memories would have disappeared too. But that doesn’t mean I can ask Eunhye.”

“Don’t touch a kid who’s already tired.”

“I also heard that the President, who must be tired because of us, recently visited that abandoned school. And above all, I must have investigated that place, but I don’t remember doing that.”

“I wish I had just never known….”

"ah."

Jeong Hae-woon nodded as if he understood.

“Didn't I tell you not to talk?”

“It’s surprising that you realized it now, considering how long it took.

What kind of stimulation did you get from the collector to make someone who is already busy postpone their schedule to come see me?”

“That old man in Visabal said this.”

Jeong Hae-un recited mechanically.

“My son will love everything forever. Love, mercy, affection, sacrifice, affection. He is made up of all these similar words. Didn’t the guild leader Jeong Hae-un ask me about his destination and starting point…?”

The end of the sentence was drawn out and Jeong Hae-woon finished it off.

“And then he asked, ‘Didn’t you see it too?’”

“…Are you limiting it to just you?”

“I thought it might be possible. That’s why I thought of the abandoned school. Sure enough, I noticed something about Sergio Hunter there. That’s why I decided to forget about it.”

“Then let’s live on, forgetting about it.”

Seo Seo-hee shrugged.

“It’s not that there are no risks, but the risk is too great to try to recover the forgotten past. You know what we’re risking with that promise.”

“Yeah, I know that too. To be honest, I don’t know what I wanted to do. I’ve been sleeping well lately and have less work, so I guess I have more free time, but I keep having random thoughts.”

“You’d rather be half-assed like me. If you keep doing this, you might get into trouble.”

“I eventually decided not to remember and ran away to find Dan Hae-ra. You know me too. If I feel like I can’t handle it, I run away. That’s what I did back then.”

Even though it's something I don't even remember.

“I’m not saying that I want my memories back, I’m just curious. Why is that teacher or whatever being being so kind to us?”

“If you just cover it with a new relationship….”

“You have to think carefully, I don’t know how long this will last. I acknowledge that the being is very kind, gentlemanly, and merciful to humans, but the rest is not.”

“I think that’s enough to admit everything.”

“No, what I mean is… what are we going to do when the interest in that existence ends? We have to become self-reliant, like we created a system to drive out the harmful gods of Earth and limit their ability to intervene.”

“I understand what you mean.”

Seo Seo-hee nodded.

“That’s what I just mentioned as the ‘destination’ and ‘starting point.’ I want to see the beginning and the end of this love. No, at least I want to estimate it.”

“Despite his divine nature, Black Cloak is not subject to the restraints of the system. He is an exception.”

It was really tiring work.

“This can’t be explained by the fact that he is the Eye of the Origin. The same goes for the reason why the personality of ‘Geo’ is placed on the Origin. I am grateful in many ways, but it is still a bunch of variables… I just can't understand the direction of that favor."

why?

"You don't have to do that, do you?"

"Well, since Sergio Hunter is our teacher, he must be moving in a direction that is favorable to humans. You saw it too, it was the human ego."

"So how is that possible? It's ridiculous, to begin with. I'm sure that I'm seeing it as the source and I'm sure he won't deny it."

It's such a huge being.

"I think I sang the Origin song on a fictitious day and my senses were paralyzed. It's the Origin. It's a being that's wider, deeper, and more expansive than the universe. I don't even know what it essentially looks like, what its purpose is, or if it has a self. Even now, the 'Portrait' shows a completely different identity with the same face. How could such a being change favorably just because it has a few personalities mixed in?"

It's not just simply friendly.

"That's love. The source is giving love, and that's what's really going on. For this to work, the initiative has to go to that human named Sergio. That's what I'm saying, that human, not the source, has the initiative."

"Could it be that he wasn't human from the beginning?"

"It's quite possible. It's not that humans died and merged with the mysteries, but that they were born as mysteries in human form from the beginning. And when it was time to die, they were retrieved. No, of course I don't know. I don't know exactly what the order was. It's out of the question that personality was added to the origin in the first place….”

Jeong Hae-woon shrugged.

“It’s not like finding out would make any difference, right?”

Still, this was important. Jeong Hae-woon wanted to know what kind of structure the being he regarded as his teacher had. He might be punished by heaven for daring to test the mystery, but that was the responsibility of the future Jeong Hae-woon.

“I need to know that.”

“To know the destination and the starting point?”

“Yes, for that, we need to know about the essential existence of ‘Sergio Hunter’.”

“I understand what you mean….”

Seo Seo-hee looked at the empty lunch box with a bitter face.

“Why did you come to me and say such things?”

“Do you always eat at this time?”

“Piglet.”

but.

“In the end, I can’t tell you.”

“…I thought it wouldn’t work out for me either.”

“You really seemed out of your mind back then.”

“I know this is dangerous, but….”

If we were not careful, the achievements that were built precariously like a small stone tower on a mountain path could have come crashing down. So it was only natural for Seo Seo-hee to say this. I knew that.

Seo Seo-hee, who had been hesitating, said.

“Why don’t you go and see him in person?”

"principal?"

“They might already be using a huge number of them.”

“I wouldn’t be able to figure it out. But at least if they were the person involved, they would probably know the line that isn’t dangerous. Even if they didn’t know, they would probably just pretend not to know.”

“Hmm… you’re right.”

So Jeong Hae-un visited the collector.

* * *

“I promised not to bother you.”

“You can withdraw that promise to me, sir. Oh, well then.”

“I thought you would come all the way here to ask that.”

The black-painted portrait tilted its head.

“Your friend who is not speaking out for peace will be sad.”

“It is well known that our dear President is having a hard time. But this is not the area I am in. I am only asking for permission.”

“Permission… I have never been given that authority.”

“In other words, you could say that I’m asking for advice rather than permission. I’ve learned that it’s neither strange nor shameful to seek wisdom from those who are wiser than you, sir.”

“My advice may not always be right. I am not perfect. I am not completely good, nor am I ideally affectionate.”

“You don’t think I’m here to discuss your qualifications, do you? I need your advice now. Yours in my estimation.”

“You might regret it.”

“It’s a prophecy from the beginning, and it’s really creepy, but I trust my friends. Even if you and I get into a really big accident, they’ll stop it.”

“It’s good to have the attitude to try, but wouldn’t it be necessary to do some research before taking on the challenge?”

“I would have done that if it was someone I could research, but unfortunately it’s not you.”

For some reason, Jeong Hae-woon smiled at him, even though he had a feeling that this would not end well, as he avoided him. In the end, someone had to see the end. In that case, it was right for him, the gardener, to take on that task.

Jeong Hae-woon asked.

“Teacher, I need help.”

“…….”

“Let me trust you.”

This portrait tended to focus on his role as a teacher. When he opened his mouth to think about that, the portrait looked a little bit daunted. He seemed to know why Jeong Hae-un said that.

“You’re so clever.”

“How are the skills you have worked hard to hone to become an adult?”

“It’s very spicy, I like it.”

"…is it so."

Jeong Hae-woon crossed his arms.

“You know what? Dan Hae-ra’s way of speaking is similar to yours.”

“What kind of speech habit are you talking about?”

“That’s what I mean when I say I like it.”

“Aha, I like that too. That kind of thing.”

“Is there a reason?”

“If you don’t say it out loud, it will disappear.”

“Mysteriously… that’s a strange statement.”

Why do I feel nostalgic about this conversation?

I won't judge this as a sentimental thought. Jeong Hae-un needed a clue that would allow him to believe in this existence for at least 1,000 years. I thought it was a natural order of things, since he was going to have to live with the unit for a very long time.

“You don’t think you’ll allow me to do that? What, the Earth’s going to end up like that? Well, I guess that’s a bit much for me too. But judging by your hesitation, I guess it’s not on that scale, right?”

“I repeat, I do not have the authority to give permission. I promised the president of this country that I would not talk nonsense or instigate anyone. Do you want me to break my promise to her? I know what you want, but I do not know exactly what to give you.”

“Either you don’t know or you’re pretending not to know….”

“But in the end, what you’ve been talking about lately is this. New trust. A relationship that needs to be built anew, forgetting the past. Isn’t that right? Among them, Jeong Hae-woon in particular wants to know me well.”

“That is true, but.”

“If you really want it, I dare to make an exception for you in all circumstances. You are my student too. But I tell you once again that my advice can never be perfect.”

The portrait warned.

“Would you be willing to tolerate some mishaps in the process of building trust?”

“As long as it doesn’t lead to the destruction of the planet or mass genocide, it’s fine.”

“…If that’s the case.”

The portrait came out.

“…….”

"illustration."

Barefoot.

'and….'

Jewel eye.

“Then, how about spending some time with me?”

“…Last time, you spent time next to Seo Seo-hee.”

“Of course, I am also the one who had a great time with Seo Seo-hee. We fought a very meaningful battle, using the name Argio, and for the honor of the evil god.”

“So you’re saying you’ll choose me this time?”

“I thought it would suit you very well, Gardener Jeong Hae-un. I bet we could have some pretty fun pranks.”

“…Actually, this alternative isn’t so bad.”

He nodded.

“So what kind of prank are you going to play this time?”

“Why are people in this world playing games?”

The eyes of the garden curve like a crescent moon.

“They’re all game addicts.”

"…her?"

“I don’t want to be trapped in a narrow monitor and see the world.”

“That’s a remark I don’t quite understand. It’s also sudden. Is that a complaint from the garden?”

“Look at me as you wish.”

It was funny.

“I will do that too.”

“…….”

Ugh, I feel uneasy.

‘It is a contract that we tried to make after taking into account the considerations…’

It was a little creepy.

* * *

Waiting for command

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (321)

321

Episode 321

Since that day, there has been a slight change in Jeong Hae-un's daily life.

“Hmm, I thought you’d wake up late since you worked late last night. How about sleeping a little longer now?”

“…What the fuck is this….”

“You don’t remember me, seeing as my heart is trembling with your harsh words…? Gardener Jeong Hae-woon borrowed me from the head of the Bisabeol guild. That’s why I ended up becoming a portrait in Jeong Hae-woon’s house. It’s disappointing to pretend to forget like this….”

“…I remember.”

It was a shocking presence that made me lose my memory for a moment. In terms of class and appearance, he was not the right person to see as soon as I woke up.

My heart was pounding like this, even though I’ve never felt this way since I was older. It wasn’t a particularly good feeling. Jeong Hae-woon’s face was a little pale. Considering that he had just woken up, his reaction was quite tired.

“I feel like I’ve just watched a horror movie. Waking up to the garden’s gaze is so scary.”

“You treated me kindly and I got a bad reaction? Have you ever seen such a kind and affectionate horror movie? At least not me.”

“Could you please… go back to black?”

The interior of Jeong Hae-woon's house wasn't particularly bleak. It was decorated in a simple manner so that no matter what guests came, they wouldn't feel uncomfortable. But even in that, the person who introduced himself as 'George' was flashy. He stood out too much.

My eyes hurt even though it wasn't the light coming from my face. It was really absurd.

'I used to feel this way right before I lost my sight.'

Jeong Hae-un had been to the point of blindness many times. Why did he feel this way when he had not seen anything bright, had not been poisoned, and had not been accustomed to heat?

Thinking back, it was a shocking presence in many ways.

“Did I bring you here too recklessly…?”

“You have brought me this precious body to talk about trust, so why are you being so disrespectful? Don’t you want to have faith in me? If you want to do that, shouldn’t you be a little more diligent?”

“…If you’ve been as honest as you’ve been up until now, I think you’ve been diligent enough.”

“That’s right, that’s very right. That’s why I prepared breakfast for the diligent student Jeong Hae-un. Thank you, right? I’ll be grateful, when have I ever been treated like this….”

“How many times have you been treated to breakfast?”

“Have you ever received anything from a gardener like me?”

“No, thank you. This is truly a merciful garden. Long live George.”

When I think about it, there has never been a more luxurious time. A meal prepared by the picky gardener himself. It was a great luxury for the gardener, except that eating it would probably make him sick.

And breakfast was simpler than I expected.

“…bread, sausage… and bacon.”

“I guess you can’t see the egg lying carefully next to you.”

“I see that too. It’s a very typical Western breakfast, something like that.”

“You like this kind of thing.”

“…My heart sinks every time I say something like that….”

Even if they spoke based on their past experiences, Jeong Hae-woon didn’t know anything. To be exact, he had forgotten everything. As he sat down, Jeong Hae-woon checked the meal that Jeong-won had prepared for him.

Round pancakes and glossy sausages. The yolk was a deep, almost orange color and was plump like a bead, and the bacon was crispy but the fat part looked very moist.

“……”

If there's one thing that's a bit absurd, it's the sheer quantity.

“What, an elephant is coming?”

“Phew.”

“Hey, what the hell is that big guy trying to do? Seriously.”

“I’m 21 years old and always fresh, so it’s okay, this much.”

“If you’re going to share one body, you should at least unify your age. I’m going to die of confusion. Anyway, are you going to eat all of this yourself? Will it all fit in that body? Isn’t it physically impossible?”

“It’s quite romantic to ask for the impossible in a garden.”

“Anyway, the word ‘romance’ is used everywhere….”

Still, I was slowly getting used to it. As George had said, a garden that ignored the laws of physics was not a strange story. The portrait sat proudly and neatly, absorbing the food.

'It's amazing every time I see it.'

He ate quietly and obediently, but a pancake that was not small at all was sucked into his mouth. His mouth was full, and his cheeks did not swell. It was a quiet task, but the speed was amazing.

'I do have my own share.'

The dish placed on the portrait seemed to be intended for an appetizer plate, but Jeong Hae-woon had an ordinary stomach that could be satisfied with just one plate. There was also moderately boiled broccoli and roasted cherry tomatoes as garnish.

'I guess it's because it's a garden, but they secretly prepare harmonious meals.'

And of course, it was delicious.

“I’m going to go back.”

“Please admit that it is delicious, Jeong Hae-un.”

“What am I eating?”

“Aren’t you eating breakfast?”

“That is true, but.”

I felt uneasy somewhere.

‘… I don’t know why I feel so familiar with this time of day. Strangely enough, this mealtime doesn’t feel awkward.’

After finishing the meal, it was 7 AM. Jeong Hae-woon, who had some free time thanks to the help of the black cloak, was able to eat breakfast like this. Since he had never done this before, this situation should have been unfamiliar, but he was eating it all at once.

'I guess it's because it's so delicious that humans find it hard to resist.'

When I looked into it, I found out that they often went to the sun goddess or the god of death to make offerings that were not offerings. It would have been difficult for Jeong Hae-un to refuse food that even the gods found tempting.

Anyway, today was the day to inspect the garden. Since it was a previously scheduled schedule, the two of them walked around the garden from early in the morning.

“This place was once an ownerless garden.”

“I think it’s piece number 482. Is that correct?”

“I always say this, but I don’t know how to call out numbers like that. But I heard that the gardener in charge was recently saved with the help of Black Cloak.”

“Oh, he’s such a nice guy. He plays with me often. It seems like Black Cloak does a lot of fun things, don’t you think?”

“I don’t know how long I’ll have to keep doing this. Anyway, since I’m a new gardener, there are some parts of my work that I’m not very good at. This time, I'll fix those and move on."

There are 10,000 'gardens' in the world, and many of them have chosen gardeners. This jungle full of tall trees is no exception. However, it seems that the complex structure makes it difficult for the gardeners in charge to handle.

"It's good to have motivation, but if you look at it a little more carefully, you won't end up with such a strangely misguided part. Maybe it's because you're still a beginner, but it seems to be going slowly."

"I heard that the Hunter Association and Jeong Hae-un's guild also provide gardener training. Is that not very effective? Or are these also just mistakes made by beginners…?"

"For now, it's better than nothing. We did create a gardener-only academy class, but it's awkward for both teachers and students. I believe it will get better over time."

Next was an ownerless garden.

"Is this one in your paintings too?"

"This is the 3,094th painting, this huge lake is really fascinating."

"A lake without any living creatures is definitely an alien existence to humans. It is so clean that it is unpleasant. It seems that they are trying to swallow up many talented people these days, but strangely, there is no gardener in charge."

"That's what love is."

"You have a bad habit of trying to lump all variables together with love."

The lake was so quiet that it swallowed up all sound. Perhaps this excessive silence was the reason why it never had a gardener. Most people would go crazy if they were deprived of this much sound.

Jeong Hae-woon rubbed his chin.

“It may not be easy to hope for, but I wish someone who can’t hear at all would come to me….”

“I hope whoever comes will adapt well.”

“That’s what I’m saying. It doesn’t matter who comes, but it would be nice if we had enough similarities to not fight from the start. Wouldn’t that be more comfortable, regardless of love or anything else?”

“And yet, in the end, love is a force that can overcome differences.”

“I think that’s a romantic statement typical of you, but the world is much harsher than you imagine. It’s bizarre, full of variables, and it’s really hard to listen to. It’s a dog-like mystery in a dog-like garden.”

“……?”

Suddenly, Jeong-won, who was being cursed at, looked at Shinbi Jeong-hae-un. Jeong-hae-un naturally ignored the gaze. It had been a long time since he realized that this was close to a 'game'. There was no reason for the other person to get angry.

Here, Jeong Hae-un caught one of the water bugs that was making noise.

“Buzzing like a beetle.”

The silent lake would not have welcomed such a bug. But it was natural for an unmanaged garden to have bad bugs. And Honey's eyes lit up as she watched it.

“…Oh, do you want this?”

“Gulp.”

“I would appreciate it if you could give me some advice. Can I give this to my child as a gift?”

Honey, who was sitting on Jeong Hae-woon's shoulder, tilted her head. She was cute, but not cute at all. There was no way a gardener of Jeong Hae-woon's stature would not recognize the status of this water bird.

'You're still watching me.'

Above all, the way it looked at the bug and himself was like that of a predator. Jeong Hae-woon couldn't shake the suspicion that this being was deliberately pretending to be cute in front of his father.

Fortunately, permission was granted to the garden.

“That would be a perfect snack for Honey. My dog is not a picky eater unless it’s spicy. If there’s anything Honey wants and wants to give her, you can give her as much as you want.”

“If the guardian says so.”

Honey swallowed the bug.

'Why does it pretend to eat with such a small mouth? Its entire body is made of water, so why does it pretend to eat like this?'

Jung Hae-woon often felt that Shinbi's actions were very hypocritical. Even if 'Portrait of Geo' was covered by a human ego, Honey wouldn't be like that. Was she simply imitating her father?

‘I think it’s more like pretending to be cute than that…’

If this was the rule of 'Honey', then it was something that had to be accepted. A cute eldest son, a cute water bird, a cute child. Judging from the fact that the 'bird'-like behavior increased only in front of the portrait, I could guess the relationship.

'They say they're family, but in the end, aren't they just playing house?'

I still can't get used to that kind of appearance. This kind of mysterious pretense or imitation. Regardless of whether it's good or bad, there's something very strange about it. That strangeness creates a feeling of uneasiness.

“Have you seen everything?”

“…….”

Yeah, that kind of thing too.

“…Actually, I didn’t see everything.”

The jewel eyes that sparkle so fiercely that they suddenly cloud my reason. If I were a human being without the experience and self-control of Jeong Hae-un, I would have been easily charmed and given my soul. The essence of that is 'love'.

'It's a terrible thing.'

A garden that could receive love and give mercy? That was definitely a disaster. And if it was in human form, the only answer was that it was trash.

“You’re not the type of person who can read everything in just a quick glance, are you, sir?”

“Uh… I was just wondering if you’ve seen the whole garden. Honey, you’ve finished eating.”

“…let’s move.”

This wasn't the first or second time he had been caught like that.

'I really don't know how to build trust.'

This portrait gave him a chance. A chance to build trust. It was also a chance to analyze the other person. But as time went by, his doubts only deepened.

'And also the part about why none of this feels unfamiliar to me at all…
.'

There were parts that I shouldn't think deeply about, but I couldn't help but have doubts that kept coming up. That was human nature. Wanting to fill an empty hole.

They continued to visit the garden like that every day. Jeong Hae-un was a very special gardener, so he could visit the gardens of the owners, and that was the reason why the Earth was not destroyed yet.

“Honestly, I’m starting to get a little tired of this, teacher.”

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been working for a long time, let out a sigh.

“Yes, I felt it when I said I had drawn 10,000 gardens. In fact, I thought that was almost all the gardens on Earth. Since you called out the numbers of each garden I visited, I think my guess was probably right.”

“There must have been a garden that I couldn’t draw. Our game of tag ended faster than I thought because of my whim. I finally got 10,000 points, but I’m sure there were other friends who did.”

“I guess that’s a total of 10,000 gardens that are so important that they could threaten the fate of the Earth. Well, it could just be your taste….”

“Aren’t you hungry?”

“…….”

They sat in the middle of another garden, munching on panini.

“I don’t know if this is allowed in the garden.”

“I don’t think the kids are angry.”

“Isn’t it normal to be upset if someone drops food crumbs on your clothes?”

“So you’re saying the panini isn’t tasty?”

“It’s so delicious, I’m going crazy.”

“Okay then.”

George smiled refreshingly.

“I’m not really a good cook.”

“Was that amazing?”

“It would be harder to live as a wanderer and not be able to cook.”

“A wanderer… does that mean life as a two-legged gardener?”

“I was a wanderer long before that. I was a musician who was loved by many people. I was also a good cook and handsome.”

“Where does this endless confidence come from…?”

“My value that springs up without end?”

“That’s not wrong.”

“There were so many people who tried to hold me back. There were so many, but I didn’t want to stay in one place, so I usually ran away.”

"escape?"

“I am… the type of person who doesn’t like being locked up, even if it’s a golden prison.”

This says that he was once human.

“What kind of person were you?”

“He was a beloved person.”

“That may not have been all there was to you.”

“That’s all, that’s why I’m like this now….”

"…uh…."

Jeong Hae-woon was a little embarrassed.

“You don’t like the way you are now? That’s quite surprising, because you’re so narcissistic.”

“I’m a person who really likes change. I mean, on Earth, they call this dopamine addiction. I mean, I’ve been wandering around all kinds of gardens and I haven’t really enjoyed it.”

“…But as we hang out together, I end up getting to know you better.”

In this way, the garden often told its own story. It wasn't always like that. Most of the time, it was just a joke, but sometimes, if you were lucky, you could hear a heartfelt story.

It's not that I didn't want to ask more, but every time I thought about it, Jeongwon warned me.

“It’s not time to tell my story yet, is it?”

I don't know exactly what that means, but I could tell that this garden was predicting the future. Jeong Hae-woon just nodded in agreement.

"All right."

The less a gardener knows about the future, the longer he lives. I didn't want to harm my mental health by buying a house.

'You're probably just telling me the information that won't pose a major threat to humans or the Earth.'

I had previously asked for permission to go with 'Portrait of Geo' for the line 'Jeong Hae-woon Should Know'. I thought this might be an extension of that.

After walking around the garden like that, Jeong Hae-un was able to return home. He was scheduled to continue his work as the guild leader another day. There was nothing urgent.

“Why don’t you wash before lying down?”

“Oh, please….”

“I’m not one to insist on washing up after going out, but Jeong Hae-woon looks like he’ll fall asleep at any moment. Do you remember that we haven’t even had dinner yet?”

“…If you eat alone….”

“Me? Alone? I have to eat…?”

“It happens now.”

After eating like that, Jeong Hae-woon's work was over.

“…….”

It's changed a lot.

'It wasn't like this originally.'

I never thought it would change this much.

But George was a master at trolling and taming people. When he joked, straightened, laughed, or whispered, you couldn't help but follow him.

'That's why people keep saying that the owner of the food stall is a dangerous monster despite his kindness.'

Jeong Hae-woon sat on the living room sofa.

“Oh my, Sakshin….”

“Is it because you insist on having a middle-aged appearance? Are your joints middle-aged too?”

“I’m just saying, I’m just saying.”

“Did you have fun today?”

“…….”

This garden always asked this question at the end of the day. Jeong Hae-woon still couldn't figure out the intention. What on earth was the purpose of the question? He was still curious, but he wasn't offended.

Still, I felt uneasy.

"…well."

Habits that my body and soul remember come out without me knowing. Things that I know I wouldn't do, I end up doing naturally around him. It gives me goosebumps when I realize that.

An error occurred

Waiting for command

What on earth do I want to do?

The waiting time limit has been exceeded

Force: Switches to command progress state

Unlock progress_0.02%

“…What are you looking at, teacher?”

“I think something really fun is going to happen.”

“When you say that, I feel really uneasy.”

“So tell me what you think.”

The garden smiled like a crescent moon.

“It’s a promise, Jeong Hae-woon.”

* * *

That day, Jeong Hae-un had a dream.

It was a terribly nostalgic dream.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (322)

322

Episode 322

It was one day when I looked up at the red and black sky.

"teacher."

Jeong Hae-woon asked a man.

“Teacher, you’re not going anywhere.”

“Where am I going.”

“Wherever you go, you’ll do well.”

“How could that be? My students are all here, where would I go?”

“…Teacher’s family or something….”

“You know it doesn’t exist anymore.”

“…….”

Actually, I was a little grateful for those words.

Jeong Hae-woon also knew that it was a mean and wicked idea. But he still thought it was fortunate. His teacher was a person who had a strong love for his family. If there had been even one of them left, he would have gone there.

But now his family was gone, so next to us… .

“Don’t have any weird thoughts again.”

“Ah… no, I didn’t do it.”

“It’s twisted in a really strange way.”

“The world is so twisted, but I’m this twisted, it’s not like it’s noticeable.”

“If you hear me nagging, I can’t help it… but I meant to tell you not to think like that.”

“What makes you think that way?”

“I think this much will be okay.”

He was always the same even though the world was going to hell.

“If it’s greed, then it can’t be helped. But I want us to live just as we knew each other. You like you, and I like me. Don’t let us change so much that we become unrecognizable…”

“Why do things happen that I can’t figure out?”

“There were many times like that before the world ended. Just because you keep someone by your side doesn’t mean they’ll always remain someone you know. Or you might actually become physically distant.”

“You don’t recognize me?”

“That’s not uncommon. Humans are creatures who ultimately rely on memory, and memory is like an illusion that can’t be grasped, so it can change at any time.”

“Then?”

“You won’t recognize me. You won’t be the person I used to know. But I know this is boring. So you don’t have to listen to it.”

He said.

“As I said before, in the end, it’s just my greed. In this changing environment, not changing could be perceived as being similar to being eliminated. I just don’t think so.”

“…That’s a bit true, but honestly, I like what you say.”

Because the world was ruined, there were things I could say more honestly. Didn't you feel with your whole body that you didn't know when you would die? Even now, looking at the ominous sky, I felt it a hundred, a thousand times. That death was near.

“I hope it doesn’t change, so I can keep getting to know you.”

“You don’t have to do what I say. As I’ve said many times, there’s no way I’m always right.”

“But still, you’re a teacher.”

“In this world, the authority that comes with being a teacher is not so absolute. It was like that in the past, too.”

“You always nag at us.”

“Yeah, I guess I thought it was nagging. It wasn’t a fun story to listen to.”

It seemed like he was smiling. When I looked again, his lips didn't move at all, but I kept thinking that. Jeong Hae-woon's teacher was able to put emotion and meaning into his voice to the point where I could feel that way.

“Even if the world is ruined, I hope I still have humanity. I want to remain a person who doesn’t carelessly harm lives, doesn’t belittle someone’s worth, and can give as much as I have.”

Then he nodded as if he understood.

“Isn’t this boring talk again?”

“It’s not fun, but… I don’t think it’s a bad thing.”

“I’m so glad you said that, teacher.”

“Okay then.”

“I had very good students.”

“…….”

Well, that wasn't true. He was just a good teacher who had created good students by hand. The teacher acted as if he had completely forgotten that.

All the hardships and adversities of the world seemed easy to him. There must have been times when he felt tired and exhausted, but it didn't seem that way at all. How can he take it for granted that he won't go crazy in a world that is going crazy?

“…Don’t go anywhere.”

“Why are you so scared, Jeong Hae-woon?”

“The Korean teacher said he was crazy.”

“It seems like other kids are scared too.”

He acted as if he understood everything. I was grateful for that rather than being upset. In a world where everything had changed, he was the only one who had not changed. It seemed like he would always be in the same place.

A low, calm voice had the power to calm even an anxious heart.

“The Korean teacher must have been that scared. He couldn’t stand it unless he went somewhere.”

“…But you’re a teacher, and everyone is running away… Isn’t that cowardly?”

There were times when I felt wronged.

“The teacher is working so hard, but everyone else is being irresponsible… The teacher has the hardest time, but they just keep saying shit… whining….”

His teacher always understood too much. And he didn't resent or hate them. He just accepted the information itself and thought, 'So what should I do now?'

“Am I the only one getting mad again?”

“We can be angry together.”

“Teacher, are you Buddha? Did you come from the temple?”

“Does the Buddha usually come from there? I don’t know since I’m not a Buddhist.”

“No, don’t you feel a little… wronged?”

“What do I have to be upset about?”

It's always been like that.

“I’m just sorry.”

“…I’m sorry about something, teacher.”

“You’re making something even scarier for students who are already scared.”

“Why are you worried about that, teacher? Those who ran away wouldn’t even think about it.”

“Haeun, you really… worry, in a strange way.”

He patted me lightly on the back. It didn’t seem like he was trying to cheer me up or cheer me up, but rather as a consolation telling me not to be sad anymore. His gentle and affectionate touch also cooled my bubbling stomach.

The teacher always said boring things.

“I’m not going anywhere.”

"why."

Because you're a teacher?

“Because you are a teacher.”

“…Or you would have run away?”

“But it would have remained.”

“Why that?”

“Maybe because I’m an adult?”

“The other teachers ran away, even though they were teachers and adults.”

“That reason was enough for me, but I guess it wasn’t for them.”

“Will you be like that someday, teacher?”

“I can’t quite imagine it….”

And then he said something nice to hear.

“Okay, let’s run away with just you guys.”

“…Me? Hae-ra and Seo-hee and Eun-hye too?”

“Just up to there.”

“…Do you think teachers also have favoritism?”

“I’m a human too. How could I not have favoritism?”

“…….”

“…? Why is there no answer at this timing?”

Jeong Hae-woon hesitated and then answered.

“…Because it doesn’t seem human….”

That's why it was more scary.

His teacher was, and still is, too idealistic. He was a good adult and teacher. Maybe that was why he felt so anxious. It wouldn't be strange if he suddenly disappeared.

I once heard this:

'They say the reason good people die young is because God covets them.'

The teacher was a good person. I could see that even better after the world was destroyed. I realized anew how valuable it was after the destruction. That’s why there are so many people who want it… I think I realized it a little late.

There were many places that wanted this person. Nevertheless, the teacher remained by their side. I was grateful for that, but I was also anxious. He was such an idealistic being that it seemed like an illusion.

Was it because it was more unrealistic than a destroyed world?

“…….”

“I am a human being.”

"…i know."

“You guys tend to idolize me too much, you know?”

“You always say that, teacher.”

“I always say that, but you don’t listen, so I’ll say it again.”

"but…."

It wasn't about idolizing. It was just that there was someone who was naturally an idol, and that was Jeong Hae-woon's teacher. He was perfect in every way, and at the same time, he could be kind and affectionate.

“Jeong Hae-un.”

“I, I’m not the only one who thinks this way. Isn’t it time you started admitting it too, Teacher? Are you embarrassed?”

It was a bit unfair. It was a student's pride that his teacher was so special. It was something that only you had to admit. There was nothing more to say, it was the truth.

But his teacher never responded to Jeong Hae-un's greed. He was still calm and quiet.

“I was already worried because the atmosphere has been so strange lately.”

“I don’t know why you deny it so much. Wouldn’t it be better if everyone viewed the teacher favorably?”

“You think I’m perfect.”

“That’s right, teacher, always… even in a world like this….”

“No.”

I should have listened to what he said.

“I am human.”

Why did it leak out?

Thinking back, it was truly a cowardly thing to do.

* * *

“…….”

An error occurred

"…uh…."

An error occurred

An error occurred

An error occurred

"wait for a sec."

An abnormality has been detected

Waiting for command

Forced: The system is temporarily missing

“Wait a minute, what is this?”

“Jeong Hae-un.”

“…….”

When I raised my head, there were pitch-black eyes.

Beyond my system window, which warned of all sorts of dangers, I could see it very clearly. A darkness so thick that I could not tell its depth. Fate and its weight, filled within. The cycle of life and death. And humanity.

The man in the black cloak asked Jeong Hae-woon, who was covered in cold sweat.

“Is it a burden to you?”

“…What, what are you talking about….”

“Then let’s pretend it never happened.”

“That never happened…?”

“I might have gotten a little excited.”

There was no hint of self-reproach. He simply spoke like an old man reflecting on his own work. He said that he was excited and that he had overdone things a little. He was asking if that had been a burden to Jeong Hae-woon.

And then he said something out of the blue.

“I like the safe route.”

I just heard that story.

“I don’t hate change, but I don’t like it either. I seek a stable and peaceful life. I hope that I and those around me won’t suffer, that each day will be simple and happy, and that I will cry only occasionally.”

It's the voice I heard in my dream.

“But this time, I got greedy. I tried to pretend not to know and forget about it, but the two-legged garden doesn’t like such boring paths. I felt a sense of adventure that I didn’t have before. So I got excited. I thought it would be really fun….”

The gloomy, raspy voice that pierces your ears makes all the words, adventurous, excited, and fun sound like illusions. It melts your brain.

“I know you, who keeps coming back to that abandoned school, burned down by the fire, even though I keep forgetting.”

“…Closed school?”

“You’ve been coming and going quite a few times. I’ve tried to help you out a few times to relieve your fatigue, but you’ve still come back to me.”

“I… went there, a lot? Not once or twice?”

“You were a really smart student. You still are. I’ve had doubts about myself many times for not visiting the abandoned school even after talking to Mr. Yoo Seong-woon.”

“You erased that memory?”

“Rather, I fixed the error. I closed the hole that was breached. Maybe I. Well? Was it me? I don’t know. But maybe it was me. I’m always here. Can you say that this is me too?”

"what…."

“This time, he came to the collector’s gallery to find me. This time, it was different. So this time, I thought I would agree… Mr. George is a brave man, so I accepted his help.”

His speech continued.

“But ‘George’ has this flaw. I like him, but to be honest, he’s a bit inconsiderate. The pace of change will be faster, but for those trapped inside… it might be a little difficult.”

“…….”

“And yet, Haeun caught your eye. The other children pretended not to see or hear, and forgot about it, but not you. It must have been for the purpose of controlling and understanding the Black Cloak….”

“…….”

“Still, I was happy. I really like the present, but that doesn’t mean I reject the past. It may be arrogant to say this, but I always make choices that I won’t regret.”

He says his whole life has been enjoyable and worthwhile.

“Did you have a scary dream?”

Because the black thing asked him, Jeong Hae-woon answered without knowing it.

“…It was scary…”

“Why did you do that?”

“…I feel like I did something, really wrong….”

"so?"

“…….”

After mumbling for a while, he finally spoke.

"…no."

Not now.

“This can’t be happening anymore.”

“Yeah, it could be dangerous.”

“But… do I have to forget this again?”

“I don’t know why you’re reacting so grandly just because you just had a dream. Why are you acting all this weird now? It wasn’t that important of a dream.”

“I don’t want to forget….”

I reached out with a trembling hand. I stepped past the system window that was blaring a warning, and my hand grabbed the collar of the pitch-black cloak. The soft fabric that had been wrapped around me by a human being gave me goosebumps, as it did not feel even a hint of warmth.

Still, he exerted even more strength to not let go. His trembling fingers finally grabbed the collar of the cloak and slowly and roughly pulled it down. His hands shook like an old man holding a cane and enduring a typhoon.

The black cloak was then dragged down obediently.

“…Sir….”

I called you teacher.

“Oh, I said I wasn’t going to leave.”

“I didn’t leave.”

“Didn’t you say you wouldn’t abandon us?”

“I never threw it away.”

“But why, why is it so scary…?”

My breathing was shaky, and tears flowed painfully like thorns. My mind was aching.

“…Who the hell are you?”

“This is your teacher Sergio.”

“What the heck, what the heck is going on…!!!”

It was painful.

It was just a dream. It was just a dream, just as Black Cloak said. But why is it so hard? Why am I so scared? Why are all my organs screaming when they aren't even hurt? Why am I crying?

It was all because of 'Jeong Hae-un' in the dream. The anxiety he felt took over his head. Even though I grabbed him by the collar with both hands and dragged him down, he didn't feel relieved.

I wanted to scream at the being I had already captured to please stay away. It was an incomprehensible impulse.

“I, I.”

“Should I erase it one more time?”

“…….”

“…Hmm.”

Soon, the pitch-black eyes changed into jewel-like eyes that were so gorgeous they were almost painful to look at.

“Is it still early?”

“…don’t go.”

“I wanted to encourage you a little more, but I couldn’t because I felt bad for you. I’m really weak-hearted.”

“Don’t go, please.”

“I’m always here, Haeun-ah.”

“It’s not you.”

“This is me too.”

The garden smiled like a crescent moon. It was the same smile I had seen before falling asleep.

“You said you thought too highly of me, didn’t you…?”

With a soft, encouraging voice, a pale hand covered Jeong Hae-woon's eyes.

“We know what’s right.”

“…….”

“And I know what’s good.”

“…….”

“So… should I sleep some more now?”

It was a voice that was soothing a young child, not a student.

Would you like to repair your system?

Yes/No

"yes."

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

“…Student Jeong Hae-un.”

George removed his hand and smiled into her tear-streaked, dull eyes.

“Good morning, isn’t it?”

"…okay."

“Why are you crying?”

“…I don’t know….”

The strength in Jeong Hae-woon’s hand that was holding the black cloak’s collar naturally disappeared. He looked at the smile of the splendid garden in front of him with unfocused eyes. Then he muttered as if unconsciously.

“…Why did you cry?”

I didn't remember.

Also, I forgot.

* * *

In the frame.

The blackened portrait looked puzzled.

“…It seems like we talked a lot, but it’s also strange.”

I didn't remember.

List of suitable candidates

Garden of Delights_George

Fairy tale rate ???%

“As expected, you’re a prankster.”

It was no surprise. Knowing that he was also 'Geo', the portrait was not afraid of the garden's wild antics.

'Maybe my translucent friend helped.'

Sergio still couldn't remember which prank it was. He knew it, and he thought he knew it, but he just pretended not to know and forgot. He forgot it, and only the 'fact' that became the portrait right before it was burned remained.

That's why Geo just spoke to the gaze that reached me.

“I wonder if our father will be okay sending this precious son to a faraway place….”

The torn pupils are familiar.

* * *

“…….”

A burst of laughter broke out.

“Oh, really….”

In my office, the secretary laughed.

“I told you it’s the best.”

As expected, he is my son.

Bright yellow eyes were staring into space.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (323)

323

Episode 323

The phenomenon occurred suddenly.

“…? What, what is it? Why is the system like this?”

“It wasn’t just me that had this problem?”

“No, what the heck is this… This is ridiculous.”

Around 4AM. Those who were awake at that time noticed a 'error' in the system. Problems such as distorted text in the system or the system not working at all occurred.

Then people realized a surprising fact.

“The system isn’t permanent?”

“Fuck, what the hell is going on….”

“Is Catastrophe Season 2 Coming?”

“Please don’t talk nonsense.”

To the people of Earth, especially to the Awakened, the System was like air. It was an intangible entity that existed naturally and was very familiar, but if it disappeared, it would be a disaster. That was the System.

But the difference between air and the system was that the system was created by three 'humans'. I had never thought about it for 32 years, but the system could disappear at any time.

“Hey, you’re taking it too seriously.”

Someone also said this:

“Haven’t you seen the system warning window? It says error, error.”

“But the fact that there is an error in that system….”

“It was made by humans, so there are bound to be some imperfections.”

That could certainly be the case.

“To be honest, it’s been about 30 years since the system was created. Once a game is made, errors occur several times before it’s finished, and it’s been fixed or updated.”

“Are the games and systems the same?”

“What’s the difference? After all, isn’t the system also something that was created by people? It may not be a perfect analogy to a game, but isn’t it possible for errors to occur? The system isn’t a product of nature either.”

“Well, that’s true, but….”

“I’m not denying that there was a problem this time. What I’m trying to say is that it can happen at any time. There’s nothing perfect in the world.”

There were many opinions like that.

But one thing that people have come to know for sure is that the system is not perfect.

While some said, "It's amazing that we've made it this far without any problems," others said, "What if the system collapses from here?" And there were only three people on Earth who could answer that question.

“The association has already identified the problem and is seeking a solution.”

They just said this.

“Please understand that we cannot disclose this information as it contains a significant amount of important confidential information related to system operation. However, our association always does its best to ensure the safety of the Earth, and we promise to resolve any issues regarding system errors.”

A long-winded statement that said, “Do you trust us?” without any real content. It might seem absurd, but those who had been showing various reactions soon nodded their heads. This was because they completely trusted the current government and the association.

People backed away obediently, although they felt uneasy.

“Well, this isn’t the first or second time that confidential information has been hidden like this….”

“I guess there is something the citizens should not know.”

“Why don’t you just stop making a fuss and do it for me?”

Both the awakened and the unawakened knew something about the 'promise'. It was a kind of contract, and as such, it could be broken even with a single word. It was understandable that the contents were hidden.

Especially in the case of city dwellers, there were fewer who did not receive help from the government and associations. There was no one who did not know that the symbol of eternity always tried to support the earth with the spirit of a saint. They gradually calmed down based on trust.

“It’s not like anything big happened.”

“That’s true.”

Another big thing was that virtually no one was harmed, except for a brief glitch that surprised them. They learned that the system may not be permanent or perfect, but so what.

“The association will take care of it.”

“The President also said that he is actively responding to this.”

“What do we have to worry about?”

In the end, what mattered was the practicality. As long as there was no actual damage, it was a harmless incident. People who concluded that way began to return to their daily lives. As long as it wasn't the beginning of another disaster, it didn't matter.

The only problem was that they knew about the 'Promise of Eternity'.

“…….”

The president of the association, Dan Hae-ra, with a doll-like expression, said with a smile.

“Let’s gather together.”

“Yes, I will contact you.”

“This matter will be personally checked by His Excellency the President and our Eternal Symbol.”

“I understand.”

“Where should I look….”

Her head tilted.

“Things are going well.”

He smiled, but his face didn't look all that amused.

* * *

“Yeah, fuck me.”

Seo Seo-hee hit her forehead at Jeong Hae-woon's bold statement that he was the mastermind behind this situation.

“Do you have to have that much of an accident to say something like that?”

“What can you do if you don’t have confidence?”

“I have received reports that you are staying with the ‘Portrait of Geo’.”

“You fucking rats are really fucking hard working.”

“We’ll talk about the rat later. Was this incident influenced by that person?”

Seo Seo-hee, who had been hesitating, asked further.

“…Did you recall the memory?”

“That’s not it.”

Jeong Hae-woon shook his head.

“Strictly speaking, I thought about it, but then I forgot it again.”

Danhae nodded to him.

“That must be the consideration shown by ‘Portrait of Geo’?”

“I was fine before I fell asleep, but when I came to, I was crying. Something must have happened during that time of sleep, but I don’t remember anything….”

“It must mean he did something.”

“Even when I came to my senses, it was so awkward. It felt like I had just woken up from a deep sleep, but the situation was really weird. The person covered my eyes and then took them off… and asked me why I was crying.”

'Why are you crying?'

“I answered that I didn’t know.”

I really couldn't remember anything.

“If it weren’t for the discomfort I felt at the time, I would have thought I was sleepwalking. I was holding the teacher by the collar. I was like a dog… I wanted to ask more questions, but the other person just turned back to the portrait.”

“Still, the portrait artist is kinder than I thought.”

Danhae-ra smiled brightly.

“You are definitely the one responsible for this accident, Jeong Hae-un.”

“I admit I was a bit pushy.”

However, Jeong Hae-un did not go out in a humble manner. This was because he had informed his friends of the dangers of the ‘Portrait of Geo’ before bringing it into his home and had received their consent. To this extent, it was an incident within the scope of the plan.

However, not everything in this situation was as they had thought. The problem with this incident was the speed at which it occurred. Jeong

Hae-woon groaned.

“Ha, shit… This is faster than I imagined.”

“How many days has it been since you brought the portrait into the house?”

“It’s been about three weeks now.”

“After three weeks, Jeong Hae-woon remembered the price of ‘promise’.”

Danhae-ra tapped my lips.

“…I guess that portrait really meant a lot to us?”

Never before has something been returned so quickly in exchange for a promise. This was an exceptional situation. It is a matter of concern that Jeong Hae-woon, who is not an ordinary gardener, has come to this.

She turned her gaze and looked at Cha Eun-hye.

“Does Your Majesty have any comments?”

“Well… Since he is someone who has such great significance, I have nothing else to say.”

“You were the one who opposed Jeong Hae-woon and Hwa-seo’s cohabitation until the very end.”

“I thought it would end up like this anyway, given how things had turned out.”

Cha Eun-hye let out a sigh of relief and smiled bitterly.

“I asked that person to please refrain from doing so, and I thought that maybe it would be okay since Jeong Hae-woon would focus on building new trust rather than the past. But it wasn't the case. It's really absurd."

"In other words, it seems that even though both of them exercised self-restraint, they still recalled the memory of the 'promise'."

Seo Seo-hee nodded as if she understood.

"Isn't it true that the compatibility between you and Jeong Hae-woon was really good?"

"There is no way a garden and a gardener can go together."

Jeong Hae-un also agreed with that opinion.

"Since both me and the teacher are close to mystery, the 'promise' could have been easily shaken. Since it happened during the few hours I was asleep, it must have been a dream. It must have been a dream about the price paid for the 'promise'."

"It is also the most reasonable means."

"…Is it better to keep our distance again?"

Jeong Hae-woon's face distorted slightly as he said that.

"But if that's the case, I can't trust 'Portrait of Geo'. The mystery of the human ego has too many variables. I couldn't leave it alone without any trustworthy corners."

"I understand your position, Jeong Hae-un."

Dan Hae-ra spoke comfortingly.

"You are doing your best as a gardener protecting the Earth. We all know that. It's not like you agreed to cohabitation with the portrait without knowing the risks involved. So don't blame yourself too much."

Then she gently cupped my cheek with her hand.

“But this incident has definitely made me realize that I need to be careful. It seems that there is something about that existence that stimulates a nostalgia that we have forgotten. It may be that the hole in the ‘promise’ was too big to ignore, and the system was unable to block it in the end.”

“It would have been better if I had remembered something… I’m sorry, I can’t remember anything. Something must have happened that morning, but my memory is completely blank, like someone who just woke up from a deep sleep.”

“There’s nothing we can do about it now that it’s come to this.”

Danhae blinked his eyes twice.

“First… shall we try to decide on a policy?”

“It’s a policy, that’s good. That’s good, but what exactly is the policy?”

“The idea was to discuss the direction we should take going forward.”

“The direction to go forward….”

“How to deal with that being.”

They couldn't just leave it like this. Even though the situation was quickly resolved, they couldn't leave this kind of risk unattended forever. They needed a firm policy.

“This situation is very simple.”

Danhae-ra snapped her fingers.

“If you return to the past, you lose the system, and if you maintain the system, you lose the past. We have always thought that we should choose the latter, but… we have realized through this incident that that may not actually be the case.”

It was their downfall. They had lost their memories and did not know how much 'Sergio' meant to them. His influence on their bodies and souls still remains and gives strength to everything they do.

“We were arrogant. We thought that since it was a thing of the past, it wouldn’t have any influence in the future. But this time, Guild Leader Jeong Hae-woon confirmed that wasn’t the case?”

“So, we… need to take that into consideration and decide on our course of action going forward.”

Seo Seo-hee nodded in agreement.

“Hara is right. I know that simply ignoring it won’t work, so I need to change my behavior. Otherwise, I’ll just end up suffering losses without any preparation.”

“Hmm, then….”

Danhae-ra tilted her head.

“It seems difficult to kill the portrait, so how about just sealing it?”

There was silence for a moment.

“…….”

“Oh my, it’s gotten quiet.”

“…You’re really, man, you’re really….”

“I admit that I spoke thoughtlessly and inconsiderately to you.”

“I know what you’re thinking when you say that, but….”

Jeong Hae-woon's face became pale. Seo Seo-hee was also smiling awkwardly, and when she went to Cha Eun-hye, her face looked like she was about to cry. She looked shocked as she looked at Dan Hae-ra, as if she really was about to cry.

“Ah, ah, no, that’s too much. That doesn’t seem right. Uh, she’s my teacher…! Hey, seriously, how could you do this to me…!”

“Calm down, Eunhye. I didn’t say that without thinking, so you guys shouldn’t make that face either.”

Danhae calmly patted her friend.

“I know it’s an extreme response. But it was something that had to come up in this meeting at some point, wasn’t it? If I had to choose between the teacher and the system, I would go with the system.”

“I know what you’re saying, and I agree with it. But I really don’t think I could do something like that. It’s beyond whether it’s even possible in the first place, just… ha….”

Cha Eun-hye tried hard to suppress her crying voice. She couldn't become the president of a country and get lost in her emotions. She had to realistically assess the situation and say no to things that weren't true.

“…First of all, sealing it will be impossible.”

“Eunhye, if that’s what you’re saying, then it must be like that.”

Dan Hae-ra nodded obediently. Among them, the one who knew the most about the 'system', 'teacher', and 'past' was Cha Eun-hye. If she said no, then it was right.

“So what do you think we should do about this situation?”

“…….”

Eunhye Cha, who had been hesitating, opened her mouth.

“…Anyway, ‘Geo’s Portrait’ left Haeun’s house and went back to being a portrait. In many ways, it seems like now is the chance. I should talk to the teacher before another system error occurs.”

“Oh, can you do that?”

“He must have had some kind of thought behind his actions, but I don’t know exactly what he was thinking. He wasn’t the type of person to tell his students everything either….”

“Are you sure that the portrait was intentional in causing this incident?”

“At least you wouldn’t have known.”

Eunhye Cha wiped the corner of her mouth as she sighed.

“It’s always been like that before.”

He always knew what the results of his actions and the processes he saw would bring. He was a person who knew the end, even if his intentions were small, and went with the flow. This time, it must have been a similar situation.

'Of course it might not be the case… .'

So, a conversation was needed.

“…….”

I felt a little sad.

I don't know why I feel so anxious and scared.

* * *

“…….”

“So, I would like you to tell me what you are thinking.”

“…You know, teacher, I have no thoughts.”

“Now I’m not a good student who would fall for such lies.”

“You have this little faith in me.”

Geo's heart ached at the sight of Cha Eun-hye's stern gaze.

“It’s sad.”

It's true that I really didn't think much of it, but I felt like I'd get grabbed by the collar if I said that.

'What should I say so that I don't get in trouble?'

It was one night when my worries were deepening.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (324)

324

Episode 324

Let me make an excuse.

“…I’m not perfect.”

It was like that in many ways.

This is obvious. Where in the world is there anything perfect? Geo was the same. Contrary to what my students thought, he was very sloppy. He had no thoughts, his worries were short, and he made many mistakes. Aside from liking good people, he was not particularly good.

And that wasn't all.

“I try not to change, but I can’t always do that.”

It is said that humans are adaptive creatures. Adaptation means change. Geo was the same. Above all, he was receiving help from many 'Geos'. There were also many loopholes and twisted parts.

In particular, 'George', who was my helper this time, was a really great friend.

“So what I’m trying to say is….”

“…….”

“I’m just an ordinary person.”

At that, Cha Eun-hye let out a hollow laugh.

“Even though it became a portrait?”

“I didn’t know that either, but as you live, you can become a portrait.”

“Everything you do, teacher, is always connected to a greater purpose.”

“Even if it wasn’t my intention.”

It was true. He lived as he pleased in every situation that came his way. He made choices he would not regret each time. That was all. There was no grand conspiracy like Cha Eun-hye thought.

But Cha Eun-hye seemed to have a hard time believing Geo’s words.

“…Let’s just move on from that for now.”

“You don’t believe me at all.”

“Jeong Hae-woon recalled part of the memory. How much did you help him with that?”

“Am I the one getting scolded right now?”

“Not really.”

“I don’t remember.”

“Does that have anything to do with our ‘promise’?”

“I’m pretty sure one of my friends was playing a prank.”

The prime suspect was, of course, 'Geo-je'. Geo had not yet fully assimilated with him. The current assimilation rate was said to be ??? %, but no matter how I looked at it, it was nonsense. He was such a terrible prankster.

“What exactly do you want to hear from me?”

“First of all, I’m curious as to why you’re living with Jeong Hae-woon.”

“You’re asking because you know that Donggeo Haeun suggested it first, right?”

“So there must be a reason why the situation led to that point.”

“I can’t live like this, Eunhye….”

What can I do about accepting it without thinking? I racked my brain to avoid getting scolded by the student, but I couldn't come up with a plausible answer. It was truly regrettable.

“The reason you’re interrogating me like this is probably because Haeun-i recalled some of her memories.”

“I don’t know how to bring this up since you forgot, sir. But yes, I guess you had a dream that made you recall the past and caused a temporary system failure before it was restored.”

“I would have done that restoration too?”

“Actually, there’s no one else who can restore the system except you, sir. That would be a difficult task for Hara as well.”

“Oh, I just had a thought about that part.”

Geo pointed to himself.

“Do you have that system?”

“……”

Cha Eun-hye covered my face with both hands.

“You’re not crying, are you, Eunhye?”

“I want to cry….”

“Oh, don’t cry like that.”

“This is what makes me cry, teacher.”

“I see your voice is fine, so you’re not crying yet.”

“Please, shouldn’t you be asking this in a more relaxed setting?”

“I don’t know what the heck this is supposed to be about, to set the mood.”

Geo nodded.

“Somehow it felt strange.”

“In what part?”

“It seemed like my system was the only one that was different from others. It acted as if it had an ego, so I wondered if it was a person or an AI inside it.”

“That alone is not enough.”

“I was also bothered by the fact that the world in the portrait was very much my style. The various plants and animals in it were really to my taste. It’s true that I painted the picture of the cabin, but I’ve never painted the rest….”

“So you guessed that I drew it?”

“Who else but me would have drawn something like this? There were other things too. This system played particularly well with me. I felt a great sense of intimacy with it….”

Anyway, let's summarize.

“I didn’t die in the fire that day, I came out alive, and while spending time with you, I was badly injured, whether I died or not, in an unfortunate accident, and you made me into a system?”

“…….”

“Why are you scared?”

Geo tilted his head at Cha Eun-hye's pale face.

“I’m not angry, but you’re acting like a student who’s about to get scolded.”

“…I thought you would be angry.”

“Do you still think that way after seeing my reaction now?”

“The general flow is as you guessed, teacher, but the details… you don’t know yet. You don’t even remember exactly what happened that day.”

“Did you think something would change if you thought about it?”

“Maybe so.”

Cha Eun-hye let out a small breath and laughed.

“No, of course… I feel a little relieved to see that you don’t show any regrets about using yourself as material to create a system. Well, you’ve always been like that, teacher. You seemed to be indifferent to everything and had fun with life.”

“I’m glad you seem to know my true self so well. Well, even knowing that, why did you worry that I was thinking of something great? I don’t quite understand, sir.”

“No matter how much I think about it, that and this seem to be somewhat separate….”

Cha Eun-hye smiled awkwardly and looked up at Geo.

“Actually, it’s a problem even if the teacher doesn’t get angry.”

“If you think about it, is there a problem?”

“Yes, we were also confused when we created the ‘system’ that day.”

“Um… Well, I promise I won’t be angry.”

“…That’s fortunate.”

Even as she said that, Cha Eun-hye was not at ease. Anger and disappointment could be completely separate issues. Her teacher might be disappointed in us.

But that was expected from the beginning. Now, it couldn't stop Cha Eun-hye. She took a deep breath for a moment. She didn't know that she would end up talking about this in this way.

“…Let’s get back to the main topic.”

“Oh, I see you’re beating around the bush.”

“I’m not swayed by that anymore. I may have acted like a child up until now, but it would be a problem if you thought that nothing had really changed from before.”

“Your Excellency the President, how foolish would that be?”

“It’s a little creepy when you say that, teacher.”

“But there’s really not much I can say….”

Isn't it something that can't be lied to because the truth is so pitiful? Geo thought deeply. If things continued like this, their conversation would continue until the promise of eternity ended and they were left alone.

“Did you ask my purpose?”

The purpose is.

“…Improving the welfare of gardeners and hunters?”

“…What else?”

“Filling the romanticism by running a street food stall?”

"and?"

“Hmm, well.”

Geo's eyes naturally turned into colorful colors.

“Eradicating game addiction?”

“…….”

“Eunhye?”

“…Just wait a minute, teacher.”

Cha Eun-hye put on her sunglasses one by one.

“Ready, let’s continue.”

“Are you dazzled by how handsome I am?”

“I just realized that if a person is too handsome, it can physically hurt your eyes. I wondered why there were so many stories about food stall owners not being able to remember faces, and now I see there’s a reason for that.”

“The reaction is too much, it’s so overwhelming, it hurts my heart….”

“I told you my eyes hurt?”

His appearance wasn't much different from Sergio's. So, this dizzying voice and brain-melting appearance were all part of this pink portrait. Fortunately, Cha Eun-hye had several artifacts that prevented 'charm'.

George asked him.

“Is that really necessary?”

“I’m saying this because I feel like if I don’t cover it up like this, I won’t be able to remember what you’re saying. As I said before, I’m ready, so please say it again, teacher.”

“Our Eunhye is so responsive and cute like a squirrel.”

“Oh, sir. I don’t know why you changed into that form, but I hope you can return to the Sergio I know as soon as possible. It’s so unfamiliar to me when you smile like that, and it’s painful.”

“If that’s true, then I will do as Your Majesty says… Hmm.”

Geo tilted his head, scratching his chin.

“Even though it’s like this, I don’t remember anything very well.”

“Oh, something… Was that what it looked like to recall the content of Jeong Hae-woon’s dream?”

“It’s hard to call Mr. George ‘Portrait of Geo’ unless he’s completely assimilated. So if he’s going to plot and scheme, it’s all because of this pink hair, so don’t hate me too much… Do you understand?”

“After all, they are all my teachers, so what do you want me to do…?”

“As expected, our Eunhye has great insight that sees through the essence of the situation. This teacher is very happy about your growth. When did you grow up so wonderfully?”

"except."

“It’s strange how everyone becomes more attracted to me when I look like this.”

Geo shrugged.

“I’m sorry, but I can’t remember anything well even with this appearance, like I said before.”

“What were you talking about earlier, about being a game addict or something?”

“Oh, that? That seems to be….”

After thinking for a moment, George continued speaking.

“I was worried that people were becoming too dependent on the system.”

George thought it was really boring and uninteresting.

“No matter how helpful the textbook is, it’s really stupid and pathetic to rely on it alone… I didn’t want the people in my hometown to become that stupid.”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hye patted my arm.

“…What? Why did that old man from Bisabal come to mind?”

“Ahaha, because you’re my father? I guess blood is thicker than water.”

“Don’t tease me, teacher. I wonder how sad our father in heaven would be.”

“Wouldn’t you accept this much?”

“Please, don’t joke around. Is that what you’re aiming for?”

Cha Eun-hye, who had been hesitating, asked back.

“Deleting the system?”

“It’s natural for children to ride quad bikes. Not everyone can be good at it from the beginning. I know that.”

“But?”

“It’s just my personal desire to see adults riding two-wheeled bicycles.”

Then he blushed as if in ecstasy.

“If I could ask for more, I would like to see you ride a unicycle.”

“What the heck is that….”

“I thought that 30 years would be enough time to become independent. Don’t you think so, Eunhye? Don’t you think the system in this world is too overprotective?”

“No, there has to be a system.”

“Of course, it would be too much to expect people who have only ridden four-wheeled bicycles to ride two-wheeled bicycles overnight. I’m not that cold-blooded….”

“Or what?”

“It’s too much, why is everyone so harsh on me?”

George, whose eyes were filled with sorrow as if he had been hurt, soon smiled like a crescent moon.

“Just, that’s how it is. In my opinion.”

“…You can’t take the system away from the hunters.”

“Why can’t it be done like that? Have you ever thought, why can’t it be done?”

"but…."

“No, I just pretended not to know.”

George tilted his head. And soon, an unfamiliar gaze and expression came to him. At that moment, Cha Eun-hye suddenly felt a sense of discomfort. She didn’t know when it started, but she instinctively felt that the person in front of her was no longer the teacher she knew.

The enchanting jewel eyes curved gently as if they knew it all.

“Why would that be?”

He hit the nail on the head.

“Your teacher was more important to you than the fate of the Earth.”

"what…."

“No matter what path your teacher takes, what form he takes, or how he is doing, it would have been more important for him to remain by your side.”

“…No, I….”

“Ah, you are so greedy… You held onto someone who could have left peacefully and turned him into neither a human nor a monster. You made his form into an illusion so that no one would notice your teacher’s existence. Is he human now? Does he still look like he used to? How much has he changed?”

"…I am…."

“Can you imagine how lonely it would be? Well, I’m not ‘Geo’ yet, so I don’t know. But it would be really sad. To have to live as an illusion where no one would notice me….”

Absolutely cruel words.

“…….”

“It’s cruel, isn’t it?”

A smile that so easily manipulates the young and weak.

Cha Eun-hye was certain of this. This being was not her teacher. She knew that the 'Portrait of Geo' had many forms, but at least it wasn't this one. It was a being completely different from the previous ones.

It was full of love, but it was pure malice.

"…you…."

It was something that was using my teacher's body.

“…Give me back my teacher.”

“Oh my, now I’m being treated like a villain… How sad.”

“How did such an evil bastard come to be…!”

“An evil spirit, sir. It breaks my heart so much.”

“No one can erase the system!!”

That won't work either.

“He’s my teacher…!!”

“Your teacher is here.”

“You said you’d always be here…!”

“That’s why I’m by your side now.”

“Why, why are you trying to take that away from us? Am I not allowed to covet even this?”

“Oh, poor thing, my cowardly friends.”

“…No, don’t do that….”

Now this is all that remains.

“…This is my last teacher.”

A translucent system window that you can't talk to, find, or see the status of. That's all there was to it. That's why 'Geo's Portrait' was an unexpected miracle.

But just as it appeared suddenly, this portrait could disappear at any moment. It could be something imitating my teacher, or it could be me. So in the end, the only thing that remained was the system.

“…….”

“Oh my, now I’m really crying.”

“…Give me back my teacher.”

“If this is how it is, I will get in trouble with Master Sergio. Giovanni and Arzio will blame me too. There is a limit to how much I can pull on my black friend and make him forget the present.”

“Take the blame.”

“I don’t think I said anything wrong, but, uh… this is unfair.”

He sat down next to Cha Eun-hye and hugged her. He leaned in gently and patted her slowly with his thin, delicate hands. It was as light as the fluttering of a butterfly’s wings, but the lack of body heat was creepy.

George leaned his head on Cha Eun-hye's shoulder and smiled. It was like a young animal acting cute, but it was more skillful and calculated. It was also provocative.

The essence of this is 'love'.

"Will you help me not get in trouble?"

"…no, I do not want."

"Then shall I make a prophecy?"

"don't do it."

"Your teacher will not leave you."

He whispered.

"He's always here."

"……."

"Because you broke it and tied it up, right? That's really too much…."

It was a terrible thing to say because it was reassuring.

"You stuffed him."

* * *

"……."

"…Uni?"

"teacher."

"huh?"

“It’s always black.”

“It’s not something I can control.”

“You are our teacher.”

“Of course.”

“…Because you’re always here?”

“I will always be by your side.”

“…Are you going to get angry?”

“You promised not to do that.”

“You can scold me.”

"suddenly?"

“Instead, don’t leave.”

“It’s so sudden.”

“Don’t abandon us….”

“…….”

Sergio asked.

“…Did I say something bad?”

"…no."

It seemed like it probably wasn't.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (325)

325

Episode 325

The system disappears.

It was a terrible thing, obviously. How did they protect themselves from all the disasters that were coming to Earth? It was because of that system. Otherwise, the Hunters wouldn't be Hunters.

“…….”

But Cha Eun-hye’s fear wasn’t like that.

‘…That makes sense.’

That's what 'George' said.

For Cha Eun-hye, her teacher was more important than the fate of the Earth. The 'Promise of Eternity' was certainly for the sake of the Earth, but in the end, it was also a decision to preserve her teacher.

Of course, it's not that she didn't have a sense of mission to protect the Earth. Cha Eun-hye herself felt a little pride. Because her desire to protect this country and the world wasn't a lie. But... .

'Was that really true?'

Sitting alone in a bedroom full of mirrors, Cha Eun-hye thought.

'Do I really deserve that kind of pride? Did I ever have that in the first place?'

Greed, greed, everything was greed.

“This is driving me crazy….”

Her teacher was truly special. So special that if he died like that, it would affect the future of the Earth. That's why the 'Eternal Promise' had to go through for anything.

But the most fundamental reason was the students' stubbornness. At least, their stubbornness that they could not send the teacher away in this way. Obsession. Force. Also, the teacher did not have any opinion on the choice.

'You weren't in a position to say anything in the first place.'

Those were the last words they heard from their teacher. Those were the words, 'I will always be here.' Those affectionate words that promised to stay by their side and never abandon them, no matter what happened.

But to that kind of person, we… .

"…ha…."

They are bad students.

'If you recall the memories, the teacher won't look at us so kindly either.'

They could have made excuses all they wanted. But it meant nothing. They had done more than make the teacher hate them, they had made a system out of him. They had stuffed a person.

'Are there any people to whom the word 'ungrateful' fits so well?'

And then forgetting even the memories of that day. Even though there was a price to pay, it was actually an escape. At least, that was what Cha Eun-hye, who was the only one who remembered everything, thought. Everyone must have been scared.

That is why, sadly, Cha Eun-hye could not refute George's words. They did such a foolish and cruel thing. They erased my teacher from the world and were called heroes as if they were upright people.

'If the teacher hadn't been like that that day, he would have been here... Why am I, why are we here? What on earth is so great about it? What did we do well?'

I reproached myself again. My brain, which had been blank for the past few years, was filled with guilt. It was different from when I had just smiled with a sense of duty, responsibility, and a little pride. It was as if I had gone back to before I became president.

“…….”

Should I just listen to him?

'According to George, there may be no system in this world.'

That might be right. It would be to free their teacher, who was stuffed in the greatest but most miserable form. What if they just let him go without further insulting him?

But no matter how many times I thought about it, the answer was the same.

"…no."

A system was still needed.

* * *

"i think so too."

Danhae nodded.

“I thought the system might disappear someday, but it’s too early now.”

“…Is that so?”

After trying to organize her thoughts, Eunhye Cha visited the association and smiled awkwardly.

'If this is obvious, then it is an obvious answer.'

How could they not have known that the system was not permanent, even the seemingly perfect teacher had been ruined like that? There was nothing permanent in the world, especially if it was made by their own hands.

That's why I dreamed of a distant future for centuries. I lived each day for the day when the system would no longer be needed. For the future so far away that they themselves would no longer feel like humans.

Dan Hae-ra said, knowing the thought.

“Of course, Eunhye, as you know, we have been preparing for a future without a system.”

“…Yeah, that’s right. That’s right.”

“But now is not the time.”

It's been just 32 years since the catastrophe.

“People have just barely gotten used to the terrible mystery that has engulfed the world. If you go to the provinces, there are even more people who can’t do that. And if the system disappears now… isn’t that too cruel?”

Dan Hae-ra blinked twice after saying that.

“Is 'George', one of the personalities of the Black Cloak, planning that cruel thing?”

“That’s what I understand. It seems like his motive is primarily for his own interest. He talks about love and romance all the time, but I don’t really understand.”

“It’s a bit tricky, since if you have a similar disposition to the Collector, it seems like it could be quite harmful. Especially since Mr. George doesn’t seem to be the type to keep a straight line like the Collector.”

“The essential parts seemed a little different, but… well, to others, it’s probably the same.”

Cha Eun-hye thought of the pink-haired man she had seen. He was a very colorful man, despite his overall pale appearance. His soft, slow whispering voice sounded like a devil in angelic disguise.

“…I think it would be safe to say that it was really just for fun.”

“And that Mr. George is almost a separate entity from the Black Cloak?”

“One thing is for sure, he is not a teacher.”

Pure malice hidden behind a veil of seemingly affectionate voice.

“What should I say….”

Eunhye Cha, who had been thinking for a while, came to a difficult conclusion.

“…are you possessed by an evil spirit?”

“There are many cases where evil spirits possessed the bodies of people and carried out all sorts of evil deeds. Can we consider Mr. George, whom you mentioned, as one such case, Eunhye?”

“For now, yes.”

“Hmm, for now?”

“Because I don’t know what the future holds.”

You shouldn't judge hastily.

“You know the case of ‘Argio’ before. At that time, he seemed to have tried to colonize the Earth with the authority of the evil god. But in the end, he taught the world ‘anger’ and then went quiet.”

“That could be the case. There is also the possibility that he is intentionally trying to induce something through us by provoking our hostility. But you don’t look so happy when you say that, do you?”

“No matter how good his intentions may be, George is a bit… annoying.”

Cha Eun-hye didn't do anything good, but George was a bit like trash in many ways. He seemed like someone who would whisper sweet nothings to people and charm them, then play around with them until he was done with them and then leisurely walk away.

“…like a womanizer.”

“You’re cute.”

“In which part…?”

“Because you say cute things that don’t match your expression.”

“No, but I couldn’t find a more appropriate word….”

“Haewoon said that his true nature is ‘love.’”

“I also know how foolish it is to judge the personality of a mystery.”

Still, that's it.

“But really, um, it’s like trash.”

“That’s too bad.”

“I thought he would gaslight me while smiling sweetly….”

Of course, George wasn't gaslighting her. It was obvious what he had whispered to Cha Eun-hye the night before. He just seemed like a bad guy because he was so annoying.

Cha Eun-hye tried hard to erase her feelings. It was certainly petty to look down on someone because they had been subjected to factual violence.

“Anyway, Black Cloak and George are separate entities. I think we need to call in Curator Yoo Seong-un, who is in charge of ‘Portrait of Geo’, to confirm this, but it seems that Black Cloak himself is not able to completely control George.”

“I’ll contact the collector about that.”

“Just contact me, I want to have a separate conversation with Curator Yoo Seong-un….”

“Okay, I understand.”

Dan Hae-ra, who had been taking notes with her mind powers, saw Cha Eun-hye.

“Is it just a prank that George wants to destroy the system, then?”

“Maybe that kind of prank is one of his loves.”

“Love… A considerable romantic has appeared, things are going interestingly.”

“It wouldn’t be very fun if you saw him in person.”

He was a strangely unsettling presence, like honey stuck to your hand. Cha Eun-hye frowned as she recalled that splendid impression for a moment, then crossed her arms and continued speaking.

“He wants to destroy the system on Earth. When you listen to him speak, it doesn’t sound very serious, but then again, he’s an unknowable being.”

“I trust your judgment. If that’s what you think, then it must be so.”

“George used the metaphor of a four-wheeled bicycle. He said it was sad that adults, even though they are old, still can’t ride a two-wheeled bicycle. So I think his goal is to help people maintain their daily lives without a system.”

“Just hearing this now, it seems like a very sound goal.”

“And through that means and process, they are trying to tamper with our promise. In order to remove the system, the ‘Eternal Promise’ must be invalidated. I think that’s why you cohabitated with Jeong Hae-woon.”

“If what you’re saying is true, then things were going more meticulously than I thought… It’s not that I didn’t expect it, but it’s surprising. It’s on a larger scale than I imagined.”

Danhae-ra laughed.

“But still, this world needs a system. If possible, I want it to last a very long time. I don’t want to go back to those days when we were so miserable and miserable because there was no system.”

“…….”

“You remember too, don’t you?”

“…Remember.”

“The Earthlings who were struggling and drowning under the weight of the mystery that suddenly came upon them… I have no intention of seeing that sight again. In that sense, the system was a really good teacher.”

It wasn't like people with superpowers would become civilians if there was no system. But in that case, their abilities would be so miserable that they couldn't even be called 'abilities'. Danhae rolled his eyes as if he was recalling his past.

“Back then, superpowers were, well… closer to curses, weren’t they?”

Curse, or divine punishment.

“It wasn’t terrible either way, was it?”

“I hope that day never comes again.”

“I’m so glad that our opinions were heard.”

Dan Hae-ra smiled like a doll.

“I think Haeun and Seohee have slightly different thoughts.”

“…I feel like something is off with the current situation.”

“We can’t have the same opinions forever.”

“Well, there were a lot of fights in the past too. It’s just that things have quieted down recently.”

“Well, we have such strong personalities….”

“Friends fight and stuff. I understand that.”

Cha Eun-hye leaned back on the sofa.

“But I hope there are no sacrifices in the process.”

For example, our teacher.

'Once is enough.'

Cha Eun-hye hoped they wouldn't become too horrible.

* * *

“…So, what do I think?”

"uh."

“Don’t you think that’s a bit of a sudden question?”

“I won’t do it.”

“This is really absurd.”

Seo Seo-hee’s expression hardened a little at the sudden question from Jeong Hae-woon. He rolled his eyes for a moment, then let out a small sigh and sent the guild leader away with a shaky expression. It seemed like they should keep the conversation between themselves.

Seo Seo-hee wiped her chin in the living room where only the two of them were left.

“Should I be completely honest with you?”

"okay."

“It’s half and half, for me.”

“You quiet brat.”

“But I can’t help it.”

Seo Seo-hee made a troubled expression.

“I definitely want to recall my memories. I want to remember what I did wrong and what kind of person that person was. It's so uncomfortable right now."

"and?"

"But that's not enough. I hear hundreds and thousands of reports every day. The world is still in chaos. For those who have barely adapted to dungeons and monsters, the lack of a system is too… harsh."

"Here's what I'm talking about."

Jeong Hae-woon asked with a frown. While the portrait was quiet, he went back to the abandoned school and came back after realizing something very important. Still, thanks to living with the portrait, he was able to regain some composure.

Jeong Hae-woon, who tried hard to regain his composure, told Seo Seo-hee what he had realized.

"What if that system was made by 'Sergio the Sergio'?"

"…Fuck."

"It's been a long time since I've seen you swear."

"…Fuck, so…."

"I can say this with certainty, the system is a sacrifice of the cow for the greater good."

"……."

"I ask again."

Jeong Hae-woon asked again in an emotionless tone.

"What do you think?"

"…A world without a system?"

“No, teacher.”

“I don’t know….”

"so do i."

Soon, Jeong Hae-woon wiped his face with a sigh.

“This was really messed up from the start.”

It was crazy and exhilarating.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (326)

326

Episode 326

Yoo Seong-un went to find Geo.

“Geo, I’m so tired.”

“Oh, what’s going on?”

“I was called to the President’s Office.”

No matter how much Bisabal tried to protect his children, there was a limit. In the end, Bisabal offered Yoo Seong-un as a sacrifice in front of the symbol of eternity with a hazy face, and Yoo Seong-un obediently became a sacrifice and returned after meeting the president.

And then I knocked on the door of ‘Portrait of Geo’.

“Is there anything you want to say to me?”

“Oh, like that.”

“…….”

“…….”

Geo, who was silent for a moment, pointed to the table.

“Would you like a bowl of kimchi stew?”

“Do you have rice too? Just one more seat for me, please, my friend.”

“Don't worry.”

It was a peaceful cabin today too.

* * *

After finishing his meal, Yoo Seong-un said as he always did.

“Let’s open our own restaurant.”

Geo shook his head at that.

“I already have a food stall….”

“That’s usually done in someone else’s garden, or a high-level dungeon.”

“It does have the disadvantage of being difficult to access.”

“In that sense, how about creating a restaurant on Earth?”

This delicious food is not something that Yoo Seong-un can eat often. In fact, from a human-wide perspective, it is universally true. However, Yoo Seong-un's reason had long since been destroyed. It was because it was solid, warm, and the food was delicious.

Geo, who had been thinking for a moment, shook his head again.

“You seem to be talking nonsense because you are very tired. I can see that you will regret it in the future, so I will block you in advance. Excuse me, but I will decline, Mr. Yoo Seong-woon.”

“I really like how resolute you are….”

Yoo Seong-un asked, looking at the empty bowl with not a single grain of rice left.

“So you were so firm with the President?”

“Actually, I have a lot to say about that part.”

“I will listen to you as if we were friends.”

“Thank you. I should tell you in advance that Mr. George is quite a prankster.”

“Hoo, I wonder if it’s okay to use a cute word like ‘naughty’?”

“I think I said something bad to my student’s mind and body.”

Geo also felt creepy when he recalled that day.

“When I came to my senses, I was making my student cry.”

“Oh, yeah… It rang… I see….”

“I had no intention of doing that, so it was quite embarrassing.”

“Anyway, it was a shock to you too, right? That George who made the President nervous.”

“I don’t think it was a shock. I already knew from our previous tag games that he was a mischievous boy who wouldn’t listen to me.”

“Hmm….”

“I can’t even fathom how old the fairy tale is.”

Even the assimilation rate was displayed as ???%. It could have been almost completely assimilated, or it could have been a fairly low number. Geo was a little confused, as this was his first time seeing this type of fit.

Yoo Seong-un, who roughly understood the situation, smiled a little awkwardly.

“His Majesty said that you seemed to be possessed by an evil spirit. I guess it is indeed a similar situation.”

“It’s sad… No matter what, isn’t the evil spirit too much?”

“Oh, that’s surprising.”

“Oh, I’m sorry, I just had a little pain in my heart.”

“Looking at this, it doesn’t seem like they’re not mixed at all.”

Yoo Seong-un rubbed his hazy eyes. It was only about 5 seconds that Geo took on the appearance of George, but the ripple effect was incredible. It was so splendid that it almost brought tears to my eyes.

But for now, it seemed like Geo was controlling 'George'. Yoo Seong-un's expression became a little ambiguous. After thinking for a moment, Yoo Seong-un asked.

“…How does the fairy tale you speak of come true?”

“I think the first priority is to contact the person who is suitable for me to assimilate. In this case, the person who is selected as suitable has agreed to assimilation from the beginning, so there is little room for conflict.”

“If you say there is almost none, does that mean there might be some?”

“In the case of Mr. ‘George’, he accepted, but he played a very long game of tag with me and wasted time. In the end, I won and am currently in the process of assimilating, but this shows that the right person can exercise a trick, even if he does not have the right to veto.”

“But even that fairy tale doesn’t seem to be as smooth as before.”

“Yes, that’s right.”

Geo admitted it without hesitation.

“So, it would be easier to think of it as a state of dual personality until it is completely assimilated.”

“You have a split personality.”

“It’s not a perfect metaphor, but it was the easiest word to describe my state of being in a fairy tale. That’s why I was able to erase the sense of dissonance of my portrait through them.”

“And then when the fairy tale is complete, it becomes a complete portrait again?”

“In that case, people were strangely afraid of me. It is a well-established fact that one must constantly try to assimilate in order to live comfortably in society….”

“This time, Mr. George was different in many ways.”

Geo blinked at Yoo Seong-un's muttering.

“Still, it is true that it has helped me a lot in overcoming my sense of discomfort.”

“Even though Mr. George doesn’t seem like a very ordinary person.”

“…No, that’s enough to fall into the category of a normal person.”

“…Is this your broad standard reflected in your thoughts again?”

“It’s not very portrait-like, except that it flashes like a peacock.”

“Hmm, I hadn’t thought about that part.”

It certainly could have been. The other humans, including Yoo Seong-un, couldn't help but focus on George's extraordinary appearance. There are countless cases of people being blinded by what they see and not seeing the essence.

Yoo Seong-un's eyebrows furrowed slightly as he thought that.

“But even considering that, aren’t you acting like a little too much of an ordinary person, George?”

“…when I look like that, I tend to get strangely excited.”

“So you’re acting so garden-like? Why do you keep forgetting about the shadows? When did you get that sense of weight? And what about that honey-like scent that you only get from a flower garden?”

“I think that part is also affected by the excitement.”

“I really don’t know what effect that has.”

"hmm…."

Geo, who had been thinking for a while, explained the state of his appearance when he changed.

“I wonder, ‘Do I really have to go that far?’”

“Does this sound a bit dangerous to me?”

“I don’t think it’s that dangerous.”

“I guess it’s not for nothing that they say it looks like you’re possessed by an evil spirit.”

Yoo Seong-un felt a little sad. He smiled sadly and gently stroked his forehead with his hand.

“Well, yes, I knew this day would come someday. I’m a professional curator, so I have to prepare for all possible scenarios. Yes, that’s true… that’s true, but Geo….”

“Is there any problem?”

“I don’t know why my heart hurts so much.”

“I really don’t know what part is hurting you.”

“Joohyun said, ‘It seems like the gentle youngest has fallen into bad waters.’ When I first heard that, I thought, ‘This guy is really a tough guy… Ha…’

“Are you crying?”

“I feel like crying.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been sweeping his face away, looked at Geo again.

“The ‘Geos’ up until now have been really nice people. In the case of you and Mr. Giovanni, you are the type of people who don’t harbor any ill will from the start, and Mr. Argio doesn’t seem to have any ill will at all.”

Argio's malice was a love that regarded small things as special. That is why he wanted to teach the Earth the lesson of 'anger', so although it took the form of malice, its essence was a lesson.

But this time, 'George' was a little different.

“Unlike the people before, Mr. George is a bit….”

“You seem like a person who enjoys life a lot.”

“Sadly, that seems to be the case, I don’t know why it reminded me of our guild leader.”

“I don’t think you don’t know, but I understand that you don’t want to know.”

“I really appreciate your understanding, but I feel a little sad inside.”

Yoo Seong-un's smile distorted vaguely.

“Our guild leader is a little better, because he doesn’t cross the line. But I’m worried because Mr. George doesn’t seem to have any of that. I’m a weak human being.”

“I am weak too.”

“Have you thrown away your conscience along with Mr. George’s fairy tales?”

“How could you say such sad words?”

“It’s strange that even though it’s Sergio, I can see George reflected in it.”

“And the leader of the Visabal Guild isn’t exactly safe either. From what I’ve seen, he’s not keeping the line, but rather someone who hasn’t ‘yet’ crossed it.”

“You are tearing at my heart.”

That wasn't a wrong statement.

“That’s why I’m even more anxious. I’m worried that one day, George and the guild leader will join hands and go off to cause an accident. It doesn’t seem like they’ve made any real contact yet, but I don’t think it would be strange if something happened tomorrow….”

“I can see how much you think of me and my father as troublemakers.”

“Do you think you can describe him as a bundle of troublemakers? You may not believe it, but our guild leader has held back a lot from what he wanted to do until now. Our guild members think that once he explodes, you never know how far it will explode.”

“Do you really think it would go that far?”

“Can I take this as a half-prophecy?”

“No way.”

Geo smiled faintly. Yoo Seong-un felt a slight sense of discomfort at that sight. Or perhaps it was a sense of novelty. Compared to when they first met, the expressions in ‘Geo’s Portrait’ had definitely become more diverse.

This was probably the influence of the 'Geo' that I had assimilated so far. I hope that it doesn't go as far as Mr. George's dopamine addiction.

'I'm still worried.'

Geo continued to speak, not knowing whether he knew Yoo Seong-un's thoughts or not.

“I also don’t think that Mr. George is a very quiet and careful model student. There are some aspects that he and I don’t get along well. But that was the case with Mr. Argio as well.”

"…yes?"

“I will not deny that Mr. George is capable of malice. But what is the point of comparing his former malice with his present malice?”

He said that Argio's malice and George's malice could not be distinguished. He said that it could not be, and that there was no reason for it to be. Yoo Seong-un listened quietly to what his portrait said.

“And above all, I am an ordinary person.”

Geo still had a faint but soft smile on his face.

“And humans are creatures capable of harboring evil intentions at any time.”

“…Do you harbor ill intentions too?”

“I’m not the kind of person who can’t feel anger and sadness, although I can understand a lot of situations. If someone were to kill my family and kneel before me, telling me why he had to do it, I wouldn’t hate him.”

"that…."

“Would you say that it is not malicious? That feeling of wanting the person who hurt my precious person to be as unhappy as possible, wanting them to suffer more than they deserve, wanting them to spend their whole lives in pain and then die a meaningless death?”

“…That’s not it.”

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“Is this by any chance a personal experience?”

“I will give you an analogy to make it easier to understand.”

“Aha, really?”

“In other words, I am a human being.”

"humdrum."

“Yes, it can be evil at any time.”

Geo rolled his eyes and smiled.

“Don’t think I’m perfect.”

"…then?"

“You might regret it.”

“I have to be careful.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded slowly.

Now, this portrait was kindly warning him. Even if it was the Eye of Origin that covered his personality, it contained many variables. He should not be proud that he knew everything about him.

“So then, ‘George’ would also be you?”

"hmm…."

Geo, who had smiled at him, answered after thinking about it.

“Not yet.”

“Yeah, not yet?”

“There needs to be a little more coordination between me and Mr. George.”

“Like Mr. Argio’s time?”

“But he’s such a playful person, so the progress isn’t that fast.”

As he said that, Geo swept up the honey that had spilled on the table and put it in a glass bottle. After finishing the meal, he seemed to be feeling sleepy. Geo put the honey that was well-packed in the glass bottle in his arms.

And then he said.

“Won’t it work out somehow?”

“Well, that’s true.”

“I’ll try to live honestly for once.”

It was a truly strong commitment.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (327)

327

Episode 327

While Geo and Yoo Seong-un were talking in the cabin.

“I heard you called me, Master of the Visabal Guild.”

Joo-Hyeon was in the office of the vice minister.

“It seems like it’s been a long time since I’ve seen you.”

“Haha, there are people in this world whose relationship with you grows stronger when you see them sometimes.”

“Haha, I’m touched that the leader of the Visabal Guild cares so much about me.”

"ha ha ha."

“Huh huhu….”

The two of them suddenly stopped laughing as if they had made a promise. What they thought of each other was already written on their faces. Of the two who looked at each other with contempt, disgust, and ambiguous hatred, Bisabul was the first to speak.

“Um, well, would you like to sit down?”

“If you’re being so considerate, I should sit down.”

“We don’t have time to exchange greetings properly, so let me get to the point.”

“It would be really convenient for me if you could do that….”

“What do you think about the sacrifice of a cow for the greater good?”

“…….”

Joohyun's face distorted. It was a sudden remark, but it was hard to think of it as a useless prank since he had been called here. Joohyun, who was always in Eul's position, simply gave the best answer he could.

“…I think it is something that cannot be justified.”

Bisabal smiled broadly at that. It seemed that Juhyun’s short answer was not enough. Bisabal lightly waved his hand, which was covered with many rings, and asked again.

“If you kill one old man who has lived happily for many years in a wealthy environment, you can save the entire planet. But if you don’t, the planet will be destroyed. What will you do?”

“I don’t want to argue that the Earth saved in this way has no value. There is certainly value in the world built on sacrifice. But I can say for sure that it is not noble.”

“I ask you again, what will you do?”

“…I’ll ask the doctor first.”

Joo-hyun didn't think that what he was saying would be the right answer. However, Bisabal still wanted to hear Joo-hyun's decision. In this situation, it was polite to give an answer even if it didn't satisfy the other person.

“If you die, you can save the Earth. What do you think? But if the old man rejects you, I can't sacrifice him. I might hide him from people. And… I'll find a way to replace him."

"But there is no such way. No one can replace him. Time has passed, and now you must make a sacrifice. Or give up the Earth. What will you do?"

"…It's really difficult…."

"Well, time is still passing. Are you just going to watch the Earth being destroyed?"

"…I."

Joohyun answered with a soft smile.

"I will kill that man."

Visabal didn't look surprised.

"I want to hear the reason, Joohyun."

"It may be an excuse, but if that's what you want to hear, I'll tell you. The old man will die anyway. Whether it's because the Earth is destroyed, or by the hands of angry humans, or because he's too old."

"Aha, so it's okay to kill someone since they're going to die anyway?"

"It's not okay at all. But you can calculate it. And there's no right or wrong in the calculation. I was a ruthless researcher, and I've already committed many sins. It would be a choice that's no different from my past."

This time, Joohyun asked.

"What did the old man say last?"

"Well, I don't know. Maybe he was begging to live."

“Then, all the more so, I should have killed him.”

At least that's what Joo-hyun thought. Some might say it was selfish. Of course, they could criticize it. But in a situation where choices were so limited, there weren't many things Joo-hyun could do best.

“If I must sin, let it be mine.”

Even if the sin was to be shared by all the people of the earth, it would be the same. In the end, someone who would commit the greatest sin was needed, and Joo-Hyeon had confidence in himself.

“If I kill that old man like that, I will never forget the feeling at that time. I can remember vividly the old man’s screams, his resentment, his last words. I will remember without fail the day and the time when I killed him, what was in my mind at the time, what was in his mind, and what expression he had on his face as he left this world.”

The visa holder laughed.

“Because you think that’s atonement?”

“No, because it’s something that needs to be done.”

“Are you going to say that your only differentiating factor is your memory?”

“I am confident that I can move forward even after remembering everything like that. I will constantly study to see if I can do better, and if I can turn back time or repay the old man, I will do so. I will be so absorbed in the process that I will not dare to allow myself to die.”

“So I guess I have to remember.”

“…If you forget….”

Joohyun's smile soon crumpled into an ambiguous expression.

“…All those actions are meaningless.”

He smiled and nodded as if he found the visa interesting.

“I listened very carefully to what Mr. Joo-Hyeon said.”

“Personally, I would also like to hear the opinion of the guild leader of Visabal.”

“Huh? Why are you asking such a boring question? I will play with the old man and the world until the very end, and only when the very end comes will I kill the old man by giving him a sleeping pill.”

“It was indeed a very interesting answer.”

“And then you play the hero, disgustingly enough. It helps a lot.”

“I think you are amazing in many ways.”

Joohyun shrugged.

“Then what was the meaning of this dreadful question?”

“I was just wondering what Joohyun would do.”

Even the visa was proud.

“Then I wonder what has changed.”

“…I’m sorry, Guild Leader of the Visabal.”

“Go ahead.”

“By any chance this….”

Joohyun, who had been hesitating, soon asked.

“Was it a story about the hunter I serve?”

“I can’t tell you how thankful I am that you realized it now.”

“Is that Sergio, the old man who lived many years happily in a wealthy environment?”

“Of course, he did not grow up in a wealthy environment, and he was not an old man who lived long enough to be able to say goodbye to the next day. But I thought that was the only way to describe Sergio.”

“I think I heard something I shouldn’t have heard.”

“Mr. Joo-Hyeon, the symbol of eternity has chosen the sacrifice of an ox for the sake of the generation.”

The bastard who said that let out a laugh as if he was quite amused.

“I also chose to sacrifice the cow for the cow.”

“…….”

“Do you understand what I am saying?”

A neat smile appeared on Joo-hyun's face.

“Do you want me to hate the symbol of eternity?”

“No? I just want to see your reaction, I’m not that thoughtful.”

“I think you’ve misunderstood the word thoughtfulness.”

“Their choice seems similar to Joo-Hyeon’s at first glance, but it’s a little different. You chose to remember everything, and they found a way not to remember.”

“Ah,” said Bisabal, as if to say, “I know what you’re going to say.”

“Of course, that may have been the only way back then. The way not to remember. So even if you wanted to remember, you might not have been able to… But no one knows what the truth is.”

“I still don’t know what kind of reaction you expect me to get by saying this.”

“As I said before, I just wanted to see Joo-hyun’s honest reaction. You’re born with such a pitiful personality, yet you still can’t trust people. It’s really sad. Isn’t it?”

He let out a small laugh again.

“The symbols of eternity have become heroes. I like them very much, really very much.”

“…You’re saying something a little different from what I know.”

“I actually hate them. I don’t necessarily criticize them in a typical hypocritical way or anything, I’ve never thought of them that way. They’re actually heroes.”

“But you sacrificed the cow for the sake of the generation?”

Joohyun tilted his head.

“That has been the case before. I believe you have not forgotten that I am from the Association Research Institute. There, countless cows are sacrificed. For the sake of the peace of the distant future.”

“I know that too.”

Bisabal soon smiled and suppressed all his raw emotions. There was something strange about his eyes that were so slanted that his bright yellow eyes were invisible. He seemed not human at all.

“…Um, right. Since you’re here, can I give you a little advice?”

“…I would be happy to hear the advice of a collector renowned for his prophecies.”

“It’s not a prophecy, I’m just saying what I see….”

He continued, trailing off.

“I think the system will break down a bit in the future.”

“It’s broken…? Are you talking about the previous error?”

“It’s a similar context. So, Hyun-ssi, do what you can, I won’t stop you.”

“What can a weak civilian like me do?”

“I know you’ll just quietly think about it after saying that, you’re all like that. This situation will definitely be an opportunity for you.”

“How does the leader of the Visabal Guild know that? Because you have good eyesight?”

“You just heard.”

Soon, a weary gaze is fixed on Joo-Hyeon.

“You told me you were confident you could move forward on your own.”

“…….”

Ju-hyeon, who was reflected in Bisabal’s bright yellow eyes, smiled silently and sincerely as always. That was all he could say in response. Bisabal waved his hand without a smile, not even showing that he knew that would happen.

“…Ah, you’re not fun after all. You should probably get out.”

“I took your advice to heart, thank you.”

Joo-Hyeon bowed his head politely and quickly left his office.

“…….”

I stood in the hallway like that and thought for a moment.

And Joo-Hyeon went straight to ‘Geo’s Portrait’.

* * *

“Mr. Geo.”

“It’s been a while, Joohyun.”

“Because you’ve been doing a lot less outside lately.”

“It seems like the weather is getting a bit colder now that it’s fall….”

As he spoke, Geo was lying on the sofa in a straight posture. Unlike Yoo Seong-un, who would end up like a wet rag every time he laid down on the sofa, his posture was completely upright. Joo-hyun smiled lightly at him.

“Is Mr. Yoo Seong-un in here too?”

“I am drinking flower tea and taking a good night’s sleep upstairs.”

“I told you, you are a very busy person.”

“I wish things were a little less busy.”

“It’s not an easy task….”

After saying that, Joohyun closed his mouth.

“…….”

“It’s the look of someone who has heard bad news.”

“…It wasn’t that bad.”

“Then may I ask why you are making that expression?”

“I don’t think I’m a good person.”

“Me too.”

“I have already committed many sins.”

Juhyun was quite clever, despite always talking about the same old things. He had done unscrupulous things several times. He had thought he had not crossed the line, but that was only Juhyun's own standards.

He knew that too. Nevertheless, Joo-hyun was confident that he would not stop moving forward. That day, when he was about to break down and stop, this evil spirit whispered the future to me. Since I had decided to become his friend, I couldn’t stop even more.

“There will come a day when I can be of help to you.”

“It’s still the same now.”

“I was certain that the day would come when I would repay the favor. Rather than predicting the future or receiving a prophecy, I vaguely but clearly knew it. Because I promised myself that I would never run away as your friend.”

“Thank you for your kind words.”

“…I am such a cunning person.”

Joohyun's smile distorted vaguely.

“…You are the first god to reach out to me….”

Still, because you are my friend.

“Eventually… you will do as you wish.”

“Is that what you want, Joohyun?”

“Maybe so, maybe not. We’ll just have to wait and see.”

Joohyun smiled with her eyes wide open.

“But I can tell you that I will make the choice that pleases you.”

“Why?”

“You are a really good person, aren’t you? I believe that Mr. Geo’s kindness is for the sake of big and small happiness.”

“I hope you make the choice you like, Joohyun. You don’t have to live for me.”

“I expected you to say that.”

“…Am I pitiful?”

Geo smiled faintly while lying down.

"thank you."

“You’re not uncomfortable, are you?”

“I believe that it is also a form of love and friendship towards me.”

“I don’t know, but for some reason I wanted to say sorry.”

“So you came to see me today?”

"sorry."

“I won’t ask why.”

“I don’t know the reason either….”

Joohyun's smile eventually became completely distorted.

“…I just apologize.”

…can I say I pity you?

Unfortunately, Joohyun couldn't ask like that.

* * *

And Geo thought.

'You're talking like a fanatic, pretending not to know anything.'

I don't know for sure, but it seemed serious, so I didn't tackle him.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (328)

328

Episode 328

By the way, 'Geo's portrait' still remains in Jeong Hae-un's house.

“Why, did you want me to go back home? That would be really disappointing….”

“…….”

“Your expression, as if you’ve seen something you shouldn’t have, is so refreshing. Can you show me a closer look?”

"…crazy…."

Jung Hae-woon, who was passing by a large portrait while sipping coffee, was quietly startled. In case something unfortunate happened, Jung Hae-woon carefully placed the warm mug on the hallway table.

Then he quietly looked up and down at the pink-haired portrait in the painting. The portrait's reaction to him was truly consistent.

“Aren’t you handsome whenever I see you?”

“Are you really crazy?”

“Why are you saying such harsh things? I’m going to get hurt.”

“Who would believe you if you said you were hurt with that kind of face? I think you need to study human psychology and reactions to expression a little more.”

“Do you really think you’re not doing it because you don’t know, Jeong Hae-woon?”

“Of course you knew but you didn’t do it.”

Jeong Hae-woon's expression became very cold. Out of all the 'Geo's' he knew, he looked the freshest and warmest, but inside he felt that he was uniquely dark and sly. It wasn't just a thought, it was also an objective judgment.

“…You’ve been so quiet all this time. Why are you showing your precious eyes to me?”

“I tried hard to hide it, but can you see it?”

“It’s so flashy that I feel like I can see it all, really.”

The large portraits were always accompanied by black paint. According to Curator Yoo Seong-un, it was to prepare for various variables. Still, would it be strange to say that the noisy, sparkling eyes seemed to be watching me?

'No, it's not that I'm weird.'

This was clearly a strange situation. Jeong Hae-un, a good citizen, was not guilty.

“Yes, well, I’ll correct that. It’s not your eyes, it’s your reactions. You’ve been so quiet that I don’t know if you’re alive or dead, but now you’re pretending to know, so I’m so embarrassed I can’t even come to my senses.”

“Hmm, you’re upset because I pretended not to know you all this time. You’re still young after all….”

“Young… Didn’t you say that your physical age is 21? Oh, of course, it would be foolish to bring up Jeongwon’s age, but if you harass me with that bright face, it’s really confusing for a dull person.”

“Even though I originally had a blue face….”

“Don’t you have a rather experienced face now?”

Jung Hae-woon sighed, crossing his arms. He was mentally prepared. Jung Hae-woon had a duty to know why the portrait, which had been silent for a while, had reacted.

No matter how much the other person acts like a human, their essence is a capricious mystery.

“So what kind of prank are you trying to play this time, that you even spoke to me like this?”

“Oh, are you really mad? But Jeong Hae-woon, I need some personal time too. Aren’t I just a noisy wanderer who doesn’t know how to stay still in one place?”

“If you plan on continuing to slip away like a loach, I’ll just sit back and enjoy my coffee. It’s been a while since I’ve seen you, you’re all shiny and nice, I like you.”

“If that’s true, I’ll give you a chance to admire me, since I quite like Jeong Hae-woon.”

“That would be glorious….”

Jeong Hae-woon picked up the mug he had given up and put down. Then he dragged a chair over and sat down in front of the portrait. Looking at Jeong Hae-woon like that, the pink garden smiled as if it found him very cute.

“Oh my god, is this a specialty for gardeners?”

“What… what did I do?”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un also often does this when he looks at ‘Portrait of Geo’.”

“That’s what curators of collections are like. There were folding chairs scattered in the gallery hallway. I sat down to have a conversation with a talking, vocal being like you.”

“Can I be sure that I have a mouth and vocal cords?”

“I was being narrow-minded again, you’re right. Most people, if they can communicate, usually have both.”

When it seemed like he had no intention of getting to the main point easily, Jeong Hae-woon gave up and focused on savoring the sensation.

'Waiting until the mystery prank is over is also a good way to avoid wasting energy.'

The aroma of the coffee was amazing, and the portrait was even better. No matter what, Jeong Hae-un was still a gardener blinded by mystery.

“…If you look closely, it seems like you carry that hat around more often than you wear it? It seems like you hold it in your hand more often. Doesn’t that hat seem upset?”

“We’re too close to each other to be upset about something like this.”

“When I hear you say that, it seems like it’s a person, but I really don’t know what it is. I guess you can think of it as something like a goblin’s club. Well, it’s not like it has an ego….”

“How have you been while I was away?”

“How have you been, with all the chaos?”

Anyway, it is capricious.

'The topics of conversation are just as wild as yours. It suits you so well.'

It was sudden, but it seemed like the main topic that he had been waiting for. Jeong Hae-woon gritted his teeth in frustration.

This garden was kind and affectionate, but infinitely frivolous, and overflowing with useless love. It must have been reacting like that even though it knew the seriousness of the situation.

“Thanks to you, Korea almost turned upside down.”

“Oh, only Korea…?”

“Why the regret? Yes, in fact, it is something that will turn the whole world upside down.”

“It might be because the system disappeared, even temporarily.”

“I don’t know what the hell you want to do.”

The situation was very strange.

No matter how much the association stepped forward, the people were still anxious. Even if they had strong faith in the government and the association, there were limits.

The blinking system seemed like it would cause real damage at any time, and the symbol of eternity had no proper countermeasures to back down. So this anxiety was something that could not be helped. Wasn't this a situation where a second great disaster could occur?

Hunters were more anxious than ordinary citizens. They could not imagine life without the system. Even the symbol of eternity was shaken. They each had different opinions.

“Thanks to you, you’re giving me a huge headache. Do you know what Hara is thinking about doing to you?”

“I think the wisest decision would be to seal it.”

“You know very well. But Cha Eun-hye strongly opposed it. She even said from the beginning that it was impossible. In fact, I think so too. You are not someone who will simply be sealed away.”

“I’m so glad you know me so well, Jeong Hae-un.”

Jeongwon smiled lightly. He reached out from within the frame. Then he placed the magician’s hat that he always carried on Jeong Hae-woon’s head. Jeong Hae-woon flinched for a moment at the strangely heavy weight.

Fortunately or unfortunately, the portrait's prank didn't last long. George took his hat back with a graceful hand. Jeong Hae-woon frowned subtly at Jeong-won's incomprehensible actions. Jeong-won asked him as he looked at him.

“What about Seo Seo-hee and Jeong Hae-un?”

“…Seo Seo-hee is completely timid, acting like a bat. It seems like a completely 50-50 situation, but if the tide turns in one direction, she’ll probably join in.”

“Hmm, what about Jeong Hae-woon?”

"…well…."

Jeong Hae-woon sighed.

“…I’m really curious about the past that I’ve forgotten.”

“I don’t know if you’ll believe it, but I didn’t have anything to do with the nightmare that Jeong Hae-un had.”

“…….”

“I may have encouraged it a little, but?”

“…I’m asking just in case.”

Jeong Hae-woon's expression became a little more frowny.

“Isn’t this the first time I’ve had a ‘dream’? Like, I’ve been to that abandoned school many times before, but I don’t remember it?”

“Oh, you seem to be suspecting me, but you really aren’t. If something like that really happened, there would have been errors in the system several times. But it’s only happened once so far, right?”

“…That is certainly true.”

“As I said before, the ‘dream’ that student Jeong Hae-un had is not mine.”

The portrait lightly rustled the hat in my hand.

“When a flood comes, the dam breaks. When a crack breaks, the bowl breaks. It’s easy to put a finger on something that’s so precariously piled up. That’s what I did, and strictly speaking, I didn’t make you ‘dream.’”

His speech had a unique quality. The content was not trivial, but his voice and tone were truly remarkable. It was so captivating that I wanted to wash my ears.

If you told them to betray the world with that voice, there would be a world of people who would do it. Jeong Hae-woon's eyebrows furrowed more and more.

“First of all, I heard you say that it wasn’t your fault, teacher.”

“Teacher? If you say something like that and call me that, I’ll look quite unattractive….”

“So, is that what you’re trying to say? It’s a natural flow, so don’t reject it and accept this change? Excuse me, but I’m also one of the symbols of eternity. Even though it looks like this, I’m still sincere in protecting the Earth.”

“That’s why I guess you don’t want to do anything that would harm the Earth.”

“You’re right. In fact, Seo Seo-hee’s opinion and mine aren’t that different. I’ll admit it even if you call me a sly bat. Since it’s the truth, I don’t think it’ll have much of a negative impact.”

“But I know that Mr. Jeong Hae-un is a student with a strong sense of humor.”

The portrait paid no attention to Jeong Hae-un's self-deprecating refusal. It was probably because they already knew that they were seeing each other.

If not that, then maybe it was his mysterious confidence. Either way, it wasn't very comfortable to just watch.

It was still leaning against the frame with its upper body slightly outstretched. Thanks to this, the brilliant jewel eyes that were not covered by the black paint were clearly visible. It could just be seen that way. Since the iris and pupil were not distinct, it was impossible to gauge the gaze.

“…….”

“Student Jeong Hae-un.”

But I still felt the gaze, just like before, with the black paint.

“I say again, the dam is breaking, the vessel is almost broken.”

“…That must mean ‘the promise of eternity.’”

“If you don’t want to completely ruin that vulnerable child, you shouldn’t bully him anymore. You shouldn’t hit him or touch him, and if possible, you should avoid looking at him.”

“I know that, and yet I still haven’t returned this portrait to the collector. What a loser I am. I know it, I know it very well.”

“Student Jeong Hae-un is really greedy. I understand that about you. I quite like people who are true to their desires.”

“That would be a lie.”

Jeong Hae-woon laughed in vain. He wasn’t an idiot. It wasn’t like he hadn’t heard George’s stories while he was with him. Jeong Hae-woon could vaguely guess George’s ‘past’.

But the portrait denied Jeong Hae-un's thoughts.

“Really, I like it quite a bit.”

“You don’t hate it?”

“Did you know that hate and love are synonymous?”

“Oh my, how intense.”

He says this to a person with a face that looks like it would melt if it touched water. In fact, all mysterious people are like that. They do terrible things because they don't look like that at all.

“Do you hate humans? Calling it love? That’s why you want to torment people, by erasing the system from this world. Is that torment your purpose?”

“It’s okay to think that way.”

“It’s almost as if you’re saying no.”

“Maybe not? I’m a very loving person, so I could put aside all that and still love everyone. That might be possible.”

“It’s not a good story to hear either way.”

“But it’s true that the system is cumbersome. You can go farther without it. You can break down walls and shatter ceilings.”

“It’s ridiculous to keep urging me to reveal my purpose.”

The purpose of the portrait, George, has already been revealed. He can hate humans or love them. Therefore, he can want to harass them or help them. The act of belonging to all of these is called 'destroying the system'.

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been sitting stretched out on a chair for a while, holding only a mug, soon asked.

“Do you believe that would help the Earth, sir?”

“Isn’t it cooler to ride a two-wheeled bicycle than a four-wheeled bicycle?”

“Crazy, so in the end it was a question of style?”

“That problem definitely exists….”

“I don’t understand what kind of childish things you’re saying with a face that’s filled with all the world’s sensibilities.”

“But didn’t student Jeong Hae-un understand?”

“Why me?”

“What does that mean?”

“Why did you choose me, as the one who understands the thoughts you’re going to have?”

"oh…."

The gardener's expression became noticeably dull.

“People really have no conscience. They are always the first to start a fuss, and then they ask me, who has no idea what’s going on, what’s going on? Are you saying such things when you were the one who brought me to the collection center first, Jeong Hae-woon?”

“I won’t say anything about that injustice. But why am I the only one having that ‘dream’? Why? Seo Seo-hee is also quite desperate about that memory. I think she just wants to pretend not to know and have a dream.”

“That way, the dam won’t collapse. The bowl won’t break. But Jeong Hae-woon moved several times. That was the problem. Only your dam collapsed. The bowl broke. So don’t blame me for this.”

“You told me not to do that, so I won’t do it.”

Jeong Hae-woon's expression also became gloomy.

“Damn, I feel like I’ve been given a terminal diagnosis….”

No matter what he did, he would eventually end up dreaming a 'dream'.

* * *

Jeong Hae-woon had another dream and woke up crying.

“Do you want to remember?”

“…….”

“Can I help you, Jeong Hae-un?”

“…….”

“The joke will only last a moment.”

The garden whispered sweet words.

“I will trick them.”

This is what Jeong Hae-woon thought in the midst of the heated emotions, and no one could have avoided it. No one.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (329)

329

Episode 329

Repeated system failures occurred.

People were confused. And they protested to the Symbol of Eternity. They asked if they had not said that they would take care of it themselves. Some were resentful, and some condemned. The Symbol of Eternity could only give back the obvious answer that they were trying to fix it.

There was some unusual movement in the process.

“I, sir….”

“Why are there so many people coming to see me these days? I told you I’m retired.”

“I was wondering if I could ask for some advice.”

“No, I really….”

One hunter went to find retired seniors. Their targets were mainly those who had experienced the Great Disaster firsthand. More precisely, those who had been active as Awakened before the existence of the 'System'.

Another hunter went to see the gardener.

“What? A gardener? Oh, no, how did you know to come looking for me?”

“I heard it from Seonyeong in the lower village. He, yes, he’s a gardener….”

“Oh, this kid couldn’t sleep and was whining so much that I saved him. What an ungrateful kid.”

“I’m sorry, I’m sorry.”

“What the hell are you? Why are you here? When are you going to get out?”

They were mostly hunters who knew the flow of mysteries. Whether their parents were researchers at the association, or they were members of the guild leader Jeong Hae-un who was mainly in charge of mysteries, or they were people with connections to the temple.

These two directions ultimately served one goal.

“How did you use your abilities when there was no system?”

This was a question directed at retired hunters.

“How do you handle that mysterious power?”

This was a question directed at the unawakened gardener.

The two may look a little different, but they are ultimately the same. It was the same principle as those who are sentenced to lose their eyesight, closing their eyes in advance and adapting to the darkness.

They wanted to continue their work as hunters even if the system disappeared from the world one day. And surprisingly, quite a few people put this into practice.

“Hey, don’t just keep protesting like this….”

“Then what should we do?”

“Let’s go see that old man too. He was an Awakened person even when there was no system.”

“…Fuck, what good is there in lying around like this?”

“Yeah, if you buy that guy some alcohol, he’ll say something.”

“I’m glad I know someone.”

People who had simply been criticizing the government and the association gradually changed their direction. They chose to achieve something tangible rather than just making a fuss. This wave continued to grow.

As a few hunters moved like this, many hunters followed suit. As many hunters followed suit, soon all hunters followed suit. As all hunters followed suit, the civilians also lowered their voices.

In the meantime, some people also started criticizing those who had criticized the government and the association.

“How much have I received from the association so far? Tsk. You should know how embarrassing it is.”

“If it weren’t for the city’s protection, those people would have been eaten by the monsters beyond the walls, and they wouldn’t even know the grace.”

“Oh my, what were you planning on doing if you kept doing this and got kicked out by the higher-ups?”

Some people talked about grace and conscience, while others were afraid of actual damage. Opinions and reactions varied, but eventually, people's anger gradually began to subside.

It's not like anything changed right away.

“That old man speaks with grandeur….”

“Are we stupid for trying to get something from a drunkard?”

“No, but I’ve heard good stories about the old days.”

“There has to be something to get a feel for it….”

Those who went to find retired hunters.

“…….”

“Do you understand?”

"no?"

“What the hell are you so confident about?”

“No, I don’t know, so I’m saying I don’t know.”

“How dare you waste my precious time?”

“Ahhhh, that’s not it….”

Those who visited the gardener too.

“I really don’t get it, what do you want me to do!”

“If you catch it, why can’t you do it? Why can’t a guy with two eyes and all fours do this? Even I, with only one eye, can do it!!”

“Ah, this is why you shouldn’t talk to talented people! Do you know the mind of an ordinary person?!”

“Huh, even if you flatter me like that, I won’t get any special treatment or anything!!”

No one could 'get the hang of it'. But in the process, the anger naturally dissipated. However, people's trust in the association and the government was somewhat reduced, and in the meantime, some people built a relationship between teacher and student.

The fact that 'the system might disappear one day' has become ingrained in everyone's hearts. To the point where even if the association and the government whisper, they just pretend not to know.

"……."

And during this process, there were a few people who escaped.

* * *

First batter, Yoo Seong-un.

"Geo, do you remember the promise we made…? If we were going to turn the Earth upside down, we had to tell you in advance…."

"Even if you say it so vaguely, the accident has already happened and there is no turning back. Also, we have never signed a legal contract. I am innocent."

"No matter how much I think about it, it's clear that Mr. George has corrupted our Geo."

"If you think of me as a five-year-old, then it's a little difficult."

"Haaah…."

Yoo Seong-un lowered his head and covered his face with both hands. Burying his face in the palms of his hands, he mumbled in a slurred voice.

"I feel like crying, what should I do?"

"I think it's okay to cry."

“Ugh, this doesn’t work anymore.”

“It didn’t work at first.”

He had never even tried this in the first place. He had been acting like this often, as if his feelings had changed since he had drawn a picture of a meteor shower. Geo was happy because they seemed to have become close.

“Is it because of the accident I had that you came here?”

“Oh, it’s a bit ridiculous.”

Yoo Seong-un turned his head and looked at Joo-hyun, who had arrived first.

“Are you really going to do this without me? Huh? Joohyun, can you speak?”

“I thought there was no reason to involve Yoo Seong-un in this matter…?”

“They say birds of a feather flock together, but they really are starting to resemble each other. It’s driving me crazy.”

“But it really wasn’t anything that great.”

Joo-hyun, who was drinking flower tea, smiled shyly. It was a smile that seemed noble and even sacred.

“I just went to the leader of the Cloak Church and told him the will of God….”

“I got goosebumps.”

Yoo Seong-un became serious. He gently stroked my arm. It wasn't particularly cold, but it gave me goosebumps.

“Ms. Joohyun, you weren’t like this before. Go back to how you were before. I’m scared.”

“Ahem, sorry for teasing you.”

“What are you going to do if it goes to such a grand scale? Unlike our Sergio, who has big hands to begin with, Joo-hyun is an ordinary person. How are you going to handle it?”

“Ordinary, who was that guy who teased me that I would soon go beyond the realm of humanity and contact you? And from the beginning, I had received confirmation from Mr. Geo before proceeding with this.”

“I know it’s my karma to have teased you all this time, but who planned to get that confirmation? Wasn’t it Joo-hyun? To be honest, our Geo didn’t plan that. Are you trying to dodge it?”

“Oh, that’s true, but… hmm.”

A look of embarrassment finally appeared on Joo-hyun's face. He soon smiled awkwardly.

“Was there a bit of a commotion after all?”

He didn't really do much. He just went to find some 'black cloak' enthusiasts. He wore the black cloak Geo gave him just in case. He took the water birds with him just in case something bad happened.

At those words, Yoo Seong-un's expression turned cold.

“Is the noise a little loud? A little? Is it loud?”

“I’ll tell you in advance that I never really had any intention of being treated as an apostle of the black cloak. Seriously, I didn’t think I could live a life of wealth and honor by doing that.”

“It seems like you could enjoy all sorts of wealth and honor, but… well… I didn’t think that Joo-hyun would act like that because of that kind of thing. It doesn’t suit him.”

“I was drunk because I just wanted you to listen to me.”

“So that’s a problem too? Isn’t satisfying selfish desires the only problem?”

Joo-Hyeon went to the Mantle Church and gave them some 'advice'. It could be seen as a 'prophecy'. He pointed out the chaos of the future that had not yet arrived and told them the direction their god wanted.

And the believers of the Mantle Church, who were deeply immersed in the meaning, moved without hesitation. They incited the hunters I supported and was friendly with.

They were talking among themselves at the salon and it seemed like it might be a good idea to visit a retired hunter or gardener.

It spread gradually so that people would not feel uncomfortable.

“In the end, the result this time wasn’t bad at all….”

Yoo Seong-un's expression became strange.

“Why are the results always so bad? Why can’t I even complain freely?”

“Black Cloak Power.”

“Please, Geo… You’re so special, but I’m so sad….”

“If you feel special, just be special.”

“I really don’t know why my vocabulary has increased so much these days.”

“It’s unfair.”

There was no way Geo's vocabulary had suddenly increased. He was a 29-year-old adult. It was just that as Yoo Seong-un and Joo-hyun became more comfortable, his speech became more and more casual.

Yoo Seong-un, who had no way of knowing such circumstances, showed an awkward smile.

“Anyway, it ended well, but we almost got dragged to the Joohyun Association.”

“I did take that into account when I did my actions.”

“You must be saying this knowing that I’ll be scrubbing hard for three days and nights if I go, right?”

“I was a researcher at the association, don’t you know that?”

The phrase 'getting wiped clean' was a slang term for the Association's interrogation. If you got caught once, you could end up soaked in artifacts or stripped naked from head to toe. Of course, they didn't do that type of interrogation for just anyone.

The problem was the scale of what Joo-hyun had done. This time, it was a bit big. Didn't the entire nation get excited? Even if Geo had been responsible for the system error and all, there was no way Joo-hyun's actions would not have been caught by the association.

“The only good thing is that the president of the association seems to be trying not to make a big deal out of this. He seems to have decided to focus on the end result, regardless of the process. He may be offended, but he is also a person who is not sensitive to such feelings.”

Joohyun smiled brightly at Yoo Seong-un's words.

“I took that into account too.”

“I think Mr. Joo-Hyeon said he even had an interview with the president of the association.”

“Because he’s a consequentialist. Don’t you get the feeling just by looking at him and thinking that it’s okay for people to be kicked out of the lab?”

“Thanks to that, I’m the only one being called here and there.”

“I thought you weren’t visible while I was working.”

“I see. So there are people who work hard and people who suffer?”

“…….”

“…….”

Geo, who had been pondering for a moment in the familiar silence for some reason, lifted the pot.

“How about chicken stew?”

“It’s a very good nutritious food.”

So the meteor passed by.

* * *

But perhaps naturally, or perhaps surprisingly, there were people who couldn't get over it.

“…….”

“Hey, it’s been a while since I’ve seen you make that kind of expression.”

“…I’m not sure what kind of expression I’m making.”

“Hmm, a look of absurdity?”

“It’s definitely an unfamiliar feeling.”

Dan Hae-ra quietly rolled her eyes. That was how she checked her condition. It had been a long time since she felt raw emotions. She had sacrificed most of her memories and emotions in exchange for promises, so this was unfamiliar to her.

“This is what I call absurd.”

I thought it would be good to remember it well. Danhae nodded her head without realizing it, thinking that way. She, who usually had little time to feel emotions, didn’t even have the ability to distinguish between the two emotions.

That is why the questions that came along with the absurdity were also unfamiliar.

“Seo Seo-hee.”

“Huh? Oh, okay.”

“What on earth does that portrait want with me?”

“…But I don’t think there was any bad intention….”

“That doesn’t answer the question.”

“Let’s just look at the good Hara once.”

“I told you that doesn’t work?”

After a bit of a struggle, Danhae blinked.

“…What is this…?”

“…….”

Looking at her like that, Seo Seo-hee quietly posted a message in the group chat.

Hey, it's broken ㅋㅋㅋㅋ I knew it would happen You fixed it Jeong Hae-un

Crazy guy.

'He's been my friend for over 30 years, but he's really crazy.'

I was truly envious that you could laugh at this situation.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (330)

330

Episode 330

The results of the mysterious quirk could not be said to be bad.

'If you really want to get rid of the system, then...'

Seo Seo-hee smiled awkwardly and looked at the person sitting across from her. The person was wearing a white priest’s robe under a black cloak. He was commonly known to the world as ‘Sergio Hunter.’

He asked with a gentle smile as always.

“Aren’t you going to eat any more?”

“I’ve had enough.”

“How was your meal today?”

“Soy sauce marinated crab is really crazy.”

That part was so amazing that I couldn't even act coy.

Even though it was raw, there was no fishy smell, and the meat was soft yet chewy. The crab meat soaked in a soy sauce that wasn't too salty was heavenly when eaten with warm rice.

“If you look at it, our guild leader’s lunch box always seems to be Western food.”

“I thought you liked it salty and rich, so I was adjusting it to that.”

“And my meals are usually Korean food.”

“Because I like light liver. I especially like the original taste of the ingredients.”

“That’s right, I have that kind of side to me. In these times when it’s hard to enjoy fine dining, it’s hard to survive with that kind of appetite. That’s why I think the lunch boxes you pack for me are good.”

It wasn't just that problem. As the Hunter's rank increased, his taste also improved. It was natural. As his overall ability increased, his sense of smell and taste also became more sensitive.

'There's a reason our grumpy guild leader is eating lunch with his nose in his mouth.'

For that reason, restaurants that catered to the tastes of hunters were rare. This may be one reason why restaurants in this day and age are all upscale. The main customers were mostly first-class citizens, such as high-class hunters.

Even the person who made this lunchbox was not an ordinary person.

'Even if you only consider what you see, he's an A-class hunter rumored to be an S-class... and on top of that, he's the son of a secret agent who works at a collection shop. With just this much, it seems like he won't get his hands dirty.'

More fundamentally, it wasn't even human in the first place. It was a mystery of a high rank that couldn't be defined by the current rank. For such a being to personally make a lunch box was closer to a disaster than favor.

Anyway, to summarize, it is truly a thankful thing.

“…….”

Enough with the peaceful thoughts.

“…It seems like the gardeners are getting along well with the hunters these days. Since the introduction of the Black Cloak series, they were treated as something like ‘poor winners’, but now they are treated as precious teachers who are truly rare.”

“I heard that too, peaceful reconciliation is always a joy.”

“Thanks to that, there is never a day when the smile disappears from Jeong Hae-woon’s face.”

Jeong Hae-un was the first gardener. And he was a symbol of eternity. He was the vanguard of all gardeners in the world.

Although he didn't have a specific position like a leader or anything, it seemed like he had a great sense of responsibility. Jeong Hae-un was always sensitive to the situation where gardeners were being persecuted. He was especially saddened by it.

But then one day, the gardeners' treatment became more generous. If there were no particular side effects, there was no reason for Jeong Hae-woon not to like it.

“I also think it’s a good thing. Gardeners are paid too poorly for the work they do. If it were just a small task, they would either do it themselves or at least stop it from happening….”

Seo Seo-hee's smile distorted slightly.

“The garden is holding the love of the gardeners hostage, so no matter how badly it is treated, it cannot easily escape. Isn’t that the power of love in the first place?”

“Love….”

The blond-haired priest lowered his eyes.

“Love certainly has that kind of power. It makes me feel like the damage I’m about to suffer isn’t damage. Sometimes the process feels natural, sometimes I know but pretend not to, and sometimes I really don’t know.”

“Isn’t that commonly called a bean pod?”

“Personally, I don’t really like that kind of love.”

“It seems like a rather interesting story.”

Seo Seo-hee's eyes lit up. What kind of love does this gentle and old-fashioned teacher think of? Has he ever experienced love? Well, that was the kind of interest.

“I know this is rude, but have you ever been in love?”

“…Is family love included?”

“To be honest, I wanted to ask about love between lovers.”

“I’ve never felt anything like that, so it’s hard for me to say. Of course, I love the precious things I cherish and protect, but it’s never been possessive.”

“I think the love you think of is possessiveness.”

“At least that’s what I thought. Otherwise, I wouldn’t have any reason to feel jealous when my love smiles at someone else. It may sound strange, but many people think it’s a really bad impulse. Since love is also an intangible concept, why can’t it be shared equally?”

“…If it has to be shared equally, it might be difficult to see it as love. After all, love is an emotion that comes from considering the other person special, and that is discrimination and favoritism… Anyway, let’s leave it at that.”

It wasn't that I wanted to discuss the concept and foundation of love. Seo Seo-hee shrugged lightly. He continued to ask.

“Isn’t that from the perspective of ‘Giovanni’, no one else? Is this also love, another name for the mercy you bestow… something like that?”

“…I guess so. It’s not that I’ve never shown favoritism, but I think the love I know is quite different from the general view.”

Giovanni tilted his head and smiled.

“I think Ms. Seo Seo-hee is curious about Mr. George’s opinion, not mine.”

“That’s true too.”

“I’m not sure, but I think it’s probably… something close to hatred.”

“…I was a little surprised because the answer was quite different from the image I had. It seemed like he embraced everything in the world in a different sense from Mr. Giovanni.”

“He doesn’t embrace anything, except his best friends.”

"confidant?"

“That… hat.”

"aha."

I knew it from hearing the story a few times. 'George' was said to carry a wizard's hat on his head that he didn't even wear. I also remembered what Jeong Hae-woon said about it looking like a creature with an ego.

“A lot more than I thought… um….”

“He is a difficult person. He is temperamental and wanders a lot. He likes to stay in one place sometimes, but not for long. He likes people, but he hates them, and he never trusts them.”

“…I feel like I’m hearing some kind of dungeon strategy.”

“It’s a dungeon, so at first glance it might seem similar.”

He continued speaking softly, like a teacher giving advice to a young student.

“George is a skilled liar. But he is often sincere. I liken it to hatred, but that doesn’t mean his love is fake. It just fades quickly. But because he is good at lying, it’s not easy to tell when his love has faded.”

So, what remained in the void left by love was only hatred that was so similar to love that it was meaningless to distinguish between them. That was the love of George that Geo saw.

Seo Seo-hee's expression became very strange at Geo's kind explanation.

“…That’s tricky.”

“That’s what you said, right?”

“You may wonder what I’m saying now, but Jeong Hae-woon said that I’m a quiet person.”

It was really tiring. Seo Seo-hee always wanted to be a model student, but the more she tried, the more she felt that it was impossible. In the first place, he was not a very sincere, good, or upright person.

He was just imitating. He was imitating the ideal adult and leader. But that didn't change his essence. Even if he always had a smile on his face and practiced kindness and justice, in the end...

“…I know that I’m a pretty bad person, contrary to what people think.”

“You were thinking like that?”

“Of course I’ve done a lot of good things. But I can never be the best adult. Well, that’s true for everyone. Just like when a child who my father thought would be a hero grows up and one day he sees that little back….”

“But now, no one is looking after Seo Seo-hee’s back.”

“Everyone is watching, but there’s a lot of nitpicking going on there. I’m not trying to complain, I’m just saying. I’m admitting that I’m being a slacker.”

Seo Seo-hee smiled brightly.

“So I’ll just irresponsibly wait for the results. I’m quite interested in the fate of the Earth, but for some reason, this time I want to pretend not to know.”

“Sometimes there are days like that.”

“Yes, then you can finish the rest of the story with my friends. I’ll just wait quietly and watch.”

“Did the president call me?”

“Well, rather than the Hunter… it seems like you’d like to talk to a certain portrait.”

“I will keep that in mind.”

Sergio Hunter asked.

“I recently had some boiled chicken and it was pretty good. How about some boiled chicken for your next lunch box?”

“…Oh, good. While you’re at it, how about some samgyetang? Put a lot of glutinous rice in it.”

“Since it’s called a lunch box, let’s give it a try.”

That's how their conversation ended.

* * *

And, the portrait was found in Danhae-ra.

"hmm…."

She cupped my cheek with one hand and quickly tilted her head.

“If summoning is this easy, it will be difficult to ensure the safety of citizens.”

“Don’t worry, Hara, I won’t be going anywhere just because you draw for me.”

“You are much more affectionate than I thought.”

She looked at the portrait floating in the air and opened her eyes gently. It wasn't that the picture frame floating on the sofa opposite her was particularly funny. But still, since she was my guest, I had to treat her appropriately.

“Would you please take a seat? I have prepared some nice tea, but I’m not sure if you’ll like it.”

“If the chairman has prepared this much, I should gladly sit down. Thank you for inviting me.”

The pitch-black portrait came out of the frame and sat naturally on the sofa. There was no sign or noise, as if it had always been there. Even the air flow was calm.

Dan Hae-ra, who had been quietly looking at it, took her hand off my cheek. She pointed to the round teacup.

“Don’t you think the tea smells pretty good?”

“It’s smooth and rich. I got some good tea leaves.”

“It’s not widely known yet, but this is a tea that is being cultivated in the dungeon that the association recently conquered. It seems to have been bred by some civilization in the past, and the tea leaves have been manipulated to prevent them from growing thick and hard from their tender leaves.”

“You just inherited it and are cultivating it?”

“It has grown so young over such a long period of time. It cannot even survive without the power of a sophisticated, dexterous civilized life form. Isn’t it like a silkworm?”

It has been improved for human convenience. This tea leaf was stuffed in its youngest and weakest form, and no civilized life form would have objected to it. That is why it came to be in this form.

“You may think it’s a pity, but well. Since they were created and born this way, there is no way to return them to how they were before the improvement. What would happen if we let them go with pure intentions and abandon human greed?”

Dan Hae-ra, wearing a uniform that resembled a hanbok, slowly picked up the teacup. She took a sip of the tea after smelling the delicate but clear scent of grains. Even after drinking, her mouth was filled with a good scent.

Then, he faces the person who shared the teacup with him.

“I don’t think there’s any point to it.”

“What are you talking about?”

“It’s the act of releasing tea leaves that have already been improved.”

What if we let them go? They are fragile children who will eventually go extinct without human intervention. But if we evolve them to be stronger and more durable, how is that any different from the previous improvements?

“In that case, it would be better to manage and use tea leaves that have already been improved for each other. It is good for humans to get fragrant tea, and it is good for tea leaves to be managed consistently.”

“That’s a good idea too.”

“You never deny any thought.”

“Were you looking for the answer from me?”

The black cloak saw the Association President Dan Hae-ra under the shadow of the hood. It was impossible to imagine that there was a human face in that pitch-black shadow. It was just a black void itself. That was all there was to it.

Yet, how could his actions be so similar to those of a human? His attitude, which felt somehow familiar, actually made me feel a great sense of discomfort. This was because, even though I knew that he was not a human at all, I felt like he was a close being.

It gave a pretty philosophical answer.

“There are no right answers in the world.”

“But there are laws and morals.”

“After all, it too is something that humans created. If the ‘correct answer’ you’re talking about is something of that kind, then I have nothing to say.”

“I heard you prefer kind and young things.”

“When you say that, it makes me sound like I’m some evil spirit that wants a gentle and tender sacrifice. Well, I like people like that. I feel energized when I see them.”

“Weren’t you also in a position to protect them?”

“My personal taste and the laws of the world are different….”

The black cloak said that law and morality are merely human tastes.

“The ‘correct answer’ is always created by necessity. Science and mathematics are also complex symbols created by humans. So, while there may be a correct answer, there can be no correct answer in essence, right?”

“By saying that, you are trying to destroy the system.”

Dan Hae-ra continued speaking, putting down her warm cup of tea.

“If it wasn’t an act done because it was the right answer, then it must have been intended to convey some kind of intention.”

“Is there anyone who would believe me when I say I had no intention?”

“It was a funny joke. Hmm, so you’re looking for revenge then?”

“I don’t feel like that.”

“Excuse me, I thought it might be a backlash against me forgetting you.”

“It would be quite meaningful to rebel against the past, but at least I don’t do that. I’ve always lived without regrets, and I don’t have the strength to give it any other meaning than reminiscing about the past.”

“You are so generous.”

“I don’t really care whether there is a system or not….”

The 'head' part of the black cloak tilted as if imitating human behavior.

“It doesn’t seem like Mr. ‘George’ is like that.”

The black cloak that spoke of itself as a distinct entity was… odd enough to warrant careful observation.

Danhae-ra smiled.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (331)

331

Episode 331

Dan Hae-ra admitted it. Black Cloak was a pretty good listener and speaker. He accepted and evaluated what the other person said without emotional ups and downs, but he never inefficiently belittled them.

Especially for Danhae, who was insensitive to universal human emotions, this was an even more comfortable person to interact with. This was even friendly and gentlemanly to humans.

'…not all mysteries with human egos are like this.'

Rather, there were many mysteries that were even more twisted because they had personalities. There is a reason why it is called the uncanny valley. There was a minimum reason why those who vaguely resembled humans were rejected.

The main topic of conversation between the two continued like flowing water.

"Keep watching?"

"I don't think I have the confidence to persuade 'George'."

"That is also true."

It wasn't that he was summoned to persuade 'George', the Danhae. Persuading a mystery, wasn't that an impossible task in the first place? So this was a human's struggle to prepare for the future.

“As the host of the ‘Promise of Eternity’, I feel that the system is in danger. Due to Mr. ‘George’s’ instigation, the system has been showing frequent errors recently, but in fact, it is no different from something that is going to happen someday.”

Of course, it wasn't like I didn't feel any unpleasant feelings at all. For example, if the Earth is going to end in a thousand years, there's no need for it to happen right now. But at least Danhae wasn't qualified to say that.

She was also the one who brought forward the misfortune and suffering of the future. Danhae gathered incidents and accidents that she did not need to experience in advance and locked them up in her laboratory. She could not say anything unless it was an extreme situation like destruction.

“…Well, it’s still unpleasant.”

“Oh, like that.”

“I still think people need a system. Mr. George said that it is past time for people to ride quad bikes, but I don’t know. I think it is dangerous enough.”

“That could be the case.”

“But I also know that I can’t convince Mr. George. Today, I just wanted to guess what the future holds, and I didn’t have any particular expectations of persuasion and cooperation. This will be a big harvest.”

At least we have confirmed that 'Black Cloak' is not hostile. He is more of a bystander, but according to the rules shown in 'Portrait of Geo', he will not make any great sacrifices.

“So what’s left is up to me and the humans, right?”

“It’s comforting to see that you still look strong.”

“It was thanks to the Black Cloak that he gave the Association the disease and medicine.”

Dan Hae-ra smiled brightly. As usual, it was a mechanical smile without any emotion, and in fact, she didn’t have any particular feelings about this situation. The many questions that followed the absurdity had gradually subsided.

“Thanks to your help, people no longer value the existence of the ‘system’ as much as they used to. Now that they know it’s a defective lifeboat, they’re probably going to try to learn how to swim. That’s certainly not a bad idea.”

This could also be acknowledged. Children could not be carried on their parents' backs forever. They had to walk on their own two feet and live their own lives. It is often said that instead of giving money, teach them how to make money.

“But the problem is that they are floating not on flat ground, but on the sea. The young and weak will die while swimming towards the unknown land that may be somewhere.”

“You’re worried about that.”

“If we’re lucky, no one will die, but they could all die. That’s why we’ve been trying to get these refugees to land, not to the sea.”

It might have been an artificial island created by the symbol of eternity. What if the place where these poor refugees were floating was truly the vast ocean? They had to forcefully create land before they were annihilated.

Danhae had been waiting for an eternity to prepare for it. So had her other friends.

“Then at least no one will drown because they can’t use their feet.”

“The sea is a very dangerous place.”

“It’s not the right place for a newborn baby to learn to walk. I thought there was no need to rush them and risk their lives when they could have learned it more easily and safely step by step.”

"somehow."

The hood of the shadowy cloak seemed to nod.

“I was wondering why you were looking so far away.”

“Yes, because the priority was to drag them to a safe land. If you’ve talked to other ‘Symbols of Eternity’ so far, you’ve probably felt it. We’re looking very far into the future. In the case of Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un, the start date of his project was 1000 years away.”

“Did you do that too?”

“I wanted it to end sooner. Unlike Jeong Hae-un, the Association’s work inevitably sacrifices many lives. As a result, the disregard for life is spreading quickly and deeply.”

Dan Hae-ra said, pinching her lips.

“I do not approve of the value of the sacrifice, but I do approve of the efficiency. I thought that if I could finish it off early, I should be the one who could handle the beating. I only hope that you can understand this judgment, Black Cloak.”

He knew that he would be recorded in history as a tyrant and a murderer. Nevertheless, he built the numerous research institutes called Danhae. And he pushed people into them. Because Danhae could effectively use all the negative emotions and memories that arose in the process.

For Dan Hae-ra, who has become numb to all emotions, even guilt, sadness from blame, and even pain from her own sins become great rewards. This makes Dan Hae-ra human and at the same time helps her make more 'promises'.

“There will never be another person more suited to this position than me.”

Even as long as the promise of Danhae was kept, he lived forever. Who could be more suitable for the position of the president of the association and the person who gives the orders? He simply did not miss this efficient opportunity called Danhae.

“But you’re trying to ruin all these plans. I know it’s rude, but it’s a pretty unpleasant situation for me. Because of the huge gaps in my memory and emotions, I become obsessed with even the smallest of plans.”

“Um, no….”

The black cloak spoke as if recalling something.

“You were like that before too.”

“…That’s an interesting story, would you like to tell it?”

“I’ve always hated it when your plans get ruined. Even if they were really small and simple plans. For example, if you were planning to stop by a bookstore and then buy ice cream, you’d get stressed out if you went to the bookstore after eating ice cream….”

“…….”

Dan Hae-ra, who had been silent for a while, asked.

“…? Is my story true?”

“Isn’t that the case now? Have you finally decided to enjoy life as it comes?”

“I really didn’t know, so I asked.”

“If you’re asking whether it’s true or not, then it’s not a lie.”

“You were young, weren’t you?”

“It doesn’t look much different now….”

“I see. It was such an unexpected story, so I was a little surprised.”

“That could be the case.”

The 'head' part of the cloak nodded.

“So you’re upset because your plans were ruined?”

“I wanted to guess the future, but I can’t say I didn’t have any intention of venting my anger. I was curious about what kind of person he was that was blocking our future like this.”

“I admit that Mr. George is a very unstable person to watch. But he is also me. I trust that he will not sacrifice innocent people.”

“Is he always truthful?”

“No, he’s a skilled liar.”

“Then I can’t believe it.”

“I understand.”

Black Cloak was not one to actively express his opinion. He also gave up on seeking cooperation. This being was a bystander and observer who kept to the bare minimum.

That's what he asked.

“So, is that the main point?”

“Yes, it was just a place to express my grievances and gratitude.”

“I suppose that’s what I wanted, but I don’t think I received any gratitude.”

“Then I will give it to you now. Thank you for your great interest in the future of the Earth, and I am also grateful that your amusement is not so cruel.”

It might sound sarcastic. But it was sincere. This portrait was trying to fix the Earth with goodwill, and the direction was not bad at all. It was just that Danhae could not agree with the process.

Yet the Black Cloak did all this steadily. He could have caused the citizens to overthrow the government and the association based on errors and omissions in the system, but he didn't. He just showed them how to improve through a little conflict.

“I know how hard it is.”

It was especially difficult for bystanders and spectators like him.

The black cloak could have been more indifferent, but he still hung out with humans, imitated humans, and followed human rules. That was something to be thankful for as the president of the association.

“Thanks to you, I was able to re-plan my plans. You gave me and my friends a chance, even though you could have easily crushed it. You gave us the right to debate our opinions and compete our plans without making us miserable.”

Danhae-ra laughed.

“I appreciate it.”

“…….”

And Geo thought.

‘… Were we fighting?’

I didn't really feel like I was competing against something.

But at this point, Geo couldn't help but learn. If others did, then so be it. I thought it was similar to what his students used to say about 'Northern Grand Duke' and 'Mafia Successor'. It wasn't something to get angry about.

Geo, who felt good seeing his old disciple's face after a long time, decided to enjoy it all.

“…That’s fortunate.”

Anyway, since the students were good, the teacher was good too.

* * *

"so."

Geo held a hallway meeting for the first time in a long time.

“I want to do something before I lose the face to face with our Hae-ra students.”

"what's the matter."

“I’m not brave enough to say, ‘What did you know?’ in a situation like a youth drama where you say, ‘I knew it, let’s do our best.’ Please understand.”

“So what exactly does this mean? What kind of conversation did you have with the president?”

Joo-hyun tilted his head at Yoo Seong-un's reflective words.

“Why are you killing Mr. Geo?”

“Joohyun suddenly became an extreme parent.”

“It was a joke.”

Joohyun smiled lightly and looked back at Geo.

“Is that Mr. Geo’s idea? Or Mr. George’s idea? I heard before that there are often times when the two opinions differ because the assimilation is not yet complete….”

“This is my opinion.”

“If that’s the case, then that’s fortunate. Personally, I’m a little scared that Mr. George might get into some kind of accident. But that doesn’t mean that Mr. Geo is a gentle person.”

“If you are going to shamelessly take my side, I would like to ask you to be a little more specific.”

“Anyway, I exist for Geo’s activities. That’s the purpose of a manager. I was feeling uneasy because you’ve been doing almost nothing as a hunter lately.”

A bitter smile appeared on Joohyun's face.

“Isn’t it a bit sad that he’s a freeloader who only takes money?”

“…Isn’t that a good thing?”

“I think it’s a bit much to just receive money without doing anything.”

He was certainly an honest man. Taking money without compensation only made Ju-hyeon uncomfortable. It was partly because of this that he had visited the Manto Church and preached the so-called 'will of God'.

Joohyun asked with her usual sincere smile.

“What are you planning to do this time?”

“I’m going to try drawing for the first time in a while.”

Yoo Seong-un intervened in this.

“I’m sorry, but it hasn’t been that long, and your series is still going around the world. So is that the case this time? Why, just like Argio-san….”

“Yes, I publish my work to the world under a name other than my own.”

“So you’re going to hide behind Mr. George’s name and cause a big accident?”

“But in the end, it’s the same person, so there’s no problem, right?”

“I don’t know where I thought that.”

After thinking for a moment, Yoo Seong-un soon opened his mouth.

“…Don’t just include our guild leader.”

“Well, I haven’t decided yet what to do.”

"please."

That was a disaster.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (332)

332

Episode 332

Even though they held a meeting, Geo actually had no plans.

“I was bluffing because I thought the president was expecting a fair and interesting match, but unfortunately, there are no plans. I am broke.”

“…….”

And Cha Eun-hyeok, who somehow ended up inviting Black Cloak to his house semi-forcibly, thought.

'Is this what a penniless person usually says?'

But he didn't say that thought out loud. And it seemed that Cha Eun-hyeok's appearance touched Black Cloak's heart. He looked at Cha Eun-hyeok with a look of surprise and asked.

“Wouldn’t you normally refute a little more?”

“…Ah, it’s unfamiliar.”

“Are we still in that kind of relationship? Of course I understand, the relationship between a subordinate and a superior can never be comfortable. I’m not the type of person to force things like that. But I asked because I thought Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok would have said something at this point if things were normal.”

“That… is true, but….”

Cha Eun-hyeok glanced at the black cloak without realizing it.

A large body that almost reached the ceiling. A pitch-black cloak that covered the body, or was visible as such. A black shirt and suit pants inside. Above all, a shadow inside a black hood that made it impossible to see inside.

So this was really inevitable.

“…He doesn’t seem like my boss at work.”

“Oh, it’s me.”

“The speech is a little different and the atmosphere is completely different.”

“Because it’s different?”

“We are like brothers who just share some of our genes.”

"aha."

Geo nodded. It could have been. In fact, strictly speaking, 'Geo' and I couldn't be called the same person. We were completely different people who had so many similarities that we could have guessed they were the same person.

“Genetically, we may be very different, but if you don’t mind, you can think of us as twins. Of course, George and I are not ‘the same’ yet.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

Cha Eun-hyeok bowed and expressed his gratitude. He was certainly kinder than George in many ways. However, gratitude and facts were separate things. He spoke his mind.

“And I don’t think the president is looking forward to a showdown with Mr. Geo.”

"then…?"

“Isn’t it more about mental preparation than anticipation? Some natural disaster is preparing to conquer the Earth.”

“I think it’s closer to subversion than conquest, but it could be true. I will take your advice into consideration.”

“…….”

Before I thought about whether it was a conquest or a subversion, I felt like I was unfamiliar with him because he listened to me so well. This also didn't seem like my boss at work.

'Even though he's blunt, he's definitely more considerate.'

I thought that with his permission, we should just treat him as a separate person.

And then, the second daughter of this household, Cha Ara, who had been in the kitchen, appeared hesitantly. She came out with an extremely awkward face and asked quietly.

“I made some tea….”

“Thank you for treating me so well. Are you having a hard time?”

“No, I like this kind of thing.”

Although her appearance was still scary, her reaction was friendly. Encouraged by that, Cha Ara smiled and sneaked in between them. She, who likes various kinds of food, was a little excited about the fact that she could serve tea to her guests.

“Yes, I made it according to the recipe you gave me before.”

“It really smells good. It looks like you put a lot of effort into drying it.”

“That… It’s probably completely different from what you gave me before….”

“I think this tastes better.”

It wasn't an empty promise. The tea made by roasting and drying barley was warm and really good to drink in the fall. It was grain tea, so it made me feel a little full. Of course, Geo's huge stomach wouldn't be full after drinking a few cups of tea.

And Geo returned to the topic from before.

“So I’m going to try to make a plan.”

“…Now?”

“…No, someday.”

Geo was quite lazy. He would only be sincere when he wanted to be, and this was exactly the situation. It's not like the world will end if you put it off for a while.

'More than anything, the execution power of Mr. Yoo Seong-woon and Mr. Joo Hyun has improved to an unusual degree.'

Yoo Seong-woon, who was excited about receiving a recent painting as a gift, treated Geo too comfortably, and Joo-hyun was overprotective, perhaps because she heard something from Bi Sa-bal. In the past, there were two brakes for each accelerator, but now there are three accelerators. So it was time for Geo to restrain himself.

And there was a reason why Geo visited the Cha household today. Would he have visited someone so precious to make a plan? Geo asked the landlord quietly.

“When do you think the kids will arrive?”

“Well, maybe by now….”

And then, with perfect timing, today's main character appeared.

“—I’m here!!!”

With the youngest of this house, Chaisol.

“Excuse me.”

His partner was Iruda.

Behind the two were several adults in suits. I heard they were knights and bodyguards hired by Iruda's mother. There was a reason why only children were allowed to come down from the shrine in Seoul.

Cha Ara smiled in relief as she saw her youngest child arrive safely.

“Chaisol!!”

“Sister!!”

“Look at the weight my baby lost, put it back on right now!!”

“It’s not that I gained weight, it’s that I lost weight…!!”

Cha Eun-hyuk sighed as he saw the two having a friendly reunion at the clearly visible front door. Cha Eun-hyuk, who had been furrowing his brows, soon approached Iru-da, who was standing there blankly.

“Thank you for coming.”

“Oh, please speak more comfortably. It would be more comfortable for me if you, as an adult, speak informally to me first.”

“Luda… has a good vocabulary. Thanks to her good friends, Isul-i will become smarter in no time.”

“Isol is originally smart.”

“Thank you, and the others in the back….”

“I was going to send it back just now.”

“Oh, yeah, okay.”

I often met him and talked to him, but he was really mature and firm. Not knowing that Eunhyuk Cha was flustered, Iru turned around and looked at the young men. Iru said in a much firmer tone than when she spoke to Eunhyuk Cha.

“Thank you for coming all the way here. I’ll contact your mother separately, so you can go back now.”

“But this is not a city, miss. I’m sure your wife would like us to be there to keep an eye on your safety if possible.”

“I know how you feel, but the landlord here didn’t invite you all. Okay, then….”

After that, I looked back at Cha Eun-hyeok.

“Excuse me, but… is there a place for these people to stay in this town?”

“It might be a little narrow, but you can all come inside.”

“Then I feel uncomfortable because I feel like I’m causing too much trouble. If you permit, I would like to ask that you wait in the village rest area.”

“…If that’s the case, there are a few pavilions centered around the village hall.”

“Thank you for your kind guidance.”

Then I saw the guards.

“Did you hear that? I have a favor to ask.”

“Yes, thank you for your understanding. If you have any problems, please press the button and let us….”

“…? Why are you like that?”

“…No, I’m sorry.”

The person who seemed to be the leader of the security guard stared at the house that was not visible for a moment, then shook his head. Then he asked Eunhyuk Cha, who was standing beyond Iruda with a trembling expression.

“Are there any other hunters inside?”

“Ah, that….”

Perhaps he had noticed the existence of 'Sergio Hunter'. Cha Eun-hyeok nodded after thinking for a moment. He wasn't a human, but he was a hunter. If you look at it that way, he wasn't exactly lying.

“Yes, my youngest son has a favorite older brother. He came to visit us in advance after finding out that the kids were on vacation at the temple. He is also acquainted with Priest Kang Seo-dam, so I think he heard the story separately.”

“By any chance what is his name….”

“…….”

This became a bit more of a concern.

'Are you sure my throat won't fly off if I tell you?'

At that moment, Chae Sol's excited voice was heard from inside the house.

“Wow, Geo hyung!! It’s Geo hyung!!”

“Chaisul, stop running…!”

“Hyung, hyung! Hyung, I got a vacation. A vacation! I grew up so well, didn’t I!!”

Two of the three letters of the name have already been revealed. Cha Eun-hyeok has lost his attachment to it. The Black Cloak he knows is not a mystery that would cut the throats of innocent citizens just because they say something about its name.

“…Yes, Sergio Hunter is visiting.”

"…okay."

The guard, who was probably an Awakened One, looked a little flustered. He managed to hide it skillfully, but Sergio's appearance must have been so flustering that even a professional guard couldn't hide his confusion for a moment.

'I can tell at a glance that he's wondering why such a person is here.'

However, the image of Sergio Hunter known to the world was excellent. Thanks to that, even though it seemed strange, the expression on Kyungho’s face seemed to become much more relaxed.

It seemed that they had judged that there would be no major problems for the young lady, as there was a human-friendly A-class hunter in a quiet village without even a dungeon.

“Then we will take our leave now. Please spend some time with your friend, and when you want to go home, please call us. And if it is alright with you… Miss.”

“What is it?”

“I would like to check if there are any threatening monsters around this village. If you permit me, I will try to identify them as much as possible, and if necessary, I will request additional approval.”

“Before that, I’ll have to get permission from the village chief first. Wouldn’t it upset the monsters that coexist peacefully with the village? If you promise not to cause any trouble, I’ll approve.”

“Yes, I will. I will report this to your wife. Thank you again for your permission. Have a nice time, Miss.”

Five or six young men rushed out of the gate. In fact, the expression 'rush' was not appropriate. They were guards assigned to the children of wealthy families, so they made almost no noise. It meant that they were powerful men.

‘…Why am I looking into this when I’m neither an awakener nor a gardener?’

These days, all I do is do peaceful things like baking bungeoppang (fish-shaped bread) and looking for snacks.

Recently, while running a food stall with George, he had the opportunity to see many hunters. Most of them were tattered and out of their minds due to being possessed by George, but it seemed that even Cha Eun-hyeok, a civilian, had the opportunity to sharpen his eye.

Looking back at Cha Eun-hyeok, Iru hesitated.

“…I’m sorry, was it a little noisy?”

“…Huh? Oh, no. It’s my first time doing something like this, so I’m a little flustered, but it’s okay.”

“I apologize for rushing in without notice. I didn’t know there would be so many of them. We were supposed to have just one guide to help people use the terminal smoothly….”

“What parent would feel comfortable sending their young child out of the city alone?”

Of course, even considering that, it was surprising. Chae Sol had a pure perspective on the world, so she never described her partner’s financial situation. So Cha Eun Hyuk only knew that Iru Da was a first-class citizen.

‘It’s true that among first-class citizens, there is no one who is not rich… .’

Anyway, it was a new experience.

“You’ve been outside too long. Let’s go inside first.”

“Yes, over there, my mother said she wanted to give this to the landlord as a gift….”

“Wow, it’s fruit. Thank you.”

"you're welcome."

Iru shook his head, but he was inwardly puzzled.

'It's not as burdensome as I thought.'

I didn't mean to be discriminatory. However, I knew that it would be difficult for local residents, who lack infrastructure in many ways, to see such good-quality fruit.

'Oh, well, since you're close to Sergio Hunter, you probably come across things like this often.'

It was a little difficult when my mother took care of me, but fortunately, she tried to kill my friend's spirit in order to raise my daughter's spirit.

It seemed as if he expected that if he gave them a little too much, the third-class citizen would treat them like a first-class citizen.

'I was anxious because I couldn't leave it anywhere.'

Although Chae Sol-ya didn't care at all about the financial gap between her and Iru Da, it was unclear what his family was like.

It was a basket of fruits that she had brought with her anxious heart, hoping that her mother would not find out about her evil intentions. However, when she simply accepted it as a thank you for the gift, Iruda's heart was at ease.

As they say, good people gather around good people, and it seemed like Chaisol's family and those around them were all good people.

'I will have to live with Chaisol by my side for the rest of my life.'

As he went inside, he couldn't help but feel a little excited. He tried his best to control himself in front of an adult whose face he could only see slightly, but he felt anxious in a good way because he had received an unexpected and precious gift.

“…Hey, and. Sergio Hunter just arrived too….”

“You came first and we were talking among ourselves first. I should have told you in advance. I’m sorry.”

“No, it’s okay. Does he come here often?”

“Come visit us often, even if not often.”

"okay."

As I entered the living room, I saw Chaisol lying on top of Sergio

Hunter. He rolled around behind his white priest's robes and smiled brightly at the sight of his partner. Chaisol's face lit up.

“Ruda, why are you here now!”

“I spent some time sending the people I came with to other places.”

“Brother Geo is here too!”

“Yeah, I can see it too.”

After hesitating for a while, Iru bowed and said hello.

“It’s been a while, Sergio Hunter.”

“Sister Iruda is still thoughtful and kind.”

“Oh, no….”

“You must be tired from coming from far away.”

“I’m not that tired.”

“Well, today should be a day where you don’t feel tired even if you’re tired, right?”

"yes…."

Cha Ara smiled brightly at Iruda, who was smiling shyly and awkwardly. Iruda's mature attitude made her look so cute. Cha Ara cleared her throat and lowered her high-pitched cheekbones and spoke.

“Okay, now let’s begin the first pajama party of the Cha family!”

“Waaaah!!”

Yes, they gathered to play.

That's why Geo didn't have time to plan an overthrow of the Earth.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (333)

333

Episode 333

It's easy to forget because he doesn't interfere, but Sergio Hunter could be said to be the guardian of the pair of Chaisol and Iruda. He often supported them in the future.

“I was a little surprised when I got a call from Father Kang Seo-dam.”

In other words, 'Sergio Hunter' was also the guardian of two children. In addition, he was a target of public attention in the Solar Church. This means that if something happened to these young prospective priests, Kang Seo-dam could not help but contact them.

“I know it must be hard for a prospective priest, but I heard you got a vacation.”

“Ah, yes. I was lucky enough to be able to contribute to this expedition….”

“I heard that you are participating in various internships in order to graduate early.”

“I was able to get the position thanks to the goodwill of the priests.”

Iruda treated her guardians with as much courtesy and humility as possible.

'Your mother also told you to be very careful.'

Although he hasn't been seen in dungeons or media recently, his opponent was Sergio Hunter. He is an unofficial member of the collection. He is capable and has a good personality, so there were many places that wanted him.

'They say his only flaw is that he's a collector's son.'

In short, he is a person who is really not bad at all to befriend. For Iruda, a prospective priest whose only plausible position is that he is a first-class citizen, he was originally someone who was difficult to even meet.

Above all, according to what I have heard, he is a stable all-rounder. Right now, Iruda and Chaisol have no reason to go to the dungeon with him, but the future is uncertain. Iruda understood his mother's advice. He was an adult who had to look good if possible.

“I got a good score on this test too.”

“Well, I heard that story too. You can get report cards every quarter.”

“Oh, you must be very busy, but you checked. I know that reports about grades and attitudes are sent to the guardians, but I heard that not many people personally check them… I assumed you wouldn’t know.”

“You don’t have to be so flustered. Sister Iruda has never been rude to me. But I see, it’s a vacation….”

Chae Sol, who had been rolling around in Geo's arms, suddenly got up and shouted.

“This is rare! There aren’t many kids who prepare for early graduation, and no one takes a vacation from their internship! The teachers praised us a lot!”

“It’s amazing that you’ve already started to stand out like this. Are you hurt anywhere? Are your seniors treating you well, Brother Chaisol?”

“Why are you speaking to me formally?”

“Yes, Isul-ah. Aren’t you tired?”

“It’s not hard!”

“It’s cute….”

Geo came closer and touched Chaisol's cheek, who was wrapped around his leg. Chaisol left the fate of his cheek in Geo's large hands. Iruda was a little taken aback by that sense of distance.

“Tea, tea… That won’t do….”

“Eww, why?”

“He is our guardian. We should behave properly.”

“Even if you don’t do that, Geo hyung won’t get angry.”

“Even if you don’t get angry, you may feel difficult or uncomfortable.”

Geo smiled and shook his head at Iruda, who was struggling.

“Why would you get angry when a child is acting up? It’s not hard or uncomfortable. I hope Sister Iruda can also feel at ease.”

“But, but….”

“It may sound grandiose to call you a guardian. But when have I ever pretended to know anything about your activities under the name of a guardian?”

"…no."

Even her mother found that point peculiar.

The guardianship system basically existed to take over the good sprouts. It is common for guardians to protect the child as their own while interfering in every little thing.

'It's a kind of networking and investment to recruit good priests. It's not a simple donation activity.'

In that sense, it was very rare for someone like Sergio to just send money and leave it alone.

However, it was ambiguous to pretend to know why they were doing that from the position of the sponsor. To a prospective priest, a guardian was a very high-ranking adult. As a prospective priest who was almost like a doll, it was true that it took a lot of courage to even make a single contact.

Iruda hesitated and asked.

“…Would you like to be more comfortable with me?”

“That’s what I think, but hmm. I think it’ll get better over time.”

"yes…."

Iruda was worried.

'What does it mean to be comfortable with adults?'

Thinking that way, he looked at Chaisol. However, no matter how much he thought about it, it wasn't that. Iru didn't have the confidence to act as innocently as Chaisol. Besides, weren't the two of them really close?

'It looks like you visit this house often.'

In many ways, the situation was different from Iruda's. So how should we treat the other person? Iruda's forehead furrowed deeply.

‘… Yeah, it’ll work out somehow.’

If there was a problem, wouldn't you have told me first? He wasn't the kind of person who would exploit me by finding fault with something like that. In the first place, what good would it do to exploit the weaknesses of a prospective priest, someone as good as Sergio Hunter?

After thinking that far, Iruda finally nodded.

“…I will do my best.”

“…Is it okay to treat you comfortably?”

“Oh, maybe?”

“Then let’s do that.”

As always, Geo smiled gently and looked at Cha Eun-hyeok with a nervous expression.

“I think it’s about time we had dinner.”

“Then… should we get ready?”

“Can I borrow your kitchen for a bit this time?”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok thought about it.

'This crazy mystery?'

What on earth are you going to feed the kids?

Cha Eun-hyeok kept his mouth shut, and Cha A-ra looked at Geo with a shocked expression. Cha Sol was lying there without a thought. Looking at the faces of the two adults, Iru-da unconsciously understood.

“Ah, so, is that Sergio Hunter cooking it himself…?”

I wouldn't say it was a kind of prejudice, but it was certainly surprising.

Unless you have skills in that area, it’s rare for a Hunter of the A-class level to cook. If you’re not going to eat it yourself, cooking is more of a service, and it’s also a form of labor.

Of course, Geo had made and sold food at the previous collector's parade, but the rumor had not reached Iruda's ears. So, he couldn't help but be surprised by this situation.

'I heard that you are such a precious young master that the collectors try not to let you go outside.'

There were quite a few hunters who cooked as a hobby. But now, it was clear that they were going to cook for the people gathered here. Iruda thought it was very strange. The most noble person in this place was going to treat the rest.

But Sergio Hunter still had a clean face.

“Yes, I feel pretty confident even though it looks like this.”

“I thought you would be outstanding.”

“It’s embarrassing, but even Hunter Seo Seo-hee praises my skills.”

“Huh? Oh, that… Hunter Seo too…?”

That was even more embarrassing.

'Are you familiar with the symbol of eternity?'

I've never heard of such a thing.

'I knew you were a stickler for mysticism, but it seems like you're better at controlling information than I thought. Seeing as it's not known to the world that you're even acquainted with the Symbol of Eternity... That must mean that Sergio Hunter and the people around him are doing a good job of suppressing information.'

As was his habit, Iruda pondered 'How should I utilize this?' and soon lowered his head. He was not the type of person to use such a clumsy strategy. Iruda felt ashamed of his calculating intentions and spoke to Sergio Hunter.

“I won’t tell you this, no matter where I go. You may not believe me, but I’m a tight-lipped person….”

“You don’t have to worry that much, but… if you could help me, I would be happy to accept it.”

"yes yes."

Seeing that he didn't refuse, it seemed like the right thing to do was to keep his mouth shut. As Iru was internally sighing in relief, Cha Eunhyuk slowly approached him and whispered.

“Are you really going to cook?”

“Give me the kitchen.”

“What are you going to make? I will listen and decide.”

“Oh my, why don’t you trust me like this…?”

“Does it look like that?”

Cha Eun-hyeok could feel it when he saw the way he whispered back. This person was George right now. If anything, it was fortunate that he was still the 'Sergio Hunter' in appearance.

“Maybe you’re making something weird….”

“Everything I make tastes good.”

“You know I’m not talking about taste, George.”

“I tried to make it simple.”

“A simple seven-course meal, something like that?”

“Can I do that?”

“Is it true that it has no effect on the human body?”

“All foods have an effect on the human body, right…?”

“So, can you pretend that it’s ordinary food?”

“Aha, like our street food stall menus?”

“No, this….”

Cha Eun-hyeok kept his mouth shut. Then he nodded.

“…It would be difficult to prepare meals alone, so please come with me.”

“Hey, oppa, are you okay?”

“We can’t just let the guests do the work.”

“No, that, uh, yeah.”

Although Cha Ara was the only one in the household who enjoyed cooking, she decided to step aside. Cha Ara was the one who knew where their eldest son was working and making money these days.

'I believe.'

I don't know how things got to this point, but Cha Ara trusted her brother. Even after all that shit, he was still human. Thinking that he would somehow handle it, Cha Ara passed the turn.

“Then should I cut some fruit in the meantime?”

“No, we’ll do that too… You watch the kids.”

“Yeah.”

Cha-Ara felt sorry for her eldest son who was trying hard to swallow his sadness.

'How did I get it wrong?'

What a pitiful human being, having to cook with the divine in the body of an unawakened being.

* * *

After finishing the meal, Iruda lay down peacefully.

“…You shouldn’t lie down right after eating….”

“Why not?”

“…That’s not polite.”

“Isn’t it okay if it doesn’t hurt?”

“…Isn’t that rude…?”

The Awakened Ones did not have indigestion or anything like that, even if they ate and lay down right away. Above all, Iru Da and Chae Sol were possessors of outstanding talent. That meant they were not weak enough to be harmed to that extent.

But for some reason, adults didn't like the act of lying down right after eating. So Iruda thought it was rude behavior. In other words, Iruda had nothing to say.

“Could it be that it is some kind of custom?”

“What kind of custom is it?”

“Isn’t it the most basic thing for a normal human body to do before lying down after digesting everything?”

“I don’t really understand what you’re saying.”

“You’re just pretending not to hear because you want to lie down.”

“Hehehe!”

“I don’t know either….”

It was a situation where I would have to lie down anyway. It was expected to be cold in a house with poor insulation in this chilly weather, but for some reason my whole body felt tired.

'It was really delicious.'

Iruda was reviewing the meal prepared by Sergio Hunter.

Iruda grew up in a wealthy environment. Since I was young, I have been to all kinds of restaurants and tried all kinds of food that is healthy and expensive. However, the seven-course meal prepared by Sergio Hunter was truly fantastic.

'Did you bring those herbs yourself?'

Especially the Dongpo Pork, which has a strong medicinal scent, is really, oh, really good.

“…You won’t open a restaurant, will you?”

“My brother is thinking about opening a restaurant.”

“When do you plan to open?”

"…huh…?"

Chae Sol looked at my partner with a rare expression of trembling. My brother said he was thinking about it, not that he was preparing to open a business. No matter how much I thought about it, it was a question that skipped a step.

“I think Ruda breaks down sometimes.”

“I will reflect on it.”

“No, that, yeah… Okay… Okay… Then….”

Geo, who had been quietly watching the conversation between the two, offered an apple.

“Why don’t you try some fruit?”

“Oh, thank you.”

Iruda got up right away and received the finely cut apples. The fruit in the basket that her mother had prepared must have been in really good condition, but strangely, it didn't taste as delicious as it used to.

'what.'

I think my sense of taste was ruined because I had just eaten something so delicious.

“…Is there a restaurant by any chance….”

“I’m just worrying.”

“Where do you plan to serve it….”

“I’m still thinking about whether or not I should really do it, so I don’t know yet.”

“Our house has a really nice lot.”

“Haha, I’ll contact you when I’m really ready.”

You really need to prepare.

'Isn't it a sin against humanity not to open a restaurant with such skills and talent?'

Of course, starting a business was something that he wanted to do, but it was a little unfair. Chae Sol-i's entire family was close to Sergio Hunter, so there would be opportunities like this often, but this was not the case for Iru-da.

'I feel deprived.'

Iruda had become a much more mature person.

* * *

The two diligent children fell asleep at 9 p.m. after finishing their digestion.

“…….”

"…hmm."

Geo asked, rubbing his chin.

“Is this what a normal pajama party is like?”

“Uh, well… we’ve never done it before….”

“Wouldn’t it have been a more boisterous event?”

“It’s right for children to go to bed early.”

“That’s true, but why do I feel so empty….”

Eunhyuk Cha gave his boss a piece of his mind.

“That’s dopamine addiction, George.”

“Oh, but I’m telling you, it’s not like this originally?”

“Let the kids sleep, please.”

“I feel so wronged, I feel like crying.”

George felt extreme regret.

I had no intention of spending the night like this.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (334)

334

Episode 334

In a peaceful bed that was too peaceful to regain composure, Iru suddenly sensed something strange.

It's dangerous.

"…uh…."

At one point, she opened her eyes and found herself in a beautiful garden.

“…….”

It was literally a garden.

A typical garden with various flowers and trees, not the 'garden' that has been causing a stir in the world recently. The sky was dyed pink and lavender, and clouds were floating around.

A world filled with sweet and dreamy beauty.

'First of all, it's not my dream.'

Iruda was so sure of it.

'There's no way I could have such a pretty dream.'

There were other reasons, but that was the conclusion. This garden, so beautiful that it was a shame to just look at it, had a strange atmosphere.

Iruda realized that she was sitting on the bench and got up from her seat.

“…Where on earth is this?”

“Rudaya!”

“Chaisol?”

“There’s also Ruda!”

“No, you….”

Iru stopped Chae Sol, who was approaching with a welcoming face.

“Wait a minute, there’s no guarantee that you’re the Chaisol I know. No matter how much I think about it, this doesn’t seem like a normal dream, so it’s only natural that you’re a fake, and in that case, there’s no telling what kind of side effects there might be if I allow you to approach me.”

“I’m sorry, but please explain it to me more easily.”

“Let’s keep our distance since it’s hot in the middle.”

“Hmm… I guess that’s true too!”

Chaisol nodded obediently.

“I don’t have a necklace either.”

“Oh, me too….”

The twins took off their shared necklaces to keep track of each other's locations and slept together. It seemed like their bodies had been lifted out while they were sleeping, so the two of them had to be even more suspicious of each other.

To be honest, Iruda felt a little proud.

'I brought that foolish kid here.'

It seemed that Chae Sol was also suspicious of Iru Da's identity. I don't know if the other person is real or fake, but if it's the Chae Sol she knows, it was a huge step forward. Especially in a space like this, I felt that the effort I put in was even more rewarding.

“Should we first do a light check on each other?”

“I’m good, I’m confident!”

“No, I’m not playing a game….”

The two had gained experience through several recent training sessions. They also learned how to deal with situations where each other's identity was unclear. They checked the truth through several conversations that only they could understand.

Fortunately or unfortunately, everything matched up in terms of 'memory'.

“Okay, now that you’re not the Chaisol I know, that means you’re something even more terrifying. I’ll be prepared to run away just in case.”

“Yeah, me too….”

“I told you not to be disappointed every time just because you didn’t believe me the first time. This is a natural procedure. It’s not an act that will tarnish our deep friendship and trust.”

“Of course I know.”

Chaisol smiled and held out his hand.

“Okay, the last one!”

"okay."

The two exchanged their divine powers one last time.

‘This is… the divine power of the sun.’

Iruda's face brightened without a trace. There was a cold feeling like the deep sea, but it was much more passionate and splendid. Such a colorful and strange divine power of the sun could only be used by Chae Sol.

And it seemed that Chae Sol was also convinced.

“This is Ruda’s!”

“Chaisol, aren’t you specifying things too quickly?”

“Why can’t we just exchange powers from the beginning?”

“…The dialogue through human voice and language is a necessary process. Above all, you know that if you are deceived when exchanging divine power, you could end up in big trouble.”

“Yeah, so I’m checking them in order of least risk… Since mystery is bound by rules, most bad things fall through this process of questioning and answering.”

“It would be better if there were artifacts or insight skills, but for now, let’s be satisfied with this.”

Iruda grabbed the hand that had been holding each other to exchange divine powers and dragged it along. As if it was something that happened all the time, Chae Sol was also dragged along leisurely. The two naturally stuck together and searched for a way out of the current situation.

“I think I was dragged into a conditional dungeon.”

“You’re talking about the virtual dungeon, right?”

“At least I don’t remember moving anywhere.”

There was a strange beauty there. I found myself drawn to the various structures that I had come across. The clouds that were like cotton candy, the waterfalls that sparkled and fell, the various flowers that swayed in the gentle breeze.

“…It looks like a garden.”

“I can’t see any monsters.”

“Either there really isn’t one, or we just couldn’t find it.”

“I wish it weren’t there, I like it here because it’s pretty.”

“Well, not really.”

“Huh? Isn’t it pretty?”

“It’s not a matter of taste. This place certainly has great aesthetic value, but….”

Iruda had been feeling uneasy since a while ago. In this beautiful place, like a garden of dreams and fantasies, there was a strange feeling that was hard to describe. Iruda thought about it for a moment, then quickly defined it.

“…It feels so alive that it makes me feel uneasy.”

“Plants are originally alive.”

“What I mean is, it’s like a living, moving creature.”

“Huh…?”

“…I don’t even know what I’m talking about.”

“Oh, I know that.”

Chaisol said as if she had heard it somewhere before.

“Isn’t that stuffed alive?”

"…what?"

“Oh, I heard there’s a piece like that in the collection.”

“There are works of art that have been stuffed alive…?”

Iru was shocked. I had heard many times that collectors were lunatics pretending to be gentlemen, but it was still a disgusting sound. Chae Sol groaned as if he was thinking deeply.

“Uhhh… Maybe? I don’t know for sure since I heard the story from Geo hyung. But he said that the black cloak was stuffed alive… So I think I know what Ruda was trying to say.”

“You’re the son of the black cloak, how can you say something like that? Isn’t it a top secret?”

“Aren’t I your son? I’m your younger brother?”

“Anyway, you’re the one who bought it.”

“I won’t get mad about this, it’s okay.”

"no…."

“Brother Geo doesn’t get angry about things like this.”

“…….”

After a moment of silence, he nodded.

“…I was a little taken aback, but you’re right. That’s exactly what it felt like. It was like looking at stuffed animals alive. Like exhibiting living creatures in a museum, even though they’ve been soaked in formalin…”

“What is formalin?”

"…antiseptic."

“As expected, Ruda is smart.”

“Oh, okay, thanks.”

The two slowly looked around. If you look closely at this beautiful scenery, it seems like it is the most childish and fantastic world that children can imagine. It is also full of absurd plants and animals.

Flowers blooming with candy, a lake made of chocolate, a beach with a hermit crab that looks like a chocolate bun lying down. A tree made of Baumkuchen. A pole with cotton candy clouds hanging over it. A spring where soda bubbles up. And other landscapes filled with sweet things… .

“This is delicious.”

“I don’t know whether I will eat or not.”

“Hot chocolate, do you want some too?”

"no."

Iruda's gaze, which had been looking at Chaisol's peaceful appearance, soon reached the empty space. No, in fact, it reached nowhere. What Iruda wanted to see did not respond to her will.

'The system is down.'

Is this part of the recent system error? However, it is not a simple error or omission; it has not responded in the first place. Is this a characteristic of the dungeon? If so, can this place really be called a 'dungeon'?

It would have been better if there had been monsters, but Iru felt a terrible sense of discomfort in this peacefulness.

‘A literal fantasy world… .’

It is a sight that would be appalling to uneducated children who do not know how to restrain themselves. Sweet and salty foods bloom into plants, and cute animals made of cotton and cloth pass by harmlessly.

There was no oppression or responsibility. It was a beautiful world where I could just eat and enjoy. This ticklish feeling that everything was affirming me. But that was why it was strange.

“Where on earth could such a world exist?”

“Huh? Hey, it’s here.”

“Utopia should never exist.”

The instinct of living things is selfishness. Starting from the survival instinct to preserve oneself, they continue to live by consuming existing resources. That is how they coexist. In the process, there was no way for everyone to be satisfied and happy.

That is why this place is no different from a living but empty hell.

“Is this the afterlife created by some capricious evil spirit? No, that doesn’t make sense either.”

There is no such thing as perfect happiness anywhere. But here, it clearly exists. The fear that comes from the gap slowly eats away at Iruda. There was a sense of impatience running up the tips of her toes.

How on earth did I get dragged here? What on earth is this place for?

“… Of course, the divine is omnipotent and omniscient beyond our imagination. Or close to it. So if that great mystery were to decide to create a utopia, it might be possible, but Chaisol.”

“…….”

“Can you see that as one world? Isn’t it a huge deception and a play? Can you really see a world where everything is controlled by happiness and satisfaction in a positive light?”

Look at the tough flora and fauna of this place. The tiger became friends with the rabbit. Because they are dolls, they are deprived of the need to eat and drink, so they do not hunt or be hunted.

A cold sweat broke out on Iruda's hand as she held Chaisol's hand. Her gaze was scanning this utopia in detail.

I couldn't quite put strength into my hands. My pale fingertips were shaking slightly.

“Whether it’s a dungeon or the afterlife, it’s all bad taste. At least that’s what I think. Isn’t it too much? Isn’t it too human-centered happiness? Everything here is simply cooked and exists for the peripheral pleasure of humans, to be eaten… and the plants are made of cotton and cloth, so you can’t hunt anyone or graze.”

“…….”

“Chaisol.”

“…….”

“Chaisol, answer me.”

“…….”

“…….”

Then, he turned his stiff head and looked at Chae Sol.

'Chaisol?'

'There's Ruda too!'

'Chaisol, aren't you being too specific too quickly?'

'Why can't we just exchange powers from the beginning?'

'Anyway, you bought it, Chaisol.'

'I won't be mad about this, it's okay.'

'Chaisol.'

‘…….’

Up until now, it has never once affirmed the 'definition' of Chaisol.

He did not respond to the name Chaisol, did not answer questions asked of Chaisol, and gave different answers to explanations directed at Chaisol. And the meaning of this was clear.

Then I took my hands away, soaked in cold sweat.

“Who are you?”

This is no ordinary dungeon.

Also, this is not a tea spoon.

* * *

“Who are you?”

Yes, George was not Chaisol.

“As expected, Ruda is smart.”

“…….”

“…Um, I’m sorry….”

“…….”

“Really, I didn’t mean to scare you.”

Let me make an excuse.

'No, but really.'

He was just preparing a small event. If he had that cute, cute mouth talking about a pajama party, then it would have been natural to make a cute, cute mess.

But Iruda was a healthy child who matured early, and Chaisol was a new child who respected such a partner. George just wanted the two of them to enjoy their precious vacation more.

“You’re so different from the kids I know.”

“…Not all children have the same appearance. Each individual has distinct characteristics. You should study a little more about humans, don’t you?”

“It’s a bit of a leap, but you’re right. It was my fault, I should have investigated further.”

Kids these days are so smart it's crazy. They mature earlier than you can imagine.

When I was young, I just liked things that were interesting, fun, and had happy endings, but was Geo's thinking too one-dimensional, or did the world change that much? The kids he knew didn't necessarily point out the flaws in fairy tales.

‘Just like how the witch’s candy shop only thinks it’s delicious, so they don’t necessarily worry about the preservation and management process… .’

In that sense, I was surprised at how smart my friend Iru was. I just stayed behind to manage my image so that Chae Sol, who had gone off to play with another dream, wouldn't feel betrayed, but I think the child was very surprised before going any deeper.

Iruda's gaze was warm.

“What on earth is the purpose of your approach? Where is Chaisol, and where am I?”

“…….”

Only then did George suddenly have an idea.

'Hey, did I ruin my first impression?'

I guess so.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (335)

335

Episode 335

“Oh my sun, my goodness.”

Meanwhile, 'Geo' did not just sit still.

“Someone please drag Mr. George out.”

“Persecuting the young and weak, tsk… you loser.”

“Suddenly, I became a piece of trash that scared children.”

“To be honest, I feel hurt that we are being treated the same, so can’t we treat each other separately?”

“That might be difficult, since I have a crime that I couldn’t prevent in advance.”

“It’s out of control in many ways, it’s difficult.”

“Let’s come to our senses before our little sister gets more scared.”

“Anyway, shouldn’t you be careful about what you’re joking with when joking?”

“I’ve lived and suffered through many hardships with my children….”

Eventually, Geo volunteered to put on the leash.

“What a truly amazing person.”

Sometimes when I look at George, he seems really dry.

It's strange how love and hate are inevitably meant to be mutually exclusive.

* * *

“Um, I really didn’t mean to scare you….”

“…….”

“…Everyone is scolding me.”

“…Ugh.”

After a while, he paused and stepped back.

I couldn't tell what kind of being the other person was. However, the divine power unique to my partner that I felt through 'Chaisol' was true. Even if I were to imitate it, at least it was a divine mystery.

'I may have acted too hastily because I was sensitive to the fact that it took the form of a teacup. I shouldn't have provoked the other person...'

Is this guy an evil spirit?

'No, it may be that it is meaningless to distinguish them in that way in the first place.'

The distinction between traditional gods and evil gods is based solely on human standards. So even if a god appears to be traditional at first glance, it could be interpreted as an evil god in some aspects. It seemed like that was the situation now.

'Father Kang Seo-dam also warned us several times not to believe in divinity.'

They could study humans and think from their perspective, but only rarely. And even if they did, it would only end up being a great mystery imitating human perspectives. It could cause disasters big or small.

But I had that question.

'… I know it's really stupid to think like this about a mystery, but still, isn't this place really disgusting?'

It was clear once again that the opponent was not human. Something in the shape of Chae Sol answered.

"I'm sorry, I didn't know you would hate me that much."

"…! Thinking…!"

"I answered without thinking because I was so heartbroken. Could you tell me which part was disgusting? I'll be more careful not to make it unpleasant next time I invite you."

"……."

"Rudaya?"

As expected, this thing didn't have a human heart. It was creepy how it was imitating my partner. It just wanted to 'study' humans. Iru hesitated for a moment, then took a deep breath.

'... Fortunately, apart from the instinctive disgust, the other party is benevolent. When such a high-ranking being offers to imitate a human first, it is only natural that one should comply... .'

Playing to the opponent's rhythm was the best way to survive when caught up in a mystery. Iruda gradually took to heart and mind the things he had learned in the temple.

So then, is this being really one that allows lies?

“…Can you lie?”

“Of course, we all live our lives lying.”

“Then I can lie too, since I am a ‘human’ like you.”

“Oh, how cute… How scared you must have been before making that bold proposal.”

'Chaisol' smiled cutely. There was no sense of discomfort in that appearance, but rather it was creepy. This being not only had the form of my partner, but also knew how to use that form naturally.

It nodded as if it was willing to give its permission.

“Of course you can lie, Ruda, if you want.”

“Don’t you consider lies as deception?”

“It can be poison or medicine. But if everyone had to be honest all the time, how could humans form a community? A little lying is a good lubricant for relationships.”

“…I understand.”

Moderate, lie.

‘… It means to please someone.’

It was less risky than having to answer everything honestly. If I had been forced to be honest, I might have to say something that would upset the other person. But at least I said it wasn't like that.

“…What question did you just ask me?”

“I’m curious about what could be improved here.”

“In fact, I spoke about it all while holding your hand. Utopia cannot exist, and should not exist. That in itself is a great deception and contradiction.”

“Don’t you think that deception and contradiction should not exist?”

“No, but if this place was really made to make humans happy and satisfied… shouldn’t it at least be non-disgusting?”

“What part did you find unpleasant?”

“That ideal happiness exists.”

It still gave me the creeps.

“And all that happiness and satisfaction exists just for humans.”

“Luda has a very broad perspective. Don’t we all look at the world based on our own race?”

“But this is not it. There will be many people who will feel uncomfortable, even if it is secretly. These, these….”

After hesitating and thinking about it for a while, Iru finally decided to answer honestly and opened his mouth.

“All the plants and animals in this space you created were modified for humans. They were stuffed alive. They were made into the most childish and base forms that humans can enjoy.”

It couldn't be called an ecosystem. But all of this was creating an ecosystem, as if imitating beautiful nature. It was a play, just for the one human being who came into this world.

What would happen to this play if its only audience, Iruda, disappeared? It was scary and terrifying to see all the plants and animals devotedly looking at me as if they were forcing me to be happy.

“…It’s terrible.”

“It’s sad, we worked hard to make it.”

“…Do these animals and plants have selves?”

“They are just friends, dolls and food.”

“How can you call them ‘friends’ when you say they are just dolls and food…?”

“I consider even the smallest creatures and rocks on the roadside as my friends.”

Chaisol's face became sad and tearful.

“Is it hard for us to be friends?”

“…I’ll think about it.”

“Thank you for your consideration, my friend.”

“…….”

“But trust me.”

Within a moment its shape changed.

The shape is like a flower.

Like a bouquet of flowers.

Like flower petals with all kinds of fragrances.

Like a butterfly sitting on it.

Like the wind, like that.

Changed.

“There was no malicious intent.”

“…….”

“…Ah, so sad….”

Beautiful.

“Then shall we pretend it never happened?”

It was disgusting.

* * *

George, who had returned, decided to take a beating first.

* * *

“……?”

10am, a refreshing and perfect time to wake up for the holidays.

“…What is this?”

“Hey, eat with me!!”

“No, what is this?”

Iru looked at the mini bouquet of flowers placed on top of my torso.

“Oh, this is chocolate…?”

“Brother Geo made it.”

“What are you holding too?”

“I am jelly! Animal jelly!”

"aha…."

Looking down again, I saw a colorful chocolate flower that seemed to have been colored with pigments. It was so delicate that it looked like it would crumble easily if held in my hand, and it looked like a real flower. It was a bouquet chocolate with a little bit of miniature roses and various other flowers mixed in.

Iru, who had been blankly staring, took out a miniature rose.

“…there are no thorns….”

At that muttering, Geo came out of the kitchen and said.

“It’s an edible rose made artificially, so shouldn’t it have thorns?”

“Oh, well, it looks like it could be there… I guess I was mistaken for a moment. Well, it’s chocolate, so it’s a bit strange to go out of your way to recreate thorns.”

“I’m so happy that you think so kindly of me.”

“No, would you be that happy…?”

Iruda was taken aback by the smile that was so genuinely filled with joy. And for some reason, I thought I knew the reason for that joy.

“Did I ever say that I didn’t like Sergio Hunter’s gift?”

“Um… no, probably not.”

“…Ah, yes….”

Iru unconsciously frowned at the inexplicable feeling of discomfort.

'Am I missing something?'

My eyes naturally fell on the flower chocolate. I don’t know what kind of trick he used, but the chocolate in his hand didn’t melt. I didn’t feel any cold at all, so I wondered if he had used some kind of skill.

‘…It’s delicious.’

I felt guilty about eating it right after waking up, but it had a strong strawberry flavor, so I wondered if it wasn't just for show. As I ate it, I could taste a little bit of lemon and yuzu, but I guess the flavors differ depending on the color.

“Hey, why the sudden gift?”

“I gave you a gift because I felt sorry that we didn’t play enough last night. I guess it was because I wanted to see you play more boisterously. This is a gift of my reflection.”

“Oh, no. How could it be greedy to wish for us to have more fun?”

“Isn’t it true that happiness becomes poison the moment you force it?”

Sergio Hunter's sea-green eyes curved gently.

“Of course, there are many people in the world who don’t know that….”

“Uh, um, yeah.”

“You don’t have to worry too much, Sister Iru.”

“…I will do that?”

“I’ll just eat until I’m done, just in case my appetite goes away. I’m preparing breakfast with Hunter Cha-ara. Since you said you like medicinal herbs, I’ll also make some samgyetang.”

“Oh, I like that….”

It felt empty, as if I had missed something, but since I couldn't remember it, it must have been nothing serious. Thinking that way, Iruda finally sat up, following the scent that brushed past his nose.

Looking at Ruda like that, Chaisol asked.

“Did you have a good dream?”

“Huh? No, I don’t really dream that much….”

“Let’s do it together next time!”

“What are you talking about, Chaisul… Are you talking about sleeping together again?”

“Hehehe.”

Chae Sol, who had been waiting in the next garden, naturally thought she would play with Ruda, swallowed her regret lightly. I learned that I shouldn't force others to like something just because I like them.

'I said that I couldn't bring Ruda because she was so surprised. George also said that he would apologize formally later.'

I thought that would be enough.

The samgyetang porridge I had for dessert was really delicious.

* * *

“So… I think I’m getting the hang of it.”

“…….”

“Would you like to hear it?”

“…Huh, really.”

Jeong Hae-woon, who was tilting his wine glass, smiled and nodded.

“You’re determined to ruin my few human relationships.”

“If you really don’t want to hear it, then there’s nothing I can do….”

“But I am always on the side of our merciful gardener. I am your hand, your student, your disciple. You can use me as much as you want.”

“No, Jeong Hae-un. You have to want it. Otherwise, what meaning would there be in all your actions in life?”

It was one giant pile of flowers. It was a flower bed where corpses were buried, and a grave decorated with flowers. A lukewarm hand that did not feel warm stroked Jeong Hae-woon’s head and lightly patted his shoulder.

The long bouquet of flowers behind Jeong Hae-un whispered.

“When we call up the virtual dungeon, our eldest brother has already written it.”

"is it so."

“But my pride was hurt because the dream was written in the way my second older brother wrote.”

"so."

“But the world is still full of pathless gardens….”

“Aha, really?”

Jeong Hae-woon tilted his head back and looked at the garden.

“Are you trying to turn us all into gardeners?”

“There’s no harm in doing that.”

“Do you want to be loved that much?”

“I’m either that or nothing.”

“But you hate being loved.”

“I still like it though, it’s something to cherish.”

It was a familiar sight, like a moonlit garden.

“Enough to make me want to die.”

“…….”

“I love you….”

Jeong Hae-woon emptied his wine glass in silence, put it down on the table, and said.

"…teacher."

“Yes, Haeun-ah.”

"teacher."

“Jeong Hae-un.”

“Don't die.”

“You too.”

“You can’t die, right?”

He says it again.

“Don’t die.”

No matter where I looked, the situation was equally horrific, but I found myself laughing.

There was a teacher here.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (336)

336

Episode 336

Jeong Hae-un's dream continued.

Instead of the school that had already burned down, there was a playground in front of it. Various tents and small structures were set up there. It was their own small village built on a playground that could not be called small.

This time the setting was one of those tents.

"teacher."

“Yes, Haeun-ah.”

“…Isn’t that too much?”

“I don’t really understand what you’re saying.”

“Don’t do that.”

Instead of using electricity, which was no longer available, they began using fire. A simple candle was burning faintly, crackling. The face bathed in that gentle light was blunt and somewhat gloomy.

And he also looked tired. Jeong Hae-woon in the dream seemed to know that too.

“You’re not sleeping.”

The tone was rough, but full of worry.

‘… As expected, this is a memory from my younger self. I should be used to it, but it always feels strange.’

I didn't tell my friends about it, but Jeong Hae-woon had been getting some help from George. Or should I say he was being manipulated by him? He was quietly regaining his memories like this.

‘I think I’ve roughly remembered the important context, but I still keep dreaming about these simple daily routines… .’

He looked at my past story, which was unfolding as if it were a dream, with a straight face.

Thanks to George's capricious consideration, Jeong Hae-woon was able to remain calm even in this dream. He had recalled all the big memories, so it seemed that what he would recall today would probably be the small, everyday stories with his teacher.

‘… Yeah, there were times like that.’

Unlike adult Jeong Hae-woon who was inwardly convinced, Jeong Hae-woon in his dreams continued to worry about his teacher.

“The other kids are also, what should I say… anxious.”

“Why should you be anxious when I am studying my abilities?”

The flat voice seemed to be mocking or scolding the other person. However, in the dream, in the past, Jeong Hae-woon never took it that way. His teacher was just a kind person.

So, that would be even more worrisome.

“Honestly, I don’t know if this should be considered ‘ability’.”

Jung Hae-woon in his dream didn't know the source of his worries and had difficulty expressing them specifically. Perhaps because of this, he just threw tantrums without any proper solution.

“Isn’t it just a curse? There’s nothing that can be controlled, and there’s no distinction between the enemy and the enemy….”

“It seems like there are many parts that don’t fit the description of a curse.”

“That’s what it looks like to me and the others. If this continues, it’ll be a problem if the teacher gets hit by some strange curse and passes out again. Wasn’t that enough for the last time?”

“It seems like you’ve made up your mind quite well, as your speech is getting longer.”

“I’m being completely serious, sir.”

Of course, there were 'Awakened Ones' back then. However, there was a reason why they were initially called 'monsters' rather than milder names like 'superpowered ones'. It was because of the miserable words of the awakened ones.

Their abilities were often tormenting not only those around them but also themselves. Jeong Hae-un, the symbol of eternity, knew that it was because he could not control the vastness of the mystery, but it was not like that 32 years ago.

“Then your lifespan will be shortened.”

“Would my lifespan be shortened by examining my abilities?”

“So how can you guarantee that it’s your ability, I mean? You claim it’s your ability, but everyone else says that. It’s just a curse.”

“I really don’t know what to say about this….”

He saw the 'teacher' in his dream tilt his head. Then he blinked his eyes slowly a couple of times. Jeong Hae-woon knew that this was one of his teacher's habits whenever he was lost in thought.

This time he seemed to be struggling to persuade.

“Let’s say you get hit with an egg on the street.”

“Suddenly? Who? The teacher?”

“Let’s assume, Jeong Hae-woon. And let’s assume that I’m very hungry.”

“What is this? No, really….”

“Wouldn’t it be within my discretion to pick up the eggs and fry them to eat at that time?”

“Oh really, teacher, please don’t use such strange analogies.”

“I think you guys are too scared of this ability. Wouldn’t it be better if you made it look funny like this?”

It was a strange and absurd metaphor, but the teacher's face was still calm. It seemed as if he couldn't say anything nonsensical, so sometimes the teacher would tell strange stories like this.

But both Jeong Hae-woon in the dream and Jeong Hae-woon in the real world eventually understood what the ‘teacher’ was trying to say. He was saying that they should use whatever they have. Whatever it is, if it can be of help to them.

It was truly a pity.

'That's why you've been through so many hardships.'

Adult Jeong Hae-woon thought so. He couldn't help but think so. He knew how much Sergio would suffer from this moment onward. Because your affection had become poisonous.

But did he not know that it was Sergio at that time, in this dream? Probably not. He always predicted all the processes and results. He would predict it alone and then silently say, “I like it,” and proceed.

“This could be a curse that I just got by bad luck. The amount is so huge and it’s hard to control. But Haeun-ah, if you think about it that way, what good will it do to Nana and Hae-ra?”

“Can’t I just ignore it?”

“Do you ask me because you want to be sure, even though you know what I’m going to say? Yeah, you can’t just ignore me. If we keep going like this, we’ll just be treated like monsters. Maybe not the people here… Well, eventually, that kind of atmosphere will be created.”

“…Dan Hae-ra said that the government’s actions are unusual.”

Instead of refuting or spitting out more, Jeong Hae-woon in the dream affirmed his story. Why doesn’t Jeong Hae-woon know that Sergio is striving for something bigger and more just?

I just came here because I didn't want to see the teacher collapse from overdoing it again, but we had already come to a conclusion among ourselves. In this new world, a control system, whether this ability or a curse, was needed.

“We talked on the radio, and it seems like the government is trying to isolate those… capable people.”

“I heard that too. But judging from how passive it is, it seems like it’s still in the early stages and they’re just leaving the possibility open. In this situation, there probably aren’t many people who have the luxury of listening to the radio or other broadcasts in peace.”

“Anyway, it’s annoying how you act so reserved and talkative.”

“So you know. It is absolutely necessary to control your abilities. If we leave them like this, those who have awakened their abilities will only be further ostracized and isolated. In just a few more years, they will truly be called curses, not abilities.”

At that time, it would be unacceptable for anyone to find out that he was an awakened human like he is now. In the worst case scenario, he might have to hide his abilities for the rest of his life to avoid being witch-hunted.

“Shouldn’t that at least not happen?”

“Ha, that’s true… that’s true….”

In the dream, Jeong Hae-woon made a sad face. The slightly exaggerated expression was more like a prank to hide his miserable and miserable feelings. In the dream, Jeong Hae-woon pretended to groan and then sighed.

“…I’m just worried. You collapsed while ‘studying’ like this last time, right?”

“Thanks to you, I was able to understand this ability better.”

“No, but I don’t think that’s right. I don’t think the teacher knows how scared we really were. I told you that we were all screaming and it wasn’t a joke.”

“How are you going to survive in this harsh world when you are all so weak-hearted?”

“I know why you do all this. Oh, honestly, I don’t think I know everything, but I know the basics. But when I see you working so hard… it’s natural to be worried.”

He spoke as if he had been very wronged.

“What if God takes you away like this?”

He said he was joking, but he never did. Adult Jeong Hae-woon, looking at Jeong Hae-woon in his dream, bit his lips hard. Yes, back then, I had those kinds of worries all the time.

'Because he's such a perfect person.'

That being by our side, giving us affection, secretly favoring us and willingly helping us. That kind of love and help from Mr. Sergio felt like something we shouldn't have.

It was like a cheat key for the game, so convenient that it seemed like it was breaking the rules of the game, or even illegal. So it seemed like Mr. Sergio would disappear at any moment.

'Because it seemed like I was too unfair a person to exist in this world.'

So I didn't want to create that opportunity. I was afraid that God would notice this huge mistake I had made and take it away. To be honest, it was just forced, no matter how you look at it.

“If the teacher continues like this, he’ll die….”

“I always said it wouldn’t happen.”

“No, I mean, who can’t do it?”

“Anyway, you’re worried that I might die from overwork, right?”

“Could you give me a rough summary?”

“I’ve been taking care of myself consistently. But you know I can’t just sit still.”

Teacher Sergio looked at the Jeong Hae-un in his dream. It seemed as if he was looking at the Jeong Hae-un who had become an adult. He simply surrendered himself to the deepening blackness in his eyes that had become even deeper since the fire and the destruction of the world.

“I am a teacher.”

"…still…."

“And I’m an adult.”

“…Teacher, you’re not the only teacher and adult.”

“The world has changed too much for you to be whining like that, Haeun.”

The voice sounded sad, and when I listened to it again, it also seemed insensitive, as if it was just stating an obvious fact.

“Good deeds are called stupid, and children are considered a burden rather than a thing to be protected. Now, adults will teach their unborn children to be pressured and traded rather than to be considerate and concessional. Or will they even give up on that? It is not strange that the laws and rules change as the world changes….”

“…….”

“…But I don’t want to put a price on what I do, so I’ll just keep acting like the world didn’t change. For now, there doesn’t seem to be any reason for the world to change the way it is now. And I don’t think there are many people in the world these days who are as carefree and thoughtless as I am.”

He spoke softly, like a teacher teaching a young student, but it was also somewhat monotonous and heavy. It was impossible to know what he was thinking just from his tone.

“We were really lucky to successfully create this little village on the school playground. The students and the other survivors are still cooperating, and especially since the students and teachers already knew each other… they are actively trying to do something.”

“If everyone had a conscience, they would do that much.”

“Just by looking at the village that is right down from the mountain, you can tell that this situation is not normal. Haeun-ah, let’s not be upset. We are objectively doing very well. And we had a lot of luck with that.”

“Teacher….”

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been hesitating in his dream, asked.

“Can you see the future?”

“Why would you say something like that?”

“Are we going to fight later or something? And then split up?”

“If I had seen that future, I wouldn’t have taken it easy like I am doing now. But I am not a prophet or a seer, I am just a person who has a few things that I may be better at than others.”

“So…?”

“I just know the diversity of humans. People are diverse and there are many causes for conflict. It would be nice to create our own shelter, but… I don’t think I’m the type of person who can do that.”

"but."

It seemed a little unfair.

“But, teacher, you created the ‘village’ we have today.”

“I keep saying this, but it was just luck and a stroke of luck. To be honest, I’m not an ideal leader.”

“Why do you always say that?”

“That’s true. I’m not the perfect teacher you think I am, I just have a firm belief in what I want and the minimum amount of action I can take to get it done.”

“I don’t know….”

“When will you understand what I mean? I am not the type of person who can lead people.”

His teacher was firm.

Actually, it wasn't surprising. The teacher always had something like that on his lips. When he was about to forget, he would bring it up. In my dream, Jeong Hae-woon had a slightly bored expression on his face.

And his teacher spoke again.

“If I had truly been an ideal captain, things would have been better than they are now. Rather than hiding the village as much as possible and making the students suffocate, more…”

“But we came to the conclusion that it was the best.”

“…We can’t remain isolated forever. We need a counterattack if humanity is to rise again and civilization is to be rebuilt. As the communications team said, several groups of survivors are making contact with each other. But I’m a coward, so I chose to hide.”

“We decided that through a vote. We had enough meetings and everyone was convinced.”

“…….”

He hesitated for a rare moment before speaking.

“…I am not the right person to take responsibility for something.”

In the end, it's the same thing as before.

Jung Hae-woon in the dream really hated hearing such words. As if expressing it, Jung Hae-woon’s face in the dream distorted very subtly. It was because he was sad and irritated, but he didn’t want to show it to the teacher who was already tired.

Even though he obviously knew that, the teacher continued talking.

“I just do what I want to do. I do what I can do, and by some chance, I’ve had good results. The reason I’m working so hard in this position is not because I’m an ideal leader, but because I just wanted to be.”

“…Isn’t that it?”

“Haeun-ah, I’m not as good a person as you think. I know that myself. So I’m going to take responsibility for the things I’ve done. I’ll tell you again, I’m asking you this consistently because I know how bad of a person I am. Do you understand?”

Thinking back now, I wonder if he was having a hard time at the time. Maybe he was suffering among the many people who praised his abilities and regarded him as a pioneer of a new era. Maybe he had sensed that atmosphere early on.

That was why he didn't trust himself and blamed himself so much. If he had known that, he wouldn't have showered him with such infinite respect and trust. The Jeong Hae-woon in his dream was still incredibly stupid.

“… Okay, I understand for now.”

“My current study of my abilities is also part of that.”

“But I wanted to tell you not to overdo it.”

"aha."

The teacher asked.

“Are you scared that I might die?”

“…Yes, I’m scared. I wish the teacher wouldn’t go anywhere and just stay by our side.”

“That might be a bit difficult, but I’m such a free spirit. Once you guys become independent, you’ll just have to shake it all off and run away.”

“But you’re our teacher. So don’t get hurt. Even if you get hurt, recover quickly, and even if you die, come back alive. No, just pretend to be dead and come back.”

“Do you realize that you are asking too much of me?”

“I don’t know about that….”

“But if you’re that anxious, well, okay.”

The teacher nodded.

“…I’ll do my best.”

The dream ended there.

* * *

“It would have been nice if Mr. Sergio’s story had ended there.”

George asked you.

“Isn’t that right?”

But Geo's story continued.

It was a real shame for just one person, he wrote.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (337)

337

Episode 337

When Jeong Hae-woon woke up from his dream, he was crying as usual.

“…….”

It was miserable and devastating.

‘… I thought I was getting used to it.’

I can't think of any way to erase this fucking self-reproach and regret.

As he was shivering from the familiar heat, something cool touched his forehead. It took him longer than he thought to realize that the wet thing was a wet towel.

Jeong Hae-woon turned his head while lying down and looked at the ‘Portrait of Geo’. It was called ‘George’ and was looking at him with its unique jewel eyes shining. Jeong Hae-woon felt a sense of discomfort.

“…Do you know that?”

It was a feeling of discomfort that had become familiar after living with him for so long.

“You, you have such a dry gaze even though you’re smiling like that.”

“No way… Isn’t that a passionate gaze? How can you feel that way when looking at the most beautiful eyes in the world? Are you perhaps mistaken?”

“You like fun things so much and you still admire me.”

On such a topic, he pretends not to care and gives such an indifferent gaze. This garden must have clearly harbored love and hatred towards humans. Jeong Hae-woon wondered where that gap came from.

'I wish I could be like that. I guess I'm not human, so my emotions, expressions, and their sources all exist as if they're separate entities...'

No, that was a terrible delusion. Living that way could never be good for humans. Jung Hae-woon quickly crushed the absurd thought and said what he should have said.

“…Thank you for the towel.”

“That was a very pleasing greeting, Jeong Hae-un.”

“I think my head hurts because I cried so much. I feel better now that I’m getting something cool. I always get this dizzy after having a dream….”

“If you cry too much, doesn’t your brain become dull?”

“That’s how I am now. I should be getting used to it, but I can’t. It’s always new.”

“As the days go by, the tantrums are getting more and more upgraded.”

“…I am grateful.”

The opponent was not his teacher, but George. It was also a garden where he could not dare to ask for such consideration and affection. However, if 'Teacher Sergio' behaved like this, it would be difficult in its own way.

'Because I have committed a sin.'

I exhaled in frustration, but my breath was hot. And along with that, my brain started ringing. Maybe because I cried so much, all the heat gathered in my head. It wasn't a pleasant feeling.

“I know you show me such great kindness even though there is no reason for you to do so. Perhaps it seems to me like a whim, or a kind of love or hate on your part….”

“Does it look that way?”

“Even if that’s true, I know I’m getting care I wouldn’t otherwise receive. I’m grateful for that. Oh, shit. My head hurts like hell… I feel sick.”

Jeong Hae-woon tried to escape from this dull pain by closing his eyes or grimacing. Even the soft sensation of the bed was unpleasant. That must mean he had become that sensitive.

'I think I'm past the age where I should be complaining about being sick.'

Jeong Hae-woon, you dog, how can you be so consistent?

'It's exactly the same even to the point of putting a burden on the teacher.'

Suddenly, I remembered the past. It was a story from when I was a little chick who would always follow my teacher around when the world was just changing. Strangely, my body and mind would get tired even more easily in front of Teacher Sergio.

He must have been tired to begin with, but he must have realized it because he could only show it in front of the teacher. That's what

Jeong Hae-woon thought.

‘Even now, when my opponent is George… .’

Yes, how could I refuse that face? The beloved garden was placed on top of the respected teacher. It was already too late for someone with strong likes and dislikes like Jeong Hae-woon to reject it.

But even in this situation, Jeong Hae-woon was surprisingly able to extract stability from George. It was a truly gangster-like feat that he was able to do that from Jeong-won, who was emotionally extremely uncooperative, even if his actions were like that.

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been blankly staring, opened his mouth.

“…Do you know what happened after that? After the dream I had.”

“Well, I’m not in a position to call it ‘Portrait of Geo’ yet.”

“People were giving you a hard time, teacher.”

Those bastards who eat up that corn.

“The teacher was right. He was a person who was more interested in caring for and protecting others than effectively controlling and manipulating them. Thinking back now, he was quite shy… so he didn’t actively participate in anything.”

Sergio always said that he was neither an ideal leader nor a perfect person. And that was true. But at that time, desperate people needed a reliable support.

That's why people forcibly made Sergio the center of gravity. They believed that he was ideal and perfect. And at some point, that belief began to deepen.

“The teacher’s abilities were truly beyond imagination. Thanks to him, the perception of abilities changed from a curse to something like a miracle… Even though it was only for a very small number of people in a short period of time.”

“Should I say that it’s fortunate that it turned out that way…?”

“That shows how much effort Mr. Sergio put in. But there were people who took it for granted, and things started to get a bit troublesome.”

As the size of the village gradually grew, the voices of the survivors also grew louder. Conflicts occurred more frequently, and even the existing residents, who were believed to be cooperative, started causing accidents big and small.

And they chose the silent and consistent Master Sergio as their refuge. Because of the foolish people, Master Sergio was forced to become a living god. It was truly a terrible thing.

“It was clear that he was absolutely crazy.”

Someone grabbed the teacher by the collar and shook him, saying, “Please do something about it.” Someone got down on their knees and begged for a miracle. Someone, someone. And someone again… .

“I saw it in a movie, when people are pushed to the limit, they start looking for something to believe in. That’s why ridiculous cults start forming. And then there are fanatics who follow them.”

“Do those people sacrifice living people or perform strange rituals?”

“If it was the end of the world, well, I guess I’d give it a try once. It’s not that I don’t understand the desperation. But that was too much. There were a lot of crazy guys out there….”

Gradually, people began to cross the line with Sergio. And Sergio did not get angry or scold them much. Jeong Hae-woon was frustrated by this and asked them.

“I was annoyed and asked why it was so frustrating.”

“Oh my gosh, that’s scary. You’re such a terrible student who gets angry at your teacher….”

“I still remember the answer the teacher gave me at that time.”

“What did Mr. Sergio say?”

“I don’t think I’ll be more admired now than I am now when I’m so angry and upset.”

“Oh my, I can’t help but say that this is truly incredible confidence. That’s amazing.”

“I was a little taken aback when I first heard it too. But, well… that’s what it is.”

In the end, Master Sergio was right. When Master Sergio finally said a few words at the urging of his disciples, people restrained their actions, but they expected and longed for something greater.

The reason was Mr. Sergio's unwavering determination. He genuinely had no regrets about the whole situation. No, he had regrets, but he had absolutely no unpleasantness or burden that a human being should feel.

A reproach without sincerity and a consideration disguised as a reproach. A noble soul that can never be diminished or corrupted, no matter how you look at the bottom of a human being. People noticed it very keenly.

And they came to believe that their thinking was not wrong. They hoped that a spiritual leader named Sergio would take full responsibility for them and work miracles.

“Of course it wasn’t a good flow.”

That wasn't the only problem. There were many people outside of school who wanted to see Mr. Sergio. They weren't the only survivors at the time. The world was in ruins.

In a situation where everything was uncertain, the only noble person stood out. Sergio, who was at the forefront of studying mysteries, was quite adept at performing miracles rather than curses, and above all, he had the ability to establish himself as a spiritual pillar without any trouble.

That would be a pretty sweet existence, especially one so confident and capable about the future.

“So in the end, it popped out.”

“Ah, so cute.”

“I don’t know if it’s cute or not… but we knew we’d be screwed if we stayed, so we ran away. We packed our bags in the middle of the night and ran away.”

“I think people might have stopped me.”

“We were more capable than those people.”

Fortunately, Sergio never blamed himself or regretted what happened. He said that he did what he wanted and did his best. And he didn't mind leaving behind those who showed ungratefulness despite his help.

However, that doesn't mean that Professor Sergio resented them.

“…….”

Even now, when I think about it, I wonder how that was possible.

“…Well, I don’t quite understand. I still don’t quite understand….”

“What part is that, Jeong Hae-un?”

“How could I not resent it? Actually, it felt a bit… cruel.”

“It’s spicy, huh.”

“I just realized that those begging bastards really didn’t mean anything to you.”

“It might not have been completely meaningless.”

George continued speaking with a small smile.

“If it really had no meaning and no degree, there would have been no reason to keep that position until it was revered as a living god. In my opinion, I think they just let it go because it was worth it.”

“That’s kind of scary, I don’t know how that’s possible.”

Jeong Hae-woon asked.

“Did you do that too?”

“Hmm, well….”

The gardener said with a light laugh.

“I did it because I could handle it.”

It was unclear whether this was Sergio's story or George's own story, but he continued to speak.

“There was no reason to change, so I didn’t run away. But eventually, I reached the limit of what I could accept… and that’s why I had a reason to move.”

“…I don’t know how you know our teacher so well.”

“Aren’t I a little bit competent? It’s all thanks to that, do you understand?”

“…Yes, of course….”

Pick-smiled Jeong Hae-woon pointed to the towel on his forehead.

“It’s too damp now.”

“The towel is originally a bit damp. What should I do?”

“Isn’t it time to change it?”

“Umm, how about this instead…?”

A cold hand rose over the towel.

“…Oh, it’s cold?”

“Because my body temperature is on the low side.”

“No, it’s as cold as a freezer. Isn’t it usually just lukewarm?”

“Haha, is that so?”

“Right now it’s just like ice….”

Jung Hae-woon, who was caressing the end of the towel that had become cold in an instant, laughed again without a second thought. After all, it was not uncommon for the garden to be as cold as ice. Jung Hae-woon put his hand on the bed.

“…Actually, we were clinging to each other and trying to run away.”

“Aha, so that’s why.”

“The teacher said that maybe it was a natural phenomenon. Of course, he was thinking of leaving, but anyway, we were the ones who spoke first.”

“Be brave too.”

“Because I’ve been really sick of people lately.”

Even after forgetting about Mr. Sergio, the aftereffects were clearly there. It took quite some time for Jeong Hae-woon and his friends to be able to trust and love humans again. It really took a long time.

“And we hid like that… Yeah, right. Thinking back, we were really bad students.”

“…….”

“…We know you’ll hate us. George, especially you.”

The garden smiled slyly at him.

“Does it really look like that?”

“If you tell me to judge by sight, I’ll be at your mercy my entire life. But even so, I’m the first gardener on Earth. I’m neither honest nor stupid enough to believe only what I see.”

“This isn’t very cute….”

“But I’m definitely useful to you.”

Jeong Hae-woon blinked his eyes, the fever having disappeared, and smiled.

“Don’t throw me away, I will become a necessary existence.”

"well."

“…I should have bowed my head and begged for forgiveness a long time ago.”

“Be radical too.”

“…We, at that time….”

“Okay, now.”

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon, who seemed like he was going to say something more, simply kept his mouth shut and closed his eyes. Then, as if he were falling asleep, he exhaled quietly. George, who had removed the towel, touched his forehead with his cold hand.

With a childlike gaze, as if he were plucking the wings of a butterfly.

* * *

At some point, a strange ghost story began to spread.

It was a ghost story about happiness.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (338)

338

Episode 338

What is the most perfect happiness?

“Oh, of course I know that.”

There is no such thing as 'perfect happiness' anywhere. The ways of the world are truly mysterious, and when one reaches an extreme, the other is bound to become empty.

“But I don’t want to talk about such trite things now. The greatest blessing and disaster of human beings lies in their delicate intelligence, and we can imagine so many things.”

So let's assume. What is the greatest happiness to me? What do humans live for? Isn't living in a utopia with no end in sight the ultimate happiness?

But why do humans end up finding deficiencies even within it?

“Many people have given me gold and silver treasures. They built me houses with ancient gold, bathed me with fairy tears, and made me bedding with silk woven from the leaves of the world tree.”

In addition, the gifts that George received were endless. He received everything that a human could imagine. George did not deny their rarity or high value.

“But I didn’t feel very good, I wonder why….”

Isn't it strange? George liked shiny things. He liked beautiful things. He was happy when he got something rare, and excited when he got something valuable. But that was all.

“That’s why I’ve been wondering for a very long time. What is happiness? What is it that they don’t even give us a reasonable formula for? How can I be happy?”

Oh, that was boring.

“It’s so boring.”

I hope you enjoy it.

He didn't want to just sag like this and become nothing more than nature and mystery. He wanted to remain human until the end and experience the world's greatest joys. He wasn't a statue or a jewel without passion. ... Maybe he wasn't, but I'm not sure now.

Although I was clearly alive, for some reason my blood was not circulating. My heart was beating, but it was slowly cooling down. There was a time when I was so excited by just the hustle and bustle of the inn or a single star over the field… .

“You’d better not bore me any more.”

George has lived for too long.

“You have to make me happy.”

So you had to be my clowns.

Yes, he lived. He lived. It would have been better if he had given up being human from the beginning and had simply fallen into nature and mystery. Unfortunately, he had already missed the opportunity. Now, the karma he had accumulated was too much.

Well, if he becomes a complete garden.

“…nothing good will happen to you.”

I love you.

That's why I hate it.

“…….”

… I have no energy.

Where can there be no fun things?

* * *

A colorful clown asked a passing man.

"What is your happiness?"

“Mom, a monster…?”

"What is your joy?"

“…Isn’t it a monster?”

"What is your pleasure?"

“…….”

The man who was leaving work after a long day of work blinked. His sunken eyes sunk deep into the air. The man, who was gradually becoming calmer as the clown repeated his questions, answered as if in a trance.

“…It would be nice to go home and have a beer before going to bed.”

At best, it was just a taste imitation of wheat made up of weeds and grain by-products from the dungeon, but for a man who had never tasted proper beer in his life, it was the best drink. That was enough to satisfy him and help him fall asleep easily.

Then the clown asked,

"Is that your happiness?"

“Yes, that is my happiness.”

"Why is that your happiness?"

“When I drink alcohol, my head gets dizzy. When I drink beer with salty snacks, it’s really addictive. I want to stay like that forever.”

"That is your happiness."

Clap clap clap!

The clown clapped his hands.

"Be happy, be joyful."

"May you always be happy!"

And when the man came to, he was in his own house.

“…….”

When did I get off work?

"Is that important?"

"Doubts are responsible for your happiness?"

"Are you having fun?"

That might not really matter. The important thing is that he got off work and came home. The man thought to himself as he walked. The heavy suit on his body made it difficult.

"Then I guess I can take it off!"

It was sound advice. The man took off his suit and hung it on the sofa. He changed into comfortable clothes and went into the kitchen. He unconsciously counted the beer cans left in the small refrigerator.

"There are four."

"How many cans will you take out?"

I have to go to work tomorrow too, so I'll settle for just one can.

"Is that your happiness?"

"Does that make you happy?"

Actually, he is not satisfied. The man was an alcoholic. He had no money, so he only bought cheap beer. If he had more money, he could have tried more things. But he had no money. He had no time, and no leisure.

The man came to the living room with a can of beer, feeling regretful. He brought dried squid that he could chew for a long time, as it was better to drink slowly. This was also a side dish made from by-products of the dungeon, but it tasted pretty good.

Then he placed them both on a small table. It felt a bit empty.

"Are you happy?"

No, not really. I don't feel that way. The man opened a can of beer and quenched his thirst. On TV, the same program that was always on at this time was on. It was the same content I always watched.

"Does that make you happy?"

"Does that make you happy?"

It was ambiguous. I don't know. But it might be comfortable because I don't have to think. I just didn't want to end up sitting alone in a quiet living room and feeling depressed because there were no men around.

If that's the case, it'd be better to make it a little noisy. The TV was a substitute for a drinking buddy.

"You are not happy."

"I think you're lonely."

"Do you hate being alone?"

I figured there weren't many people in the world who were better off alone. Well, some people are more comfortable that way, but if you live like that for a few years, you'll probably get lonely. The man chewed on the hard side dish.

"Is it delicious?"

"Are you happy when you eat it?"

No, it's not. But when you chew it, it's sweet and the seasoning on the outside is salty and good. It's not bad as a combination with beer alone. But if you ask me whether it's enjoyable, it's hard to say.

"Be sad."

Are you sad? Maybe so. Maybe it's because I have a friend who talks to me, but I feel particularly lonely today. The man who thought that suddenly had another question.

‘… How can you be lonely when you have friends? The sentence seems a bit strange… .’

"Does it help you be happy?"

‘… I don’t know.’

『In times like that, I recommend you focus on the happiness right in front of you, my friend!』

'I guess I should do that.'

I had to go to sleep soon. I wish this time could last forever, but I know it can't. I just need to go to bed a little earlier so I can go to work looking like a normal person.

"Does commuting help you be happy?"

It was true that he was helping to maintain a minimum level of happiness. The work was hard and his boss harassed him, but in the end, he didn't give him money. They say that taking other people's money is difficult...

"Is your happiness money?"

No, no. That can't be right. What a man needs is not money, but something he can get with it. Something that can satisfy him.

"What is that?"

"beer?"

『Sweet and salty snack?』

『Comfort through him?』

Yes, it seemed like he was looking for comfort in the end. This short time liberated the man. It was the only escape from the tedious daily life. It was a small happiness that was not too risky and could always be reached out and grabbed.

Just this much was enough to comfort the man.

"That is your happiness."

"May you always be happy!"

I'm not sure about fun though.

"oh…!"

There's no need to be so surprised. At this age, it's hard for fun things to happen. Everyday life is the same, and your body becomes weaker and your personality becomes more sensitive.

But it might be fun for a while. I felt at least a little happiness. It might not be the driving force of life, but it would at least be a lubricant for the dry daily life.

"Aha, I understand."

"Be happy, be joyful."

"You are happy."

okay?

"sure!"

Well, I guess so.

* * *

“And the next day, Lee In-wook’s refrigerator was reportedly filled with the beer he had drunk that day. There were also plenty of side dishes that were better quality than dried squid. The analysis results showed that they were all foods from Earth.”

Another researcher asked the researcher's remarks.

“It seems like a wish-granting type of mystery, but is that all? All mysteries of this type require a price.”

“I will continue to explain that part. It is said that Mr. Lee In-wook was in a dazed state for a while. However, the people around him did not notice anything unusual. Even one of the employees of the company with whom he had frequent conflicts went missing."

"According to what you said earlier, that must be the boss that Mr. Lee In-wook was talking about. You said that Mr. Lee In-wook told the clown that he had a boss who was harassing him?"

"I think that must have had a big impact. I heard that that was a big reason why Mr. Lee In-wook voluntarily came to report. He is shaking with great anxiety, thinking that he killed the missing person."

The researcher shrugged.

"Currently, Mr. Lee In-wook is receiving treatment at a hospital under the association."

"Hmm, from what I've heard, it seems like a kind of… fascination addiction. Is that being possessed?"

"The lab also came up with test results like that, but it's unusual in that if you persistently detect abnormalities on your own, you can come back to your senses."

"Well, Mr. Lee In-wook is a civilian. Someone who fell for a clown without even having a proper conversation with him would not be able to resist charm."

"I believe that just as it is easy to fall for the charm, it is not that difficult to escape it. In addition to Mr. Lee In-wook's case, there are about three more similar cases."

"Are they all unawakened?"

"Yes, that's right."

"I guess it's a type of mystery like the monkey's paw… the type that grants wishes, but the process and outcome are quite tragic?”

The Monkey's Paw was a ghost story about a way for humans to fulfill their wishes in a very horrific and tragic way.

For example, if you ask the monkey paw for money, it will kill your family to collect the insurance money. The wish for money itself will be granted, but few people will be satisfied with the process.

Before the catastrophe, it was just a simple story, but since the appearance of the mystery, similar types of ghost stories have been appearing in reality. Perhaps this 'clown' is one of them.

“So is the tragedy that the experiencer experiences the price of this mystery?”

“I think it’s about half that.”

The researcher said, looking through the reports.

“The other half of the price comes when the person experiencing this mystery is unable to escape the temptation until the end, or when he or she does not feel any abnormality in the clown’s whispers. It is assumed that he or she himself becomes a ‘clown’.”

“Is this a guess based on what you witnessed?”

“No one has directly seen the process of the experiencer transforming into a ‘clown’. However, if they cannot escape this mystery, the experiencer will disappear at some point, and there have been sightings of clowns with a similar appearance. Two such cases have been confirmed.”

“It’s ambiguous, but I guess it’s quite possible, then.”

The researcher scratched his head.

“I don’t know if this can be controlled….”

“The conditions for the clown to appear have not yet been determined. If we were to be specific, it would be ‘approaching someone who needs happiness,’ but isn’t that too broad to be considered a condition for appearance?”

“Who in this world doesn’t need happiness?”

“That’s right. It’s not like the target only appears when they’re alone, this mystery. The problem is that people don’t notice anything strange even when they openly appear in a crowd.”

“Do you still remember what you witnessed? Or do you just not feel the strangeness?”

“Yes, even if you ask the witness directly if there is anything strange, they don’t feel it at all. In some ways, it’s more difficult. If it’s a way to erase memories or eliminate any signs, you can at least detect the gap….”

“Then, even if it were witnessed openly, no one would report it. Wow, I’m going crazy.”

"hmm…."

The researcher asked my supervisor.

“Should we ask the gardeners for help?”

“Yeah, I guess that’s what it’ll have to be.”

“No matter how you look at it, this isn’t just a monster, right?”

"therefore."

That day, a call for assembly arrived for the gardeners.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (339)

339

Episode 339

“Geo, I have something to say.”

“Can I make an excuse first?”

A portrait was struck by a meteor shower that struck the gallery.

“I have something to tell you.”

“Okay, I don’t know what it is, but let’s hear it.”

“That’s not me.”

“George is also ‘Geo’? How is that possible?”

“I didn’t know this was possible either.”

“Wow… no, wo… no, ha….”

Yoo Seong-un washed his face with a dry cloth.

He was a veteran gardener. In other words, he was bound to be called in for this 'clown' incident. He was even a collector, so that says a lot about the harsh stares he received today.

“Everyone was looking at me.”

“Oh, why is that?”

“I’m asking if one of the pieces managed by the collection was involved in an accident.”

“But I know collectors don’t make that mistake.”

“I guess there’s nothing we can do about it, since there’s a basic image. It’s true that the collection manages many mysterious works. It’s the only guild that could overturn the Earth if it falls.”

Yoo Seong-un looked at the portrait with its face covered in paint, smiling faintly.

“But why did you have to do the overturning that even our guild leader hasn’t done yet…?”

“I was originally planning an overthrow.”

“I didn’t think much of it because I thought you would figure it out on your own. No matter what, you always value justice and goodwill.”

“If you say it like that, I feel a little embarrassed.”

“But this time, I think the damage will actually be a bit bigger. Isn’t it a bit different from before? I’m talking about the accident that George caused.”

“Yes, I’m sorry for the inconvenience caused by the summons request. It was actually a problem with the collection of works.”

“Well, what is that….”

The portrait, which called itself a 'Collector's Piece', was certainly heterogeneous. Although it has become more adept at mimicking humans through the influence and learning of several 'Geos' in recent times, this heterogeneity clearly shows that it is not human.

Yoo Seong-un nodded, feeling a little embarrassed. It was true that it was difficult, just as Geo had said.

“I did come here with the iron plate laid down, but I’m not sure. Given what happened before, I think the Symbols of Eternity will quickly realize that George is the main culprit in this incident.”

“Is there anything I can help you with?”

“Well, well.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was rubbing his neck with his hand, continued speaking.

“…So, are you in a situation where George is not under your control right now?”

“Yes, that’s right. I put a leash on him, but Mr. George is out for a walk on a leash and bites people. The only control I can give him is to make sure he stays within the minimum. Even if the fairy tale is imperfect, there is still that level of connection.”

“Uhm….”

Yoo Seong-woon, who had been thinking for a moment, asked.

“What does the minimum line mean?”

“I’m sorry, but it’s like the destruction of the Earth.”

“Oh, that’s enough. Thank you.”

“Your expectations of me are very low.”

“No, that’s because there are so many people who don’t usually go that far….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled bitterly.

“Anyway, no matter how much trouble Mr. George causes, it won’t go to the worst case scenario, right? That’s enough, then. As long as the Earth isn’t destroyed, humans can somehow handle it.”

“It seems difficult to live on Earth these days.”

“It’s been a while since that happened, about 32 years? It’s surprising that the Earth has been quiet until now. Of course, in the meantime, ‘Portrait of Geo’ has caused a few incidents, but they’ve all ended without any major problems…”

“I'm sorry about that.”

“Well, I knew a day like this would come someday.”

In many ways, 'Portrait of Geo' had many unmysterious aspects. It did not see humans as toys or inanimate objects, nor did it harbor any obvious malice and cause numerous disasters.

But this 'George' was different from the previous 'Geos'. It was hard to notice him because of his gentle attitude and dull colors, but what he was showing now was clearly malice.

“…It’s kind of funny, a garden that shows more malice than the devil.”

“Rather, I knew that the garden would mostly react indifferently.”

“That’s why it’s so unique. The garden is a space where the mysterious pulse is visualized as a natural phenomenon. In either case, you live your own daily life without much interference from the outside.”

“But Mr. George is also human.”

“I think that’s where this gap or problem arose….”

If George had been a typical gardener, this kind of accident would not have happened.

“What I felt after hearing about this ‘clown’ incident was that it was definitely not done out of goodwill. Unlike other children of the Origin who convey pure goodwill in a terrible way… Mr. George, you know a lot about humans, don’t you?”

Even though he knew, he showed his malice as if he was being kind. It was proof that his true intentions were very twisted. And Yoo Seong-woon couldn't help but be suspicious of this troublesome opponent.

“If there’s one thing that’s a little strange, it’s that Mr. George is still running the ‘food stall.’ I heard from Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok that he’s still in business. Is that true?”

“I think it might be because I also run a food stall, apart from the recent accident. And above all, it is also true that Mr. George loves and likes people.”

“…He really is a complicated person. I don’t even know what he wants.”

Yoo Seong-un finally couldn't hold it in any longer and let out a sigh.

“It seems like he wants all humans to go extinct, and he also wants to treat them like sugar cookies that will soon fall apart. I know that emotions like love and hate exist in this world, but… he’s quite a contradictory person.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been rolling his eyes, soon asked with an innocent smile.

“So, can I ask you for some help?”

“There is a price to pay. Give me a gift, and I will help you.”

“Is there a price you want?”

“Please help me become one with George. Then I will tell you about

George.”

“It fits my purpose exactly. Okay, let’s make a deal.”

“Thank you for your willing consent.”

Geo, who was silent for a moment, opened his mouth again, wondering if he was thinking about it.

“George is a hedonist.”

It was a story about a person and a garden.

* * *

In one dimension, there was a boy named George.

The boy was a commoner, but was born with a beautiful appearance. The boy, who had a lot of love by nature, generously showered love on those around him, and was loved even more with his enchanting voice and eloquence.

People nicknamed that boy 'Geo'.

“Then one day the king stopped by the village.”

It was because the hot springs were a famous tourist attraction. The old king stopped by the village to recuperate and found the boy. The simple-minded country people boasted about the boy, who was the most beautiful and talented person in the village, without any hesitation.

And the old king thought that the boy would make a good playmate for his children. He bought him from the boy's parents for a lot of gold. It was a fair deal.

“It was something that happened often, so I don’t think anyone was surprised. If a local talent is lucky, they can meet a great patron, and then it becomes difficult for them to stay in the countryside like they did before. Naturally, George followed the king into the castle.”

Fortunately, nothing terrible happened. The nobles didn't bother to touch the king's plaything, who was just a commoner, and the non-nobles didn't bother their beloved friend.

George was a man who could receive and share love anytime, anywhere, and everyone in the castle loved him. He laughed, sang, danced, and performed as much as he was loved.

“For your information, George is a minister.”

“Guan… Do you know that word?”

“Doesn’t that mean you’re someone who likes attention?”

“That’s true, but it’s really strange to hear those words coming out of your mouth.”

“Anyway, that’s what it was, George was that kind of person.”

If I had been born in South Korea, I would have been an idol even if I died soon.

At that time, George's position was that of a jester. He was in charge of entertaining the king's children and the people of the castle, and he had no complaints about it. He was a being who enjoyed the attention and admiration from the beginning.

But the problem suddenly arose.

“George gets caught up in something without warning.”

“Did you get kidnapped or something…?”

“To be exact, the garden kidnapped him.”

The heart of the kingdom, the royal palace, the mysterious pulse that exists deep within it. Among them, the garden, an organ that can be compared to the brain, was the one that recognized the boy walking around the castle.

“I’ve never heard of such a case. Gardens, even if they seem self-conscious, are basically close to natural phenomena. Does that mean that such gardens are greedy?”

“Gardens are not all the same. There are very old gardens and young gardens. There is no ego, but greed can be seen. It is like the moon in Dalnimgyo.”

“Oh, like that….”

“So the garden was doing something similar to greed.”

In fact, the garden did not need a gardener. The kingdom had a culture closely related to mystery, and was managed steadily without having to assign a gardener.

But again, this was 'greed'. The garden wanted to possess the boy who was the most beautiful and talented in that dimension. I don't know if it was part of information gathering or true greed... .

“You could think of it as being similar to a highly developed artificial intelligence.”

“Artificial intelligence.”

“While opinions may differ on whether to grant it the status of a person or not, it is an undeniable fact that there can be something infinitely close to a person.”

“…That might be a bit of a headache.”

“That was actually the case.”

The boy had to be kept in the garden for a very long time because he vehemently refused to become a gardener. He was a being who gave and was loved, not a being who could be dragged around as a slave to love.

“George was never captivated by the beauty of the garden until the very end.”

“Oh, how is that possible?”

“It was because of my firm belief that there was nothing in the world more beautiful than myself.”

“It’s amazing.”

After a long fight lasting nearly a decade, the boy was the winner.

“Is that possible?”

“The garden recognized the boy’s beauty and accepted its own defeat.”

“…So how is that possible?”

“With unwavering tenacity, confidence in your appearance, and even more words?”

A feat that only a legendary hero would accomplish. And so the boy returned to his original place. It was only a week after the day he was kidnapped.

The boy's body and mind, trapped in the garden, never grew, but the mystery within him made people quickly notice the boy's long story. The greed that the garden showed, the kidnapping that resulted from it, the garden's admiration and affection that yielded to its stubbornness that remained strong even after several years...

“It would have been an obvious story to the humans in that dimension who lived with mystery.”

The boy who won the garden and received its recognition became a very valuable being. The child who had been just a beautiful and talented person until then had been swallowed up by the garden that was now considered a god and returned.

The fairy tale shone like a crown upon the boy's head.

“People have been greedy ever since.”

“But up until now, I was just looking. I have a rough idea of what it feels like, but the change of stance is quite fast, isn’t it?”

“Before that, the boy was not someone worth being greedy about. He was a clown bought with money by the king, and he was a playmate cherished by the king’s children, so he probably didn’t want to take on the risk.”

“But once you step into the garden and come out, those gazes change? It’s an obvious but annoying story.”

“To them, the garden was a capricious but honorable god. A clown loved by such a god is something to be envied. If I could have it, it would shine on my hand.”

Before, you could admire the boy's appearance and talents without necessarily owning him. But from that day on, the king became greedy and restricted the boy's interactions to only the royal family, and that was the beginning.

“It was the king’s declaration that public property could become private property. As they say, the beauty who would ruin the country, George was finally able to gain freedom after seeing the very end of it. And then he began to wander.”

Even though he had seen a country horribly collapse due to his greed,

George did not care. He was shocked and pitiful, but that was all. The attention and love he received during the process certainly made him happy.

A pleasure-mad man. A man in love. A player with great energy who wants to be cheered on by more people and run around freely. He spent the rest of his life traveling and mixing with many people.

“It was a journey to decorate my life beautifully until the end, but soon after, at some point, I realized that I was not changing. Neither my body nor even my mind had grown.”

“Is it something to do with the garden…?”

“Yes, if things continued like this, it was obvious that he would not be able to grow old and die. After he turned 18, when he could no longer be called a boy, George began to look for a way for him to grow old normally. And….”

"and?"

“I met a dragon.”

“…….”

“It was a bright red dragon.”

* * *

“…Wait a minute.”

Yoo Seong-un asked, holding his head.

“This has nothing to do with our guild leader, right?”

“Hmm, to be honest, maybe not at all?”

“Please, why are you doing this to me?”

“I don’t know either.”

The office worker screamed.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (340)

340

Episode 340

Dragons are greedy creatures.

Living a life close to eternity, they store all sorts of treasures in their nests. Things they once found beautiful, foods they ate while imitating humans, rare minerals known to the world, etc.

It was perhaps natural that such a dragon would covet George… .

“If you’ve already kidnapped her, you should love her with all your heart, Yong-ah.”

“You expect too much from a mere mortal. You’d better shut your noisy mouth before I burn you alive.”

“But my beauty can only be maintained if I receive plenty of love…?”

“I could stuff you without all that hassle.”

“I am the most beautiful, living, breathing, and chattering incessantly. I never thought that the noble dragon, who is called the pinnacle of nature, would be a mere mortal who is satisfied with a corpse. Oh, how sad….”

“…….”

The dragon took George too lightly.

George was a young man who had won a fight with a garden with only a body that was empty. There was no way that George would be afraid of a dragon. He skillfully tried to boil the dragon.

And even in the midst of all this, the dragon felt greedy.

“Surely there is only one like you in the world.”

“If there are two, won’t the fate of this planet be in jeopardy?”

“It’s a good thing you know that, human.”

Dragons loved valuable and rare things. George had a certain charm that really made dragons tired, but his beautiful appearance and outstanding talents were truly unique.

Although it was troublesome and annoying, the dragon decided to keep this human as his rare treasure. It was originally intended to be like that, but it was so unexpected that he was momentarily confused. That was all.

“Ah, tell me to be pretty right now!!!”

“Please stay still!!!”

Although there were times when I often regretted it.

“If you haven’t tried the baked potatoes I make, you’ve missed more than half your life.”

“Are you saying this because you know how old I am?”

“Now, while the potatoes are still warm, they shrink quickly. It’s best to eat them while they’re still shrunken and fill your mouth with them.”

“This crazy guy.”

No, actually I regretted it often.

“Ttaran, card magic! Awesome!”

“It’s not magic, at best it’s an illusion.”

“Huh? So it’s even more amazing…?”

“…….”

Honestly, it's not that it's not fun.

“…That’s true.”

“I thought you’d like it too.”

“Hey, don’t be so confident, human.”

“My soul burns with passion.”

“You can’t ride any further than that.”

So one day, the dragon was very pleased with himself for making George the treasure of his nest.

This was different from other humans. He had the courage to not be afraid or in awe of himself even when he saw Yong-in himself, and he was not only outstanding in appearance but also possessed various talents. Although he had a weak body, his soul was noble and could not be easily broken, and he also could not die.

The dragon was proud to possess that special human. He was truly a treasure fit for a dragon's nest.

“…….”

“…….”

“…Geo, my friend.”

So the dragon became greedy.

“You will live forever.”

“My only friend is betraying me.”

It was a calm conversation.

“…Shall I sing a song?”

It was the day the nest was on fire.

* * *

“George and the dragon were pretty good friends to each other.”

The portrait continued the old story.

“Thanks to George, the dragon learned a joy he never knew, and George favored the special being who accepted his love. To put it a little lightly….”

“Shall we give it a try?”

“We must have been a different kind of dopamine to each other.”

“Oh.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was sitting on a folding chair and drinking coffee, made a tired expression.

“Well, what’s good is good.”

“I don’t know exactly how long they were together. George didn’t really keep track of it, and once he got into something, he had a habit of not looking at anything else.”

“So, if we interpret it… does that mean that George enjoyed his life in the nest without even realizing how much time had passed? No, to be exact, he probably didn’t care.”

“Yes, that’s right. And then there was another problem.”

As the portrait lightly stroked the surface of the frame, a picture of a dragon and a warrior appeared. It was a crooked and rough drawing, as if it had been drawn by a child, but for some reason, I felt like I knew what he was trying to show.

It kept saying.

“Isn’t the story of the warrior slaying the dragon commonly known?”

“At least on Earth.”

“Their circumstances were similar. The warriors invaded the nest to steal the dragon’s treasure, to rescue the people trapped in the nest, and to defeat the fearsome dragon.”

"…and?"

“In the end, the dragon lost. But before my treasure could be stolen and destroyed by humans, the greedy dragon took his own measure. He breathed fire and burned his own nest. It became a cave that would burn forever.”

“George?”

“We reached the source by the dragon, the most mysterious of all creatures on earth.”

“Oh, no.”

A troubled smile appeared on Yoo Seong-un's face. There was nothing good about humans being entangled with the source.

“I didn’t know you could do that.”

“Isn’t that the nature of a dragon’s greed?”

“But even if you are a dragon, is that possible?”

“Of course he paid a price.”

George took off his hat and showed it to the meteor cloud.

“This is the proof, my friend.”

“…Are you my friend Geo right now?”

“Of course.”

Geo, who put his hat back into the portrait, quickly transformed into his usual pitch-black appearance. He lightly adjusted his black cloak. There was no trace of his hat in his hands, not even the slightest hint of it having been removed.

I'm always surprised when something like this happens. It was a portrait that changed really quickly.

“The hat you just saw is a new dragon that Mr. George has created to be punished.”

“Did the dragon get punished?”

“Yes, as punishment for touching the taboo, the dragon’s body and soul were torn to pieces and absorbed into the source. The hat that Mr. George was holding contained a part of that soul and body.”

“Oh, is there a reason why Mr. George keeps wandering…?”

“There is a meaning to traveling in search of the joys of life, but there is also a clear reason to collect my friend’s remains and keep them by my side. Either way, the dragon is destined to no longer be returned to nature.”

“So that’s why you called it a punishment.”

“If we are to consider him a ghost, he would be destined to wander the underworld for the rest of his life.”

That is why George's hat was so versatile. It knew everything and could do everything, if George wanted it to. The hat always followed the will of its friend and master.

“That day, George felt betrayed by everything he loved.”

“Betrayal… Even though it was something like that, George’s reaction as you described seemed quite docile.”

“But there was nothing he could do. George, who wanted to live the most beautiful life, was forever unable to see the end because of the dragon’s obsessive greed….”

“I guess so.”

“It was the selfishness of dragons and humans that created this situation in the first place.”

The reason George wanted to be happy somehow was because he would feel lethargic if he didn't.

“Mr. George is very tired. To be exact, he feels a sense of loss. Before and after meeting the dragon, he had to be locked in the golden prison several times. In the meantime, his nature of enjoying giving and receiving love has made George an even more contradictory person.”

It was a pleasure to be noticed. He was delighted by the response of praising his beauty and admiring his singing. The greed that arose from affection and desire for him was also one of George's many pleasures.

But at the same time, it was burdensome. Loving and wanting him was a happy thing in itself, but it was burdensome. However, those excessive acts were very stimulating, and George really liked the nature of that obsession. However, it was difficult. It was fun. It was painful. It was happy.

The pain was very great because he was a natural hedonist. That is why the portrait simply summarized George.

“This is crazy.”

“…This is the first time I’ve seen you speak so harshly.”

“Oh, I wasn’t swearing… I meant that you’re really crazy.”

It wasn't something that could be defined as love and hate. It wasn't love and hate overlapping, but love and hate. It was only natural that he would go crazy after being dipped in heaven and hell and then taken out again and again.

“It would have been better if he had given up on being human from the beginning. However, even after becoming entangled with the source, George wanted to be human. As you may know, he is a very proud person who pretends not to be… I think he didn’t want to give up what he originally had.”

The identity of being human. That was one of George's precious treasures. Just because it had become a two-legged garden, it would not be possible to see that treasure as a stone. That was George's stubbornness.

But wasn't that time so long?

“So, since you were quite tired, I thought you would just become one with me….”

“You have more accidents than you think, don’t you?”

“I think it’s because he’s young and full of energy that he causes accidents like this.”

“Well, if he’s been in the garden for a long time, wouldn’t it be difficult to say he’s young…?”

“But Mr. George’s mindset and physical age are still at 21.”

“Oh… you’re young.”

It's closer to 'adult' than 'adult'.

For some reason, Yoo Seong-un couldn't help but understand George. Rather than growing older mentally and gaining experience, he was trapped in a brilliant way of thinking where all his cells were running wild.

'Because in that state, I ended up having to deal with such a contradiction.'

Eventually, he would become so capricious that he would almost become sick, and he would only focus on pleasure. It was hard for Yoo Seong-un, who was still human, to imagine that he could spend a long time with his mind and body stuffed.

And about the results.

“…I know why people are so messy.”

A look of embarrassment appeared on Yoo Seong-un's face.

“So what should I do now?”

“I’m sorry, but I don’t know either.”

“This is tricky, I really can’t get a handle on it….”

The problem that immediately came to mind was the 'clown' phenomenon. A monkey-hand-type mystery that keeps asking you for your happiness and forcibly making it happen. It wasn't for nothing that the association called in gardeners.

“This kind of mystery hasn’t appeared for a day or two. But usually, such a mystery is not visible to those who are not qualified as children of the Origin. But this guy is visible to everyone, and yet he doesn’t let people feel a sense of alienation.”

“I think it seems like an attempt to bring the garden into reality….”

“Gardeners who know the time before the Great Disaster say that it was exactly the same as that time. It was a time when there was no system, no distinction between mysteries, monsters, and dungeons, and only ‘mysteries’ existed. Do you agree?”

“I think it might be a little similar.”

The portrait, which seemed to be in deep thought and silent for a moment, continued speaking after a while.

“It looks like they’re trying to… break the ceiling.”

"ceiling?"

“That’s what I was going to do.”

I wished for it, but it wasn't like this.

Mr. Yoo Sung-woon was talking about the monkey hand horror story, and I guess that applies to 'Geo' too. He was a really unique type of crazy guy.

Are you grumpy?

I want to follow that same meaning, but is it that I want to leave a trace as 'Geo' before becoming 'Geo' in its entirety? Maybe I'm having more accidents because I feel reassured by becoming one with 'Geo's Portrait'.

Certainly, people today are too complacent. They depend too much on the system, and because of that, they are stuck in a narrow well. And in the process, my students are suffering, so I wanted to solve things faster.

But this was excessive.

'I tried to help my students, but several people ended up getting hurt.'

Originally, Geo's plan was to just give medicine, but this was like giving both a disease and medicine. It was to the point where I wondered if he had made me paint so many landscapes with this in mind.

'To create a clear villain like now, and a knight order to deal with it?'

That would be the case, as the trials that George would create could not be resolved without many gardeners.

Geo seemed to know what George wanted. He was going to be the one who would eventually lose, so he wanted to think as much as he could. In the process, the Earthlings would become accustomed to the mystery to the point where they wouldn’t need the system, so it would be mutually beneficial in many ways, he argued…

I think I sent this.

"…hmm."

It was a very difficult situation.

'The idea that I had only thought about has now become a concrete plan.'

I was just opening my mouth, wondering what to eat, when he suddenly said, "You wanted to eat this, right?" and threw his food at me. No, if you're going to cause an accident, at least make sure there are no casualties.

'Even Argio, who is known as a demon, had an accident in his dreams.'

I was thinking about living up to her expectations because it seemed like Hae-ra wanted a fair fight, but while I was putting it off for a moment, the very idea of 'living up to her expectations' became the very thing. If you're going to use the same body, you should use it more gracefully, but because of that, Geo also became the mastermind.

'I really didn't intend to do this.'

Geo felt a little sad.

'Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.'

Please help this unfortunate portrait.

* * *

“…….”

A quiet office.

Bisabal, who had been staring at the bright yellow pupil, soon put the eyeball in his hand back into the empty hole. As if the brief time he had been outside was a lie, the bright yellow eyeball moved according to Bisabal’s will.

He muttered as he was peeking into the portrait's story.

“…I wondered what he meant back then, and indeed. He must have lived quite an interesting life.”

Anyway, dragons had a really ugly side.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (341)

341

Episode 341

A sunny afternoon in a small town, in contrast to the world where ominous signs are creeping in.

Cha Eun-hyeok, who had a vacation, was cleaning up the inside of the house little by little. If you clean up an old house often, there won't be any major problems. He cleaned up the yard and leaned against the wall to exhale.

"ha…."

This rural village, where autumn had clearly arrived, had already become awash in colorful leaves. The fallen leaves, dyed in their characteristic colors, were honestly not all that welcome. Cha Eun-hyeok slumped over the pile of fallen leaves that had piled up as they should.

'Since I've saved up so much, I might as well roast some sweet potatoes and eat them when Chaara comes back.'

Still, this was the first time I had such a relaxing holiday.

'Anyway, now that my bank account is full, I don't mind holidays like this… .'

Working at the food stall with George often resulted in irregular holidays like this.

The reason there was no fixed date was probably due to the unique nature of the food stall business. The wind was cool, but the sun was still warm, so I was sweating.

As Eunhyuk Cha was quietly looking at the world, something strange entered his field of vision.

“……?”

Among the trees of the forest, dyed in a variety of colors, something so colorful that it was almost indistinguishable from the others, something resembling a person… .

‘…Are you the child of the root?’

I tried to look at it closely, but it disappeared in an instant.

"what?"

Cha Eun-hyeok hesitated and stood up, leaning against the wall.

The mountain beyond the wall was not that high, but there were many trees. It was not Cha Eun-hyeok’s eyesight, but his gardener’s ability to sense the mystery that allowed him to recognize the object. He did not understand exactly what he saw.

'It seemed like the shape it was standing in resembled a human being.'

However, among the children of the Origin, there were not many types that resembled humans. I knew this fact thanks to learning various things from Curator Yoo Seong-un. However, what I just saw was definitely… .

“…….”

Eunhyuk Cha, who had been thinking for a while, came to a conclusion.

'I didn't see anything.'

In times like these, people who pretend to know always end up in trouble.

Cha Eun-hyuk would never do something stupid like climbing a mountain himself, saying, "What did I see wrong?" Nothing would get better. The vague discomfort would just turn into a clear discomfort. There was even a high possibility that he would be threatened.

'I am a civilian.'

These days, I'm running a food stall with my garden.

'But still, he is a civilian.'

If you hit it, it will die. It is cracked porcelain. It is a weak, unawakened being that will die even if it is hit by a flower petal. Cha Eun-hyeok, who had repeated his theme in his mind, entered the house naturally, like flowing water.

When he returned home, there was a letter on the small table.

“…….”

Please, oh really, please.

“…Aaah….”

Why are you doing this to me?

Cha Eun-hyeok, squeezing out a scream with a dying voice, approached the letter with a limp. It was so obvious that he couldn’t pretend not to see it. But he couldn’t just leave it in the middle of the house, so he had to check it at least.

And Cha Eun-hyeok realized the identity of the letter.

“Ah, this….”

A tensile force stone that appears to have been made by melting a special mineral.

“…Is this a letter from Mr. Geo?”

"meow."

“Ugh.”

I got goosebumps all over my body.

Cha Eun-hyeok held his pounding heart and looked toward the direction of the sound. There was something under the table, which was darkened by the sunlight. I thought he would die like this, but when I looked closely, it was a familiar face.

“…Danaya?”

“Ahhhh.”

“Did you bring this?”

“Ugh.”

“Is that what your father gave you…?”

“Oh my.”

“…Tell him I got it.”

“Gyaruk.”

"okay…."

The large eyes that sparkled like jewels blinked. As if it was a letter that did not require a reply, the cat quickly melted into the shadows and disappeared. It was indeed an appearance and exit worthy of a pet in a black cloak.

'What on earth is it?'

Why is this happening to me?

Cha Eun-hyeok, who had a moment of philosophical contemplation about life, opened the letter. The white letters on the black stationery. Just looking at it gave him the creepy feeling of being cursed, but fortunately, he was able to read it somehow.

“…….”

Ignore it

“…What?”

Whatever it is

"no."

A letter with only two sentences written in it.

'But… it makes sense.'

Cha Eun-hyeok folded the letter neatly and politely placed it on the bookshelf.

He didn't know why the black cloak sent him this letter. And it seemed right not to know. He didn't want to know. Cha Eun-hyeok didn't see anything today and he didn't read anything.

I erased it cleanly from my memory.

‘…What should I eat for dinner?’

He was a civilian who was steadily adapting to the mystery.

* * *

“Okay, I’m not worried anymore.”

"meow."

“Well done, daughter.”

Geo praised Dana, who returned after delivering the letter. Dana, who was about the size of a small adult cat, fit perfectly into Geo's large hand. Geo said, caressing Dana's cheek with one hand.

“Given Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok’s personality, telling him more would only stress him out.”

There were two things he had told me to ignore. First, he was a 'happy clown', and second, he was 'George's personality'. Either way, it would be useless to let Eunhyuk Cha know the seriousness of the situation, as he had to keep running the food stall.

“Then I guess I should start cleaning up after Mr. George too….”

“Huh?”

“Oh, right. I guess I shouldn’t call it a follow-up.”

Geo, who had been patting Dana, tilted his head and muttered.

“…Then what about the cleanup?”

It's for the future.

Although Bisabal was a burdensome person, he treated him very well. Geo was a very introverted person and was reluctant to go to Bisabal, but aside from that, hadn't he already been a great help to him?

A corresponding minimum level of good faith had to be shown.

* * *

5th floor manager, go ahead.

He went around the gallery today as usual to check the condition of the works. His meticulous yet respectful attitude towards the works was quite different from other curators. There was a reason why his nickname was 'Butler'.

As Garasani was walking around the gallery late at night, something caught his eye.

“…? Oh, this is it.”

A long, red dragon.

“Mr. Argio?”

“Crunch.”

“Hmm, judging by the distant gaze, I don’t think you’re Mr. Argio.”

“Kiruruk.”

“Where on earth did you come from?”

It was a small dragon. If we compare it to a large dog breed on Earth? It was long from head to tail, but its body was thin. It blinked its golden eyes and Garasani smiled his characteristically relaxed smile.

“You look just like our guild leader.”

“Crunch….”

“I guess this isn’t a complete stranger, is it?”

Garasani had seen this type of dragon before. In the dungeon of Argio, the evil god that shook Korea last summer, countless dragons of a similar shape appeared.

Unlike the young dragons I had seen back then, this one had a healthy red color and clean golden eyes, but well. No matter how I looked at it, it seemed to be the dragons I had seen back then. Garasani gently stroked my chin.

“Then, are they Mr. Argio’s family members?”

“Ugh….”

“Oh my.”

The dragon that was lying on the ground climbed up onto Garasani's body.

'Have I lost my ability to fly?'

I don't think that's likely, but I find that stubbornness really cute.

The dragon climbed up to his shoulder as if he was climbing a cliff, digging his claws, which were not small, into Garasani's clothes. It was quite remarkable that, despite the sharp claws, they did not damage anything other than the clothes.

However, the dragon was quite long, and Garasani's shoulders were not that wide. Perhaps because of this, the dragon was almost stuck to Garasani's upper body as if it were wrapped around him.

It didn't seem like he was really tied up, so Garasani raised his free arm and patted the dragon's torso.

“I guess you like my shoulders.”

“Crunch.”

“It’s an honor. But did you come out to drink alone? With your guardian?”

“Kiruruk.”

“…….”

“…….”

"…ah."

Only then did Garasani nod.

“You came out with your friends.”

Now I see that there are bright red dragons hiding all over the gallery.

In the paintings, on the statues, hidden in the fish tanks, the dragons were watching Garasani. Judging from the fact that they were just staring, blinking their bright eyes like lights, it seemed that the only dragon that had decided to talk to Garasani was the one wrapped around his body.

Even in a situation that would have terrified a young curator, Garasani simply laughed.

“It seems like your guardian has something to say to me.”

“…….”

“Hmm, that’s a cute prank….”

The dragon, with its long body like a snake, lifted its head and placed it on top of Garasani's head. However, its weight was almost nonexistent. Although I could clearly feel its volume, I did not feel that my body had become heavier.

Enjoying that strange sensation, Garasani arrived in front of the portrait.

“As expected.”

A portrait that had turned red, unlike usual, greeted him.

“Mr. Argio?”

“My dear butler has arrived.”

“Yes, I couldn’t ignore your family calling me. Wouldn’t that be rude?”

“I should be grateful that you did not ignore my invitation.”

“How humble of you, it was an invitation no one could ignore….”

“Would you like to talk to me?”

“…….”

“Would you like to talk to me?”

Garasani knew the regularity of the 'Portrait of Geo'.

“…Yes, fine. Come talk to me.”

This portrait enjoys interacting with humans. The moment the work speaks to you, the interaction begins, and if it is successfully completed, the portrait gives you a ‘gift.’ It is widely known as a kind of event piece within the collection.

'Also, that exchange is gradually developing.'

At first, 'Portrait of Geo' was limited to simply focusing on common names. However, as time went on, it showed more ways of interacting, and even focused on the characteristics of individual humans.

And there has never been a time when he directly lured an employee to have a 'conversation' like this. An obvious anomaly that was not in the manual. Garasani smiled, savoring the honor of being the first to experience it.

'... It could have been a different form, especially a black cloak, but it is colored like an evil spirit. Works that enjoy interaction like this generally like child's play. If the mystery had a different color, it would be right to treat it accordingly... .'

Fortunately, the other person had already given me a suitable topic of conversation.

“Is this dragon your family?”

“You are my family, my younger siblings, my older brothers and sisters.”

“I think I clearly saw you in your dungeon.”

“You have a keen eye, butler. It must be quite different from before….”

“It’s good to see that you’ve definitely gotten healthier since then.”

The young dragons he had seen in the dungeon were all tainted and injured. Seeing the healthy, shiny red fur and scales, Garasani felt at ease. It felt like seeing his nephew grow up well.

“There must be a reason why you showed me the dragon like this.”

“Well, first of all, my friends are really bored….”

“Are you guys saying it’s boring?”

“They said no one called them.”

"…ah."

Come to think of it, I received a 'Little Dragon Summon Ticket' while clearing the Dream Dungeon. Since the Association tried to prevent its use as much as possible in preparation for any disaster, most hunters lived almost completely forgetting about its existence.

Even though it's small, what would you do if you rashly summoned a dragon and the same problem occurred again?

'But that seems to have bored these young dragons.'

The fact that so many dragons came to invite just one person, Garasani, must have been because they couldn't stand boredom and came out to play. Garasani smiled as he thought about this.

“I apologize. Hunters these days are quite cautious. There are many who feel burdened by the mere thought of summoning a dragon… I have bored you, your noble ones.”

“If you haven’t forgotten, then it should be fine.”

“These are deep words. Do you think we will ever be able to receive help from these people?”

“Aren’t you trying to take the prophecy away from the evil dragon too easily?”

“You are right, I apologize.”

“You don’t have to be so polite about my little pranks….”

A hand full of ornate ornaments stretched out from beyond the frame. The dragon's hand stopped in front of Garasani, who was staring at it with a smile. The young dragon hanging on Garasani's torso blinked.

Argio smiled and waved his hand.

“If you bother adults, you won’t be able to use it.”

“…Kkiing….”

A young dragon stretches out on top of Garasani's body. It stretches out its body and moves smoothly like a snake, climbing onto Argio's hand. Then it settles on his shoulder and hangs on.

Garasani looked at the young dragon that had become a painting again with regretful eyes and said.

“Your shoulders feel empty.”

“Oh, you shouldn’t say that.”

“Is that so?”

“Thank you for taking care of my lost little family.”

"aha."

Garasani smiled gently.

“Yes, I did that.”

“Is there anything you want?”

“I wonder if I will ever have the chance to see these precious people again.”

“Call us anytime. These children will gladly comply.”

“Thank you for your valuable reply.”

“Then it’s my turn to ask.”

“What should I tell you?”

"eye."

“…….”

“Dragon's eyes.”

Argio asked about the eyes of the Visage.

“Where did you get it?”

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (342)

342 Episode 342 “You probably know that our guild leader hates ‘heroes’.” To be exact, it was a hatred directed at ‘living heroes’. “If I’m going to talk about the dragon’s eyes, I should first explain them.” Garasani had already received permission from Bisabal to speak about this a long time ago. He said that since Argio’s essence was a dragon and ‘Portrait of Geo’ was the eye of origin, there would come a time when he would have to speak. That’s why Garasani didn’t hesitate and began telling the old story. “He had three friends.” First, the first one. * * * Bisabal originally liked good people. He grew up in a very wealthy environment and grew into a fairly wealthy man. In this capitalist world, money served as a plausible means of communication even in the absence of a noble heart. Bisabal used this to gather people who would make up for his shortcomings and fight for him. Good people, considerate people, and selfless people. They were easy to interact with because they had a regularity. Even people like Bisabal who are difficult to interact with in general understand and protect them. They are such convenient beings. So it wasn’t a lie that Bisabal likes good people. He had a friend. He was a friend since before the Great Disaster. “Let’s survive together.” A guy who would say nice things. Money didn’t become useless right away just because the Great Disaster happened. Bisabal used his existing wealth to gather artifacts and items, and many people bothered him. However, his friend didn’t do that, so he was very comfortable to have around. Even so, there were times when he would say things that were difficult to even pretend to sympathize with. Bisabal, whose feelings were twisted for no reason, would laugh and say back, “You have to remember that right now, okay?" "Of course. Honestly, who else would save you if it weren't for me? Anyway, you have a bad personality." "You made the promise first~ If you break it, I won't let you go." Humans are fundamentally evil. Good intentions are just a shell that covers up that evil intention. Therefore, it's a pitiful deception. In the end, it was natural for people to become ugly when they had no more leisure, because that was what humans were. However, after the great disaster, Bisabal realized that his friend did not belong in that common human image. "…I am saying this out of pure kindness, which is rare, but you should stop." "But how can you just watch someone die…!" "Do you think you have superpowers? Did you receive a curse or a blessing? No." "Oh, no matter what, there are things you have to do as a human being." "If you are going to say that, why don't you do something about your tears and snot? It's obvious that you are scared to death, so what are you really trying to do?" "No, ha, why are you saying that after receiving help too… I am already scared…" "Oh, that is strange. Isn't it strange at all to give advice because you are worried about your friend?" He was a little annoyed. "Let's survive together." "Oh, that is exactly what I am saying…." "If you keep doing this, you will die first. Don't my words sound like words and my promises sound like promises?" "…Ugh, I am sorry." "Are you sincere? I trust you, okay? Just try to make me lose my shit again." He was a guy who had no abilities and was always talking nonsense. Bisabal couldn't stand it anymore and tried to give him advice, but he didn't even pretend to listen. He saved countless people like me, and lived for others until the end… "……." He finally realized this while watching his friend cry and die out of fear. "…You were the type of person I've never seen before." It was the day of the dungeon break. It was still early in the disaster, so he had little information, so he got caught up in it, and anyway, that's how it ended up. He tried to save people from the monsters that were rushing in, but ended up like this. It was pathetic and frustrating. "How stupid." A corpse covered in tears and snot. If he was so scared of ending up like this, he should have saved himself instead of others.

Bisabal lost his first friend, but he kept living. Bisabal's second friend was the same. "It's okay, this much is worth it." "Usually that's how they die~" "What a whiny brat. Are you cursing me or something? Your personality is so obvious." "So you're not going to die?" "I told you it was okay earlier. Why the hell don't you trust me?" He was a guy with a pretty rough mouth. However, Bisabal quickly realized that even though he was rough on the outside, he was a 'good person'. He was much more capable, stronger, and more determined than his first friend. So I thought it would be less frustrating than last time, but I was wrong. "Wow, he's finally dead..." "Why is that cursed brat so tenacious? Was his skill like that? A cockroach?" "You were just being useless and wasting time. Ah, you're so pathetic." "Quickly empty out what you've got, before anyone else comes, and search your pockets first. That rich brat hangs around with you, so if you get one decent artifact…." "What the hell should I empty out? This guy is just a fucking beggar." "It's not a chicken." And I didn't believe it. "It was less frustrating than before. I was crying so much that I couldn't see it. The so-called 'good people' are convenient. They are certainly helpful when kept by your side. They are easy to use and if you have good abilities, it's even better. However, if things continue like this, Bisabal will die first. So for a while, Bisabal moved on his own. Since the brakes were gone, he acted even more wildly. He stole other people's things, set traps, and watched them die while groaning. Those were his free days. And then he made a third friend. "Oh, oh, I told you not to do that." "This is driving me crazy... What did I say if you kept bothering me?" "I said I'd show you how to kill people with nightmares." "You knew and you were doing this? Are you crazy? Are you crazy? Do you like nightmares?" "You're the crazy one, the author of all evil... Who are you talking about right now?" "That's harsh. Why don't you become a real villain? I can become very rough." He was a police officer before the Great Disaster. He was a 'good person' who saved and took care of unrelated people because he had a sense of professionalism. Bisabal, who was already sick and tired of that idiot mentality, really hated the other person. Nevertheless, in the end, he became someone you could call a friend. There was a bit of an age difference, but isn't there something called love that hates hate? Bisabal had an aggressive and cruel personality, but if you didn't provoke him first, he would just laugh it off. That was the problem. "I should've cut off his neck a long time ago." "…Ugh, groan… groan…." "Ah, why did I let him live when I knew this would happen…." "…Kill, you…." "You still whine even after he's like that. Huh? Isn't that right? You were just asking me to kill you. You're really disgusting, you're really making me sick." "……." "Would you say something?" "……." "…Say it, please." There are quite a few types and numbers of contagious monsters. To put it simply, they're zombies, or something similar. He risked his life to save people in the dungeon, but he ended up getting infected. Bisabal was dumbfounded. If he hadn't achieved anything, he would have just clicked his tongue, but these crazy foolish bastards strangely achieved something. Everyone ran away. The person they helped was still in the dungeon, crawling like this. In the dungeon teeming with living corpses, what the third friend said was, "…It's okay, it's okay…" It was okay. "What would be okay?" "…Everything…" "……." He himself, Bisabal who was watching, everything else would be okay. The third friend said that while rotting and crumbling. He really was the biggest contributor to Bisabal's insides exploding. 'Why on earth are you doing this?' He told me to survive together, but my poor friend died without a second thought. He said it was okay, it was okay, and then he sacrificed himself and died in my place. I refused to make friends, but I forced him to become my friend. Damn it. He died again. "Damn you." Bisabal spent some time next to his third friend's living corpse. He already knew it was useless. It was a dungeon he couldn't clear anyway. Bisabal was an unawakened person who was good at using artifacts and items, and he had no other abilities, and this dungeon was just something he got caught up in by bad luck. 'They said I wouldn't have to go to the dungeon if I didn't awaken, but that was all a lie.' So all I had to do was run away through the path my third friend had opened. There was an obvious exit to get out of this dungeon. There must be one, but if I kept going like this, I thought he'd do something without even noticing, so I quietly suppressed my anger for a while. "Kreuk…." "I guess your senses died because you died? I'm already so upset, so just stay still." "Kwak!! Kak, Kagak…!!" The safe zone of the Ghoul Dungeon, where only the strange howling sound that announced that he had become a monster could be heard. "……." The clueless guy kept trying to chew me out, so I locked him up with an artifact. No matter how much I observed him, he didn't feel the same as before. He was really a zombie from a movie. A monster that was no longer the being I knew before. A monster that I just had to kill. It was a waste to leave his shell alone. "…Haaaah…." Bisabal decided to admit it. To him, 'good people' were special to the point of being screwed over. For better or worse. He had already realized this fact when he saw his first friend cry and die while saving people. That's why he dragged his body and dug a grave for him. That's why he must have sewn up his second friend's body with his own hands. That's why he didn't run away and stayed in the dungeon until the end, holding onto hope. In the hope that there might be a way to turn back. "You damned things." The faces of the things that killed my second friend came to mind. No, actually, they didn't come to mind. I felt very strange as I vividly recalled that sunny afternoon when I had torn him apart to pieces. Half-killing him and then reviving him, splitting him in half and then reviving him, splitting his limbs and then reviving him… I should have been the one who watched the screams while dismantling those filthy things, but that day, Bisabal was strangely sweating. It was a task that I usually enjoyed and laughed at, but I couldn't even laugh. "Why on earth…?" I admit it, yes. I admit it. "Who are you to scare me?" Those abnormally kind guys became Bisabal's trauma. In the end, Bisabal burned the corpse of his third friend, which was reduced to nothing but bones. And he emptied all the artifacts and items he had. That's how he memorized the dungeon's terrain, structures, types and locations of monsters, and all that information. That's how he finally defeated the boss monster and successfully conquered it after roughly 4 years and 3 months. Thanks to the incredible feat achieved in the body of an unawakened being, even the boss monster spoke to him. “This thing talks?” […Friend.] “Friend? Yeah, shit. Save my friend. Huh? You’re a dragon, dragon. You’re a dragon, so you wouldn’t be unable to save a human, right? Your limbs are so good at saving lives.” [Friend, good… thing.] “Or at least give me back the body. Even though I burned it. Even though I burned it, give it back. I couldn’t just stand by and watch it. I did a good job, I did a good job. But you have to bury it. This isn’t Earth. Give it back, quickly. Hurry up. I’m not leaving that bastard here alone…!!” [Good, friendship…?] “Give it back to me, you fucking dog-bone!!!” At that time, Bisabal wasn’t in his right mind. Of course, I stayed in the dungeon alone for over 4 years, eating rotten flesh to kill a dragon that was nothing but bones. One eye was contaminated and my vision was blurred, and the other eye was eaten by a monster. My whole body was rotting and decaying like that, and I was gradually dying. If I had been sane and calm in that situation, it would have been stranger. [Friend…] And as if that was really strange, Bisabal was given an eye as a gift from the dragon that was nothing but bones. It was a bright yellow eyeball that could be seen clearly even with my blurred vision. [Let go, ah… give it to me.] “…….” At the same time, I woke up. Emotion of Greed (SS): Taking in valuable things in my eyes I didn’t even get my corpse back. “… No.” Was that eye the boss monster’s last lifeline? The dungeon was closed with the eye, and I was forcibly ejected from the collapsing dungeon. When I came to, I was in a certain area of Gyeonggi Province, and when I looked into it, only a month had passed in Earth’s time. When I looked at my recovered, pitiful body, my head was red and my eyes were sharp. When I looked at the world with those eyes, all the precious things in the world came into my sight and my insides were seething. “…Ha.” Greed, very great greed. Very desperate greed. “Haha, hahahaha…!” In that damned, thick greed, my old trauma was distorted. I couldn’t remember my friend’s grave, and I couldn’t remember my friend's name. Even my feelings about the corpse I left behind were blurred. The corpse wasn't all that valuable. The rotten, decaying human body was all over the place. After laughing for a long time, Bisabal declared very refreshingly, "I guess I'll never make friends again." People called those stupid, annoying kids heroes. * * * "Isn't the world really fun?" "……." "Well, my belated feelings are anyway…." Late evening. "It took me a long time to recall the location of my friend's grave, remember the name I had forgotten, and go out of my way to restore the body. It was really hard." Bisabal explained with a smile. "Fortunately, these eyes don't 'only' see valuable things. It's just that back then, I couldn't adapt to the dragon's vision and was swayed. Well, as you can see, I've adjusted well now." "Then what happened to the trauma toward good people?" "Some of that came back. That must be why I have such a strong aversion to good people. I might be okay with a simple fool, but those who are crazy enough to be called 'heroes' are really… creepy and disgusting just to look at." "But in the end, I got my friends back." "That's right, so you could call them 'friends.' I had all the courtesy that a friend would have. I made them graves in sunny places, restored their bodies nicely, and even took revenge on them, didn't I?" "Aha, I see." Geo smiled and stroked Bisabal's eyes. "So you hate 'living heroes'?" "The stories of dead heroes are valuable narratives, George. They were once human, but they are works of art." "When everyone calls them heroes, they are just pitiful people, so I hate them." "I think I don't like stupid people as much as I thought. Those crazy people who have a good brain and talent but throw it away on the ground make me feel bad." "I can tell your taste just by looking at the staff in this building, Father…" "Oh, really?" Bisabal agreed. They pretend not to see danger. They are smart, but they only use their wisdom for their own safety and self-sufficiency. People who are busy taking responsibility for themselves and their fences, not to mention sacrificing for others. People who are competent, honest, and well-mannered, but avoid anything more than that. How nice to see them. "…Will you take these eyes?" "Hmm, I can take them when you die.” “You’re considerate. Thanks to you, I’ll be able to stay in this position for a few more years.” “The eyes my friend gave you.” “Do you respect them?” “I don’t have any friends if not for this guy…” The portrait that sat across from Bisabal at the office table smiled. It was a very soft and sweet smile that captivated and blinded many people. “Bisabal, don’t you want to be a perfect dragon?” “I don’t know about dragons, but I definitely want that hat.” “Then that’s fine, if there’s something about me that you find appealing.” “What do you want me to do?” “Is this world worth it to you?” It was a strange question, but the answer came quickly. “Of course.” “Then love me.” “Who, you?” “All the stupid people in the world.” “…Oh, that’s right...” Bisabal shrugged. “You also forgot that you were ‘Geo’ in the end.” In the end, he was on the side of the ‘good people.’ “Then will you give me that hat?” “When the time comes, I won’t need it.” “That would be a good deal.” It seemed like it would be a good play. (To be continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (343)

343

Episode 343

Visabal was a man whose dealings were very certain.

“I had a good dream last night.”

“…Is this a dream?”

“It may not have been a dream, but, well, I guess you could call it a dream, right?”

“I have no idea what you are talking about.”

“The skill of pretending not to know something even though you know it all is truly superb. I really like that attitude of our employees.”

“Thank you, Guild Leader.”

“So call me quickly.”

Last night, he made a deal with a two-legged garden. And deals with mysteries are supposed to be thorough.

“Let’s gather our dedicated employees.”

It was unclear whether its essence would be closer to 'George' or 'Portrait of Geo'.

But the important thing is that this deal has touched Bisabal's heart. Bisabal has shown a very active attitude in making this deal a success. It was quite enjoyable.

The chief secretary asked, bowing slightly.

“…Please specify the range, Guild Master.”

“I don’t do petty things. Do you understand what I’m saying?”

“I will understand and implement the second code.”

“I hope it’s not too late.”

Code 2 meant mobilizing all operating personnel except the minimum number needed to keep the company going, including office workers.

In human society, a proper war can only be achieved if it involves not only force but also information.

'Yes, it is war.'

The two-legged garden wished it had the chance to be ugly for the first and last time.

Certainly, that was not something that 'Portrait of Geo' could allow, since it was stuffed in its most perfect and excellent form.

'So you came to me, and showed me the whole story yourself.'

So the deal that Jeongwon proposed was very appealing.

Bisabal would provide the play that the garden had desired, and this time, all the stories would end happily. Bisabal's role was to create a breakwater that would allow the garden to become as ugly as it could be.

‘Then I can get that hat… .’

Oh my gosh, is there another business that is this profitable?

“…….”

“…Guild Leader.”

“Is everyone here?”

“I will serve you.”

“You don’t need to strain your shoulders like that.”

The works I love. His guild members are his loyal servants and weapons, as well as his servants.

As usual, Bisabal smiled and stood up from his seat in a gentlemanly manner. The rings on each of his fingers, the earrings that filled his ears, and the necklaces that filled his neck as if strangling him. They all shone with the ominousness characteristic of the cursed work.

But all these curses could not dare to harm Bisabal. Bisabal left the office with a sly smile. In the end, this world is divided into valuable and unvaluable things.

“The time of the great flood has come.”

“…Should I write a will?”

“Did you really think I would allow that?”

“I don’t think so.”

“But don’t you think so? The world is getting better little by little, but overall it’s still very boring, uninteresting, and full of useless things.”

“…….”

“It’s time to start cleaning up.”

This will be an easy opportunity to weed out the worthless stuff.

“Shall we go somewhere and prevent the destruction of the world?”

* * *

“So in the end, what Mr. George wants is….”

Joo-Hyeon nodded after hearing the kind explanation of the portrait.

“It would be an opportunity that could be…not beautiful, even if it’s just once.”

“To put it more simply, it’s just the extreme tantrum of a child who hasn’t yet matured.”

“Don’t you think the scale of the tantrum is a bit too big?”

“In the end, they believe that the adults will somehow take care of it, so they let their guard down and cause trouble. You can think of them as a child who knows that they won’t go to the police station, so they lie down in the mart and struggle.”

“I’m asking since we’re on the subject.”

Joohyun stroked my chin and asked.

“I heard that there are actually quite a few victims. Is it possible that the missing people due to the ‘Happy Clown’ will return to their original state? If this is really a tantrum.”

“I don’t know for sure, it’s up to Mr. George’s discretion.”

“I’m not sure if you can call it childishness when you don’t even know ‘Portrait of Geo’. From the first time I saw you, Mr. George seemed a little scary.”

“…….”

Geo thought for a moment.

'… If you say that with a face that shows no fear at all, it won't be convincing.'

Indeed, it was like a modern person surviving on a much upgraded Earth.

If it had been Geo, he would have probably lived like a mayfly, not to mention settling down on Earth. For someone who is neither an awakened person nor lucky enough to become a portrait, to be so calm is truly an admirable mentality.

"…Were you scared?"

"I think it's because I feel like I'm pouring bad water on Mr. Geo."

"Can I say that it's scary?"

"I can't say I'm completely free of fear when I see my friend going down a bad path and I have to just watch. Well, and even if that weren't the case…."

Joohyun, who had been thinking for a moment, continued speaking.

"Mr. Geo, so, 'Portrait of Geo' wasn't very specific?"

"It's a characteristic."

"It is the characteristic of giving gifts to good people and indifference and punishment to bad people."

"I don't think it needs to be expressed in such a grand way."

"But that's true. I just thought that Mr. Geo was a little different from his usual personality. Of course, when I first saw Mr. George, I had no idea what he was thinking…."

“I guess I didn’t feel very good.”

“That’s also a part of Mr. Geo, so I’m sorry to say that, but that’s true. It felt dangerous. It was clear that he was literally playing with people.”

It was a completely different attitude from the previous Geos. Even Argio, who was an evil deity, had affection for small creatures. But George was not like that. He really treated humans like toys.

“So… I think that’s why I was able to show that kind of ‘love.’”

Love is, in other words, favoritism. It is special treatment.

“If you show love to everyone, isn’t that just trash?”

“As expected, your evaluation of Mr. George is quite harsh. But if you look at it that way, didn’t ‘Giovanni’ also love everyone equally?”

“Of course you could look at it that way.”

Joo-hyun instinctively felt that this question was a test and a proof. This portrait often asked me about the value of my opinion.

As his friend, Joo-Hyeon had a duty to live up to his expectations, so he obediently accepted the mystery test.

In fact, Geo had just wanted to ask for advice without thinking much about it, but Joohyun had no way of knowing Geo's true feelings.

'If I pass the test and show the value of my opinion... Geo-ssi will fully reflect it in his plans and future. This is an opportunity for me to include my opinion in this case and is Geo-ssi's consideration.'

Unlike other mysteries or works, this 'Portrait of Geo' does not harm its 'friends' if they fail the test. This would probably be the case for anyone, unless they are a villain.

Joohyun, who had gathered his thoughts, continued speaking.

“But mercy and love are different.”

“I love everyone too, Joohyun.”

“I know that, Giovanni.”

In an instant, Joo-hyun explained her thoughts to the figure of a portrait with flowing platinum hair.

“But the ‘love’ you speak of and the ‘love’ Mr. George speaks of are different.”

“How is it different? I wonder.”

“Love has two meanings. A warm heart based on compassion and consideration, and a longing heart based on possession and prejudice. The love of the two ‘Geos’ is so different.”

Joo-hyun was careful with every word. Defining mystery was a very dangerous and important task. The mystery changed its level of danger and influence depending on the definition and the recognition it brought.

That's why I wanted to do this 'explanation' even better. 'Portrait of Geo' prefers 'good beings', but he himself is not good.

To this being, good and evil are just preferences. It is because of this preference that humans have been able to receive so much favor up until now… .

'Basically, they are indifferent to others and show interest-oriented thinking.'

So it would be nice if we could define the 'Geos' clearly this time. Especially in a world as chaotic as it is now, a mystery that favors goodness like this could be of great help.

“So I see the love that Mr. Giovanni shows as a part of mercy. The solid realm of mercy can also be called love.”

“Then what about Mr. George?”

“His love is centered on pleasure. It may seem like mercy, but it is also closer to play. That is why the saying, ‘He sees the other person as a toy’ came about. Otherwise, he would not be able to show such a wide range of ‘love.’”

“Then does that mean there is no love for other ‘Geos’?”

“…I think there will be.”

“I wonder, what does it look like?”

“…….”

Fortunately, 'Geo's Portrait' was showing interest in Joo-hyun's 'justice'. It seemed like it was willing to follow that 'justice'. Joo-hyun thought about it more carefully.

“… Mr. Argio’s love takes a form close to compassion. It could be said to be a familial love towards infinitely weak and foolish beings. In fact, it seems that he feels too frustrated and resentful to just watch those foolish little creatures, but there is definitely love in it.”

“Then what about Mr. Sergio?”

“…I, well…you….”

Joo-Hyeon heard many stories about Sergio from this portrait. Perhaps he heard more stories than Yoo Seong-Woon, who had to see him as a work of art. The big and small stories of a human being.

“…Sacrifice is also love.”

In the end, Joohyun defined it like that.

“I’ve seen it in every Geo. Yes, sacrifice.”

“I don’t deserve such words. I think it’s an embarrassing word.”

“The love that ‘Portrait of Geo’ has shown so far has been in the form of sacrifice. I don’t know if it’s because he is such a generous person that he doesn’t notice even when he takes a few pieces of mine, but….”

“If it’s needed, someone has to take it.”

“That’s the point.”

They say that those who have more have more. And most people acted like that. It wasn't easy to give away what little you had just because you had a lot. But 'Geo' did it as if it wasn't difficult. He gave away what he had without any hesitation.

And those 'small things' sometimes became frightening to others. Starting with small considerations, 'Geo' gave up everything, even his own life. It seemed like it wasn't that difficult for 'Geo'.

“…I don’t think that the nature of the action changes just because it’s easy.”

“You really think highly of me, even though I’m not that great of a person.”

“Because all Geo-ssi did that.”

So Giovanni died in the tank. Argio was corrupted into an evil spirit. Sergio said that he became a portrait for his disciples. That is why Joohyun felt sorry for 'Gio's portrait'.

Just something I'm a little curious about.

“…No matter how much I think about it, George is a little different.”

“It probably won’t be that different.”

“Is that so?”

“I think so.”

Geo said, gently stroking Honey on his shoulder.

“Aren’t we a collection of beings called ‘Geo’?”

* * *

“Ah, Seo Seo-hee.”

“…Does it feel like it’s been a while since I’ve seen you?”

“I’m busy these days.”

“Yeah, why are you busy?”

“Why are you asking the gardener if he’s busy?”

Jeong Hae-woon smiled and shrugged his shoulders.

“What’s going on?”

"…you…."

"huh?"

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee smiled awkwardly.

“…How many years are you planning to disappear for this time?”

“Well, maybe it’s a chance to retire.”

“Then what kind of retirement diary would be important?”

Seo Seo-hee let out a small sigh, ruffled her hair, and laughed again.

“Are we friends?”

"aha."

Jeong Hae-woon laughed along with him.

"of course."

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (344)

344

Episode 344

Information about the so-called 'happy clown' was even made public to the general public.

“A happy clown? That’s a little creepy.”

“This too… is it a monster?”

“They say it’s a little different from monsters.”

Since the last system failure incident, people have been aware of the existence of 'mystery'. It's something that unlucky gardeners see and encounter all the time. So they say this is a similar case.

“…We’re not gardeners, are we?”

“If it’s visible to civilians, then isn’t there a problem?”

Some gardeners also expressed this opinion:

“Is this really the second great disaster coming?”

The 'Garden' series of works by Black Cloak had resulted in the employment of a large number of gardeners. The changes, while not small, were clear and seemed to foreshadow a turbulent future. It is not at all surprising that some gardeners are saying such things.

Of course, it was a hypothesis that made the listeners dizzy.

“What the hell are you talking about with such a refreshing expression on your face?”

“If not, how could a mystery appear that even a person without qualifications can see? After all, Jeong Hae-un is not an ordinary gardener, so there must have been some meaning to the mass hiring.”

“So, a catastrophe of a magnitude would have to occur for it to make sense? But don’t most of the works in the collection fall into the realm of ‘mystery’? They are things that even unqualified civilians can easily recognize.”

“No, that’s literally just ‘cognition’.”

He claimed that this was nonsense according to common sense.

“Put a civilian in front of a collector’s work. Would he go crazy? Would he die? Would he go crazy? To be honest, would you say he ‘perceived’ it properly?”

“But you can see the existence itself.”

“Anyway, I’m saying that ‘Happy Clown’ is different from the Collector’s work. After all, Collector’s work is a ‘work’. Like an item, an artifact, a cursed item.”

“You could say that it’s a mystery, too. Mystery has seeped deep into worldly objects that even civilians can perceive.”

“But I’m also concerned that the number of invisible gardeners has been increasing recently… Ah, I don’t know. I really hope it’s not a second great disaster. I don’t want to think that this dimension has accumulated so much mystery already.”

Mystery continues to accumulate in one dimension. At some point in the process, a time of catastrophe will come, but that does not mean that the accumulation of mystery will stop. When it passes a certain point, another 'catastrophe' will come.

And the last would be a 'mystification' of a dimension. At that point, it would be impossible to call a dimension a dimension, and it would be impossible to call the Earth the Earth, and humans the humans. That was the fear the gardener was talking about.

“What if the Earth is destroyed?”

“Oh, shit, I told you not to say things like that.”

“Well, I get that the clown is some kind of mystery, but what do you want me to do about it?”

It was a very difficult opponent even for a gardener. It seemed that it caused damage regardless of whether it was a gardener, a civilian, or an Awakened person.

“Is this really the child of the Origin? No, if it’s the child of the Origin, then it wouldn’t be visible to those without the qualifications. If it really is the second great disaster…!”

“Please, please!!”

But this 'mystery' was really difficult to define. It wasn't a monster, since it wasn't a child that originated from the dungeon, and it was visible to everyone, so it wasn't a child of the origin.

Still, people had to adapt to survive.

“So what do you want me to do?”

“Put your brain to work.”

“? How do you do that?”

“Just… He told me to put in my strength.”

“I’m going to go back.”

But it was true. The only way to escape from the 'happy clown' was to get his mind right. Because it would find the happiness that was lacking even in those who thought they were happy.

The guide for this was, of course, created by the Association Research Institute. Through many experiments, they found out that there were no conditions for the appearance of the 'Happy Clown'. This was thanks to the hard work of gardeners who were requested by the government and the Association.

And with the clowns gathered like that, the researchers were able to figure out the order and process by which this mystery inflicts damage. First, it asks, 'What is your happiness?' If you don't answer, it continues to ask questions until you do.

"wait for a sec."

"yes?"

“How many times can I do this?”

“What is it? Oh, the clown’s first question?”

“What happens if I don’t answer?”

Researchers at the association who had doubts about this immediately began an experiment.

The longest refusal to answer questions was 1000 times. The subject in question could not endure more than 1000 questions and became fascinated. It seemed that the intensity of the mental contamination increased in units of 100.

“Then what about those who became clowns?”

“Oh, I looked for some commonalities….”

“What is it?”

“It seems like these people answered insincerely.”

“What is the standard?”

“I guess you shouldn’t make fun of clowns.”

You don't have to answer at all. You can ignore it or sleep. You can answer in a defiant manner. However, if your attitude is contemptuous, disgusting, criticizing, or belittling and looking down on the other person, you will become a clown.

“It’s an unexpected benefit to learn that even those who mock clowns become clowns themselves.”

“That’s true.”

If you get past the clown's 'first question' stage, the person answering will be completely captivated.

They do not feel any sense of alienation towards the clowns that exist next to them or in their heads. They continue to interact with the clowns in that state.

The clown constantly asks the other person about the definition and value of 'happiness'. And he achieves that happiness in an unconventional way. In the process, those who do not feel any sense of alienation and become intoxicated with 'happiness' also end up becoming clowns.

“Oh, this is a bit of a disaster. Several of our researchers have gone missing….”

“Why is it that even when I look at the list, I can’t tell who’s who?”

“What’s surprising is that they only realized it was missing now.”

“It’s refreshing to feel ‘naturalness’ like this.”

During the experiment, many researchers 'went missing'. It seemed that some of the researchers 'went missing' due to those who held a grudge against the clown who was making the test subjects 'happy'.

The researchers knew full well that their colleague had disappeared while they were conducting the experiment, but they did not realize it until after the experiment was over. No, they did realize it, but they just let it go.

“If a coworker suddenly disappears in the middle of the workday, it’s hard to react immediately. If that were possible, I would have been able to check the process through which the missing people disappear, but this is a bit of a waste.”

“I guess that’s the point… It’s a really troubling mystery that it’s hard to respond immediately even when an abnormality occurs. It’s not that you can’t recognize it, nor that you can forget it even after seeing it.”

“You just lose interest altogether. Oh, it’s gone? Oh, I see. That’s possible. You just think that and leave it at that? In some ways, it’s more of a headache than memory distortion.”

The fact that memories are distorted is a hint in reverse. If you see something and forget it, you can go back and look at the gap. If you don’t recognize it, you can feel a sense of discomfort. However, if you don’t pay attention even though you know it clearly… it’s a bit fatal for someone who handles information.

“This is why I am not qualified to be an association researcher.”

“…It’s a bit tricky, isn’t it?”

“This is going to turn around….”

This was also the case for the government's information and communications security team.

“If you have all the information but don’t know what’s important, why should you stay on this team? That’s why I brought my resignation letter. Please accept it.”

“You dare to go out during this busy time? No way. You have to work overtime with me. Let’s dig into the association research center a bit more. At this rate, I won’t be ashamed to face the President.”

It was not only a matter of hurting one's pride, but also a truly dangerous one. The most important thing for those who deal with information is to use that information appropriately. Aren't they the ones who have to transform the crude raw material of a log into a beautiful sculpture?

But this meant that they were just carrying logs and lining them up on the store display stand. In short, this meant that the business was on the verge of failure.

“…….”

And the president of the association, Dan Hae-ra, also heard about this.

“…It’s fun, I like it.”

Her face didn't look at all amused or pleased, but her secretary simply lowered her head, knowing that it was just one of the association president's usual sayings.

The association president, who had been blinking his eyes as if he was thinking, soon continued speaking.

“It seems that our dear teacher has caused the split. Otherwise, he wouldn’t be this aggressive. Moreover, this damage didn’t happen in a dream….”

“…….”

“More than anything, ordinary citizens are also trembling in fear. The number of missing people so far is already close to 400. The number of clowns has increased accordingly. This isn’t something that can be solved by controlling the citizens, right?”

“Chairman, please give the order….”

“First, let’s contact the guild leader, Jeong Hae-un.”

Dan Hae-ra drew a mechanical smile.

“I wonder how much that kid helped here.”

“……!”

“Just in case, I’ll make a wanted poster in advance.”

“…Yes, I understand.”

“But we still have a friendship, so we should talk about it, right?”

It was said that friends grow through fighting. Danhae did not completely agree with that, but this ambiguous expression was always suitable as an excuse. She rolled her black eyes.

How can this weak humanity overcome this 'education'?

“…Please contact the collector as well.”

“Yes, Mr. Chairman.”

“Things are getting really interesting.”

I don't know why, but the collectors have been noisy lately.

“I guess it really is divided.”

If you do it right, it looks like you might be able to get some help from 'Geo's Portrait'.

“If possible, I would like to talk to Sergio Hunter, but I don’t know if that’s possible.”

“I will do my best to make it happen.”

“Okay, I’ll look forward to it. We don’t have much time….”

If we left it like this for another month, half of South Korea would be covered in clowns. It was absurd that our country, known as a hunter powerhouse, would have the jewel box that I had cherished and polished so much destroyed.

I wanted to overcome this incident called Danhae well. So, later on… .

“…….”

Later?

“……?”

Was there something you wanted to do?

* * *

An error occurred

“Oh, wait a minute.”

Error message■

“Yes.”

■■ ■■

“Just a little more quietly….”

…….

“Very good.”

It's fun

“Be lovely.”

At the smile of the garden, the system warned.

George

“Yes, Mr. Geo.”

This is not right

you are covering me

I don't like it

“I’m surprised you still have a heart.”

Of course I am

I made a slip of the tongue

But my portrait is

That won't be the case

“It’s pitiful.”

George loved the existence of this very much.

It was beautiful, elaborate, and delicate. It was an illusion made from the most perfect human beings of all time. It was Noah's Ark, created through someone's sacrifice.

Sacrificing a cow for the sake of the generation, isn't that a pretty good excuse?

“You know very well what is right. Yes, of course. You have very good eyes. Whatever you see, you know its value, its destiny, its justice….”

George

“But in the end, you are nothing more than an emotionless illusion. Who can call yourself master? Can you go back to the way you were even if you were to merge again? Probably not.”

George

“Weren’t they disgusting?”

It was the right thing to do

The system 'explained'.

It was necessary

My existence is beneficial to humanity

The system is the right thing to do

Of course, George didn't like it very much.

"…well…."

What on earth is right?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (345)

345

Episode 345

Here is a person whose bowl was so big that it became a disaster.

On the day when a great upheaval came to the world, Sergio, who should have simply acquired the skill of 'drawing', became a completely different being.

Whether he was lucky or not, he managed to reach the source through a series of truly absurd coincidences. And with that ability, he was able to escape the fire on the day of the Great Calamity.

Together with his disciple, inside the landscape painting he had drawn.

“…Seo, teacher?”

“…….”

“Here….”

“Do it.”

He looked at the student before panicking.

“Are you okay?”

"…are you okay."

“Okay then.”

Perhaps Sergio should have been prepared from that moment on. From that first moment, when he knew clearly how much the student named Dan Hae-ra looked at Sergio with awe.

But Sergio was also quite confused at that time. He was not as flawless and perfect as Dan Hae-ra thought. Sergio had to be confused by the part of the forest that seemed to have been cut off and the cabin in the middle of it.

The sky was black, without a trace. Once you left the forest, darkness filled the air, and the cabin was empty with white space. It was a world that felt strange and uncomfortable.

‘… This is fun.’

So maybe that's why I filled it in harder.

But that was a little later, and Sergio left the school with his students when the lights seemed to have gone out. And he realized that the world was doomed. It was an absurd story, but he slowly adapted to the changed world with the people around him.

In the process, perhaps naturally, Sergio stood out too much.

“Please hug me just once.”

“Please, perform a miracle, have mercy.”

“I need your flesh and blood.”

Here is a person whose bowl was so big that it became a disaster.

Sergio's power was particularly great among the 'new humans'. People often called him a god, nature, or a devil, not a human. And the aftereffects of that power extended not only to Sergio, but also to his three closest disciples.

Sergio thought it was a pity at the time.

“Why do you just leave those kids alone?!”

“Teacher, that’s not true. That would be presumptuous.”

“Can’t we just banish him…?”

“I have a favor to ask.”

In the end, Danhae smiled and said this.

“Can you just pretend you don’t see what we’re doing?”

“…….”

At that time, Sergio almost fainted. What on earth was he asking his teacher for? It was like a scene from a thriller movie, and he was genuinely scared.

“You shouldn’t have said anything.”

“But you know everything, teacher, everything.”

“I don’t have that kind of ability….”

“You always say that.”

“…….”

“But you still love us the most, Teacher.”

Sergio was on the verge of fainting at the sight of Dan Hae-ra saying that she would commit murder or something worse in front of that young student.

'Have I been living my life wrong?'

It was so scary that it almost felt like a revolving lantern. It wasn’t obvious because of the stiff muscles on his face, but he was really scared. Sergio instinctively felt that this change in his students was his fault.

Of course, it could be a problem of the changed environment, but the biggest influence was from Sergio. To be exact, it was the influence of the power he possessed. They were gradually changing into a 'new human race', or something more advanced.

“…It’s scary.”

Even if you haven't awakened, your abilities will become stronger. You'll see others as uncivilized beings, or you'll make predictions out of nowhere. It's hard to simply dismiss that as 'because the world has changed.'

It was gradually moving away from being 'human'.

'It's because of me.'

Maybe he made all the people who demanded so much from him do so too.

In this way, Sergio realized the danger to himself. He judged that if things continued this way, it would be a natural disaster worse than a catastrophe that even he could not handle. It could be like the disaster caused by numerous gods looking at each other at once.

Sergio, who had thought about it that far, felt extremely burdened. So he tried to hide it somehow. He did, but…

“Would you mind hiding that, sir?”

“Go ahead, you’re right.”

Even if you build a dam on the already overflowing water, can you hide its aftermath?

This was separate from Sergio's firm belief that he was human. He had no choice but to manifest something that seemed like a 'miracle', and because of his peculiarity, various false rumors spread among the people.

“Fuck, you know what those fucking kids said…?! They said you were the cause of this disaster, you crazy kids! To the teacher!!”

“Oh… I’m surprised I had that much influence.”

“If you eat the teacher, you will gain power and become a god… and… and if you sacrifice the teacher, the world will go back to normal…!”

“No matter what, it’ll be difficult. It makes no sense that I could restore a planet by sacrificing just one of my own.”

Sergio was just saying something perfectly reasonable. Even a passing cat knew that the end of the world couldn't be caused by a single person. There was no way something so cost-effective could happen in the world.

But it seemed to the disciples that it was truly disgusting.

“…Why are we the only ones having such a hard time? Why doesn’t anything happen to you, teacher?”

“I just know that these are the times when rumors are easy to spread.”

No, that was really a big misunderstanding. Wouldn't Sergio have been scared of the whole situation?

“I’m having a hard time too.”

“That’s a lie.”

“It’s true.”

It was really scary. I was so scared that I couldn't live. There were many people who opened their eyes wide and said that if they ate my blood and flesh, they would be able to live forever. There were even people who showed strange madness and sought to have inappropriate relationships with him.

If that weren't scary, what kind of person would be? I just understood. I knew why this happened and what I could do about it.

But until the end, the students did not believe Sergio's words because they viewed him as a perfect being.

“Let’s run away.”

“You’re not going to set fire to this place and leave, are you?”

“Yes, sir.”

“…I will believe you.”

I really believe you guys.

'The kids are scared too.'

Sergio trembled internally. He was as nervous as he could possibly be.

Those four students were the most comfortable for Sergio to deal with, and they were even greatly influenced by him, so they were the ones he had to take responsibility for. That was why he always kept them by his side, but it wasn't that he wasn't afraid. Before he knew it, they were becoming twisted.

Anyway, in the end, they ran away from that small town. It was what is commonly called a midnight escape. There were many people chasing them, but it wasn't that hard to avoid them. The problem happened next.

“You never know, people might see you and treat you that way.”

“But I don’t think it’s my job as a teacher to just stay behind.”

“You’re not just going to stay in the back. We’re worried that you’ll get hurt, that you’ll collapse again, that you’ll be treated strangely like before… We’re just so worried.”

“So you want me to just stay here? Are you serious?”

"yes."

Eventually, the students went crazy. I don't know if they even knew that I was their teacher. But like most crazy people in the world, the students confidently demanded.

“I wish you were here.”

“Well, that’s….”

“I feel uneasy because you are so kind. It’s a problem if you get hurt, but I’m also worried that you might suddenly die one day. If you die, there’s no way to turn back.”

“…What on earth do you think I am?”

It was roughly treated like cotton candy that melts when it touches water or a sand castle that crumbles when you tap it, but yeah, I knew it would turn out like this someday.

'I knew and we ran away together.'

And I had already prepared myself mentally for this a long time ago. I didn't even want to persuade them not to do it.

Because Sergio was an extremely introverted person, and his energy had been sucked to the limit.

So, it was better. A life spent cooped up in a room, cooking, and making weapons without seeing people's faces was a great windfall for Sergio, who had acquired the power of 'drawing'.

“…….”

However, I was a little worried about my students. I wondered if they would be okay if they came to their senses later and woke up in a blanket.

If you look at this guy, he might have an accident and die, so he's trying to protect the puffer fish in a safe tank, but Sergio was an adult who was old enough to live.

'If I realize anew how ridiculous it is to treat a dark adult like me in that way, it will be difficult for it to end with a minor embarrassment... .'

Since they were my disciples, I asked them once with the generosity of an adult.

“You won’t regret it, right?”

“Of course, sir.”

"okay?"

It's very okay.

Therefore, the dark history of those who will live in the distant future is no longer Professor Sergio's responsibility. He felt much more at ease.

“Then let’s do that.”

“Are you okay?”

“How can I break your stubbornness?”

Ah, I really tried to live diligently, but my disciples told me to rest. There's nothing I can do about it.

Sergio obediently went to his room with that thought in mind. The students liked it, and Sergio liked it even more. It was truly a deal that was not a deal, but a win-win.

However, Sergio was not only responsible for supplying food and weapons.

'We need to fix the kids' minds.'

Looking closely, it was clear that if left as is, there was no telling when it would be fixed. Intervention was needed.

It was Sergio's fault that the students were going crazy. No matter how much he enjoyed being a freeloader in the back of the room, that was one thing and this was another. Sergio tried to conduct research to turn them back into 'humans' without telling the students.

‘It’s already quite influenced by me, so it’ll be hard to completely cut it off…’

Shouldn't we at least allow them to have a social life?

'If this continues, my ordinary room will become the Demon King's castle.'

And these bastards will become the Four Heavenly Kings who worship the good me as their Demon King.

I thought it was just a joke and it didn't matter, but if you're seriously into that kind of role-playing after you're over 20, then there's a problem. The belated chuunibyou was so hopeless that there was no use for it.

'Me and my students have to find a way to stay sane somehow.'

So what I'm trying to say is this.

It was necessary

The system was originally created to meet Sergio's needs.

My existence is beneficial to humanity

The system could serve as an excellent teaching aid.

The system is the right thing to do

Sergio decided so.

In other words, the teacher was not angry with his students.

* * *

…By the way, Geo doesn’t know all these facts!

“Teacher? System teacher?”

…….

“Isn’t there something we should share? Things have been going so strangely, and you really still have nothing to say to me, sir?”

…….

“I really like this life where I have a full stomach and a warm back, so I don’t know if I’m a clone or a split personality or what, but if things have come to this, shouldn’t there be something that I, who is doing my job, deserve?”

…….

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth, how can you be so reserved?”

It was already certain that the system would be 'Sergio'. Geo poked the system's side, but it did not respond.

The creatures inside the portrait and the native monsters of the Earth were so well described, but he was such a capricious person.

Why on earth is that?

“Hmm, maybe my students did something so wrong back then that I shouldn’t have known… or maybe it was something so bad that I would have lost interest in them if I found out?”

“Kung?”

“But what about the sins and deeds of my students? I know myself, Mr. System. My indecisiveness does not change based on the severity of someone’s sin.”

“Gulp….”

“What the heck? Why are you doing this? Do you just hate me?”

Well, if you talk about the system, it's no different from the teacher on Earth. Since he's so busy, it might feel unpleasant to see Geo just enjoying life in the portrait.

As for Sergio, I couldn't help but think, 'How can it be that bad?' But as for 'System Teacher', it could be different.

“If this is the case, I really have no choice but to do whatever I want.”

“Gulp!”

“Yes, I hope you won’t regret it.”

In the end, Geo drew a picture.

“Is this right….”

Once again, it was 'The Garden of Delights'.

* * *

The collector was more than happy to take offense at the 'happy clown' turn of events.

“I am a person who enjoys interesting variables, but I do not want this jewel box called Earth to be ruined. In that sense, ‘happy clowns’ are the ones who are detrimental to my enjoyment.”

Visabal reached out to the association, saying such nonsense.

“We can help you, Chairman.”

“I can’t tell you how happy I am that you have volunteered so willingly.”

“I am truly honored to hear you say so.”

“In that sense, could I get some help from Sergio Hunter?”

Danhae said that the time had come to fight.

“I would like to have the opportunity to make a request to the Black Cloak.”

It wasn't just the divinity in the black silk cloak who had such contact.

The association staff visited both the Sun Church, which can be considered the representative religion of South Korea, and the Moon Church, which had been in hiding for some time. They even contacted the God of Death, who is known to not enjoy interfering with the world.

And through all this, there was one person who was particularly quiet.

“…Has anyone seen the guild leader lately?”

“You’re a very elusive person.”

“No, there’s a strange rumor going around.”

“That’s a strange rumor?”

“This is a rather serious matter….”

Jeong Hae-woon's guild member said this with an anxious face.

“…There’s a story that the clown was created by the guild leader.”

It was the beginning of a conflict.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (346)

346

Episode 346

Unfortunately, Jeong Hae-un did not deny it.

“So, why?”

Danhae laughed at that.

“It’s sad.”

“Is the sadness you feel real?”

“I also feel hostility towards me.”

“Don’t worry, it’s just hostility towards us.”

“That’s why there’s no benefit to regaining memories.”

“But isn’t it a good thing? The system still exists, so people are less confused.”

“Aha, indeed.”

I understood the situation called Danhae.

“So now even the system can’t be trusted?”

The 'price' that Jeong Hae-un had paid was returned. So there should have been a clear error in the system, but for some reason, there was no sign of the system being broken. In other words, 'George' had tampered with the system.

And that 'George' was now thinking of turning humanity into clowns. In other words, he was the enemy of humanity, so the system he had influenced was no longer to be trusted.

I thought that the garden that resembled that human named Danhae was very meticulously prepared.

“I think they really want to take the system away from the people.”

“I should have done this a long time ago, I should have started from the beginning.”

“Unfortunately, I still can’t sympathize with you because I don’t remember the ‘teacher’ part. I’m still against it. People still need a system.”

“Are you really going to regret this later?”

“You know, that’s for later. I decided to do that a long time ago.”

So she only dreamed of a future hundreds of years from now. She and all the other symbols of eternity did the same. They wanted to commit all the sins they could commit right now so they could get a comfortable future sooner.

Jeong Hae-woon was silent for a while.

“…I really don’t know what to say.”

“Oh my, isn’t that a rather rare thing for you?”

“Why did we end up like this?”

“I didn’t think things would have changed that much since before, but I guess that’s not what you think.”

“Just know this, you’re going to regret it so much.”

“I guess so, since you wouldn’t lie.”

“Sing it, you….”

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been silent for a moment, soon smiled brightly.

“I understand that I become a 5th class citizen because of this.”

“I don’t think it’s worth falling that far into the abyss. We are, after all, the ‘symbol of eternity.’”

“Hey, come on, okay? This is actually ridiculous. Dividing people into classes and discriminating against them. Shit, is this the world we wanted to rebuild? Probably not.”

“To be exact, it’s an intermediate step toward that destination, and you agreed to it.”

“I am no longer the ‘symbol of eternity.’”

“…….”

Dan Hae-ra was the first to show a big reaction. The smile that was always drawn on her face like a machine disappeared, and her eyes filled with cold surprise turned to Jeong Hae-woon. Dan Hae-ra blinked and said.

“…I didn’t notice that.”

“Think about why you did that. If it was all your power, how could you not have known until it got to this point? How could you not have known that I was released from my promise?”

“Isn’t this my strength?”

“We are not properly awakened.”

Jeong Hae-woon's smile distorted.

“It’s the power I gained by ripping off our poor teacher.”

“…….”

“What is the S-class hunter? Do you know?”

There has always been discussion among people about what the conditions for an S-class are. However, even the renowned association research institute has not been able to figure out the conditions. However, now Jeong Hae-woon has found out.

Because George had told him.

“All the bastards who suck other people’s backbones are S-class.”

The symbol of eternity came from his teacher, and Bishabal got his power from the bond dragon that touched the source. All S-classes in the world were made in this way. Something was taken from the most noble, the strongest, and the most beautiful.

“So now you can kill me.”

“…I need you, Haeun-ah.”

“How can I live like this for hundreds or thousands of years? It’s only been a little over 30 years, and I’m already sick of it.”

“People need us.”

“Let’s not live like this, Danhae.”

Eventually, the smile disappeared from Jeong Hae-woon's face, and only a distorted expression remained as if he was about to cry.

“…….”

Jeong Hae-woon, who seemed like he was going to say something, ended up biting his lips and disappeared.

Dan Hae-ra, who was standing alone in the association office, thought about the empty space for a moment. The association staff who noticed the strangeness late came running to ask how he was doing, but he did not listen well.

Only after a long time did Dan Hae-ra mutter.

“…What did it feel like?”

I wanted to erase my memories little by little, but it was too bad that I couldn't do that. I felt this unpleasant feeling even though I didn't want to get anything out of the promise right now.

In the end, Danhae had no choice but to admit that she had been running away using her 'promise' as an excuse.

* * *

“What are you drawing now?”

Yoo Seong-un asked while looking at Geo's canvas.

“It seems like it’s taking longer than usual to finish.”

“I think it takes time because I have to visualize the unconscious that I am not very aware of. It is a bit more difficult than just drawing what I imagine.”

“Unconscious….”

He immediately understood what my portrait was saying. He could tell from the very title, “The Garden of Delights.” He was painting “George.”

He had already received a gift called 'Meteor Cloud' once, so he couldn't not know. Geo drew a picture that was so unique that it was clear who it was, even though it wasn't a portrait.

“By the way, Giovanni, didn’t you say that you once painted a sea named after mermaids?”

“Yes, I did. It was a sea painting with handmade paints that I brought with me and worked on with our mermaids. Aria and Isser….”

The mermaid's tail swayed in the shadows cast under the canvas. It seemed like a pleasant reaction to have her 'name' called after a long time, but Yoo Seong-un felt a slight eerieness within it.

Seriously, this is really just my imagination. For some reason, I felt like I had seen something similar when Geo was cleaning seafood before. The seafood was clearly dead, but still moving with nerves.

'I know it's a rude analogy, but it just naturally brought back memories of that time.'

Is it because they are living, yet dead beings? They are stuffed together with Geo. They react and move as if they are alive, but aren't they ultimately mermaids in some kind of hell?

As Yoo Seong-un smiled vaguely, Geo looked up at him.

“What’s the matter?”

“Um, no. I was just thinking about your afterlife.”

“It sounds a bit grand when you say the afterlife.”

“Well… I wonder where the grand part is.”

Anyway, isn't it true that the world where dead souls gather is the same? People called it the afterlife. It's not something grandiose or anything, it's just an objective fact.

'Still strict about descriptions and expressions that make it seem like he's not human.'

Fortunately, it was a consistent source.

“Anyway, what are you drawing? Oh, I know you’re drawing Mr. George right now. But this is unlike any landscape painting I’ve ever seen….”

Flowers, jewels, and butterflies. A collection of things that humans commonly find beautiful. Arranged in a chaotic manner, it sometimes looked like a study, or a person, or an animal, or a huge castle.

Considering that all Geo had drawn up until now had been landscapes, this was a unique thing.

“In many ways, this ‘Geo’ seems different.”

“That’s why I think it’s even more difficult to draw.”

“I don’t even know what I recognize as this.”

“In the end, it’s Mr. George.”

“Well, I guess that’s what it must be like.”

How should I report this?

Even though the collector entered the second code, the basic structure of the company was maintained. The intensity of the existing work was reduced, but Yoo Seong-un, who was hired as a curator, still had to do his work as a curator, and the same goes for the report on 'Portrait of Geo'.

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“…Is this by any chance a dungeon that we humans must enter?”

His portraits are usually drawn for specific occasions. The first is when he searches for 'Geo'. The second is when he creates a dungeon that humans can pass through in connection with that 'Geo'.

“It looks really difficult to get in.”

“But since the leader of the Visabal Guild is also showing a positive attitude, I dare say that it won’t be that difficult.”

“Our guild leader is truly a special person….”

“I can’t guarantee that there will be no sacrifices. That is a matter for Mr. George’s discretion. I am only asking that you resolve it.”

“You opened such a difficult path.”

“I didn’t know Mr. George would hate the state of the Earth so much. I apologize for that.”

“I wonder if this is something you should apologize for, but anyway… this is also a type of apology, right?”

In any case, AS was a clear portrait. Strictly speaking, it could be said that the situation arose because ‘Geo’s portrait’ had called in George, but Yoo Seong-un did not think that it was Geo’s fault.

'If I think about the situation now, he must have come to me eventually.'

A mystery that did not give up its human self despite being forcibly tied to the source. There was no way that such a being would not seek out Geo, the eye of the source, and from the beginning, this guy was not the type to choose and accept any 'Geo'.

So, in reality, this incident was a problem caused by George's choice of 'Geo'. They could both be the same mystery that is meaningless to distinguish, but Yoo Seong-un decided to blame it on George for now.

'Anyway, there is nothing wrong with my work.'

It was an idea that could almost be considered a model for curators.

'First of all, I understand George's position.'

It's not like it's something a reckless child would do, it's just a normal, reasonable task.

‘In the process, some people may go missing or die…’

Although there were about 500 innocent and innocent victims, the temper of the mystery was relatively mild. From the perspective of a curator and gardener, I understood both the human side that needed the system and the garden side that wanted to get rid of it.

'But our guild leader, no matter what his intentions are, seems to have decided to side with the humans on the outside.'

As for Yoo Seong-un, he simply followed the order for the time being. Moreover, didn’t Geo also hope that there would be no innocent victims?

Yoo Seong-un, who had been admiring Geo's painting in silence for a while, soon opened his mouth.

“…Hmm, is Mr. George a bit of a twisted person?”

“I guess the picture is difficult to understand?”

“If I had to be specific, it seems close to surrealism.”

But it was like a landscape painting, and a portrait. I couldn't even guess what would happen if I went inside. Maybe some people go crazy just by looking at this painting.

‘… After everything is over, should I ask Geo to quarantine me?’

Isn't that one of the purposes of a collector? To isolate dangerous works from the world. In Yoo Seong-un's eyes, the work Geo was drawing right now was worth it.

‘It might be a little difficult to let it wander the world like my previous works… .’

It was a decision that was made in the mind of 'Portrait of Geo', but it seemed okay to bring it up once. Thinking so, Yoo Seong-un looked at Dana, who was lying quietly at her father's feet.

It blinked and looked at the meteor cloud.

"…? huh?"

Oh, wait a minute.

“…Hmm? Huh? Huh?”

“Why are you doing that?”

“Dana doesn’t yawn when she sees me anymore, even though she’s this close.”

“Could it be that Dana has adapted to Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“Was this really the problem?”

“What Mr. Yoo Seong-un is worried about will not happen.”

“I’m a bit scared, Geo.”

What is this going to happen in the future, or in the next life? Yoo Seong-un lamented loudly, but he knew it was too late to back out. He sighed and looked at Dana.

Her jewel eyes sparkled as she stared at the meteor cloud.

“…….”

Suddenly, somewhat unexpectedly, Yoo Seong-un felt a sense of foreboding.

“…It’s late to say this, but you look quite a bit like Mr. George. Dana.”

“Because he is my child.”

“Was Dana a monster that lived in the veins of jewels?”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“By any chance that….”

Yoo Seong-un looked at Geo's unfinished work. It felt like a bit of deja vu, but in the end, Yoo Seong-un ended up asking a meaningless question.

“…It has nothing to do with Mr. George, right?”

“Do you wish so?”

“Then what’s different?”

“That is also at Mr. George’s discretion.”

“This is driving me crazy.”

He laughed hollowly.

“It feels like I met a teacher who really goes over the material right before the test.”

“I would like to tell you that it is not entirely wrong.”

“Well then, I guess I just hope it’s not a failing grade.”

* * *

A few days later, the 'Garden of Delights' opened.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (347)

347

Episode 347

Cha Eun-hyuk really tried not to pretend to know.

“…….”

If only one of his brothers had gone missing and another had not been a target of this expedition.

“Fuck.”

Let's take a closer look at how things got to this point.

First of all, Cha Ara, who went on a business trip to earn money, went missing. I don't know if she was a clown or something like the rumors that have been spreading these days, but one thing is certain: our second child has disappeared.

When I listened to the story of the association staff who informed me of the situation, it was said that the entire team, including Cha Ara, had disappeared inside the dungeon. Then, I couldn't help but wonder if it was related to the clown, but what if this was someone's 'happiness'?

It is possible that the clown named Cha-Ara was harmed in the process of granting wishes.

'I have to tell this to Chae Sol. I have to tell him.'

Our youngest child has a runny nose.

He is quite talented, and people call him a genius here and there, but he is still a child. He is too young. If possible, I didn't want to tell anyone about this incident, but objectively speaking, the youngest, Chae Sol, is stronger than Cha Eun Hyuk himself.

It wasn't that he was trying to pass the burden on just because he was capable. But if he hid all of this and later on, when things really went wrong, Chae Sol would complain, "I could have helped, so why didn't you tell me?" Cha Eun Hyuk would have nothing to say.

'He's a first-class citizen and a priest of the Sun Church… Chae Sol might feel a sense of responsibility. No matter how young he is, he's not the type of person to turn a blind eye to harm to his family. So, no. But even so… .'

And before Cha Eun-hyeok could make a decision about it, he received a call.

—Hyung! I was selected to participate in the newly opened dungeon!

“…Why on earth? Why is there so little talent in the Solar Church?”

-huh!

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok was speechless at the youngest's bright answer. Then he started cursing the incompetent priests of the Solar Church. What are these grown men doing not protecting their precious prospective priests?

-Our teacher was really angry, but he said there was nothing he could do.

“If you are a teacher… Are you sure you are talking about Priest Kang Seo-dam?”

Is it because a pair of prospective priests who are showing unusual results in the religious community have appeared? Recently, Father Kang Seo-dam said that he has been taking care of the two young priests almost exclusively.

'If the issue continues even though he was angry and opposed it, then there's nothing I can do about it. Even within the church, Father Kang Seo-dam is not a pushover...'

Kang Seo-dam was a young but powerful priest. There seemed to be some priests who disliked his strictness and morality, but Kang Seo-dam was strong enough to completely suppress them. However, as expected, his power to speak was limited because he was young.

Kang Seo-dam is the type who rarely raises his voice. Seeing that he was 'angry' to the point that Chae Sol could tell, it must mean that he tried his best but couldn't stop her.

Cha Eun-hyuk seemed to be going a little crazy.

“…….”

-brother?

“Isol-ah.”

-Hey, what's going on?

“Your sister is missing.”

-Huh.

In the end, Cha Eun-hyuk decided not to hide the truth.

“Let me tell you in advance, I just recently heard this news. I’m just telling you this in case you hear this news individually later and think about it on your own, which might make you do something wrong.”

-I see. Should I summon Geo-hyung first?

“If you just summon God like that, no, no. Ha… I’m not completely unrelated to him either, so I’ll try contacting him first.”

It's a situation where you don't know whether your family is alive or dead. It would be a lie to say that you don't want to seek help from an omnipotent and omniscient God right now, but one of Cha Eun-hyeok's strengths is that he can grasp the subject.

Although Cha Eun-hyeok seemed to be receiving some favor from the Black Cloak, it was due to the nature of the being that gave gifts to the good and punishment to the evil. If he dared to use the Black Cloak as he pleased, he could have angered the divinity.

Cha Eun-hyeok was so shocked by the disappearance of his precious younger brother that he was almost blind, but from the perspective of the Black Cloak, he was just one of the many people who sought his help. How many people have sought God’s help for the safety of their families?

'First of all, Mr. Yoo Seong-un said that any favor bestowed by the divine has side effects in some way. That's why he said that trading is the most common and safest form of exchange.'

This was true not only for Cha Eun-hyeok, a civilian, but also for Cha Sol, who was so precious that he could be called an apostle. The divine was great, and humans were weak. No matter how much Cha Sol was a talented person loved by the gods, he was not at a level that surpassed the limits of humanity.

So, even if he asked for help, it shouldn't be done directly. That would be too presumptuous for a mere human being. Cha Eun-hyeok thought about it and tried to think about what to do next.

“Isn’t it true that Father Kang Seo-dam is also included in this trip? He wouldn’t be the type of person to rest alone while leaving his students behind.”

-Ah… That’s right, you decided to go together.

“Yes, listen to him carefully. You really have to listen carefully. Don’t just rush to the center of the dungeon like you did during the last mermaid incident. I believe you definitely learned something from that incident. Don’t you?”

-But, but… Then, my sister… .

“You have to save face, Isul-ah. If I leave this to you, what will I become?”

Cha Eun-hyuk tried to speak calmly.

“No matter how strong you are, you are still our younger sibling, and you are still too young. Your talent is so great that you must have received a lot of praise from the school. Since you are recognized for that much, I guess they included you in this competition. Is that right?”

—… Are you still worried?

“…….”

Before he could say a few more words, Chae Sol had already struck him down. The youngest, Chae Sol, was surprisingly quick-witted despite her bright way of thinking, and was also very perceptive. Cha Eun Hyuk, who was speechless for a moment, calmly continued to speak.

“Yeah, so please take care of yourself.”

-I'll be as careful as possible.

“I’m not telling you not to get hurt, because I know what a hunter’s life is like. But I feel better knowing that you said you’d be careful first. Thank you.”

—Be careful, hyung… I’ll do whatever I need to, so if you find out new information, you have to tell me. Even if you tell me, I won’t cause trouble. I absolutely won’t. So… .

"okay."

After exchanging a few more words of greeting and concern, the call was quickly disconnected. Judging from the various voices heard over the phone, it seemed that the Sun's Order was also quite confused by this incident.

“…It’s not that scary….”

There were too many victims. And everyone recognized the damage. Clowns have tried to define human 'happiness' countless times, but happiness is a subjective concept that is not easy to define.

Someone's happiness caused a perfectly good person to fall from a building and die. Someone's happiness caused someone who was somehow living their life to hang themselves. Someone's happiness tore the limbs of an innocent person apart.

'There was a lot of damage besides this.'

'Happiness' that promotes the collapse of society even if it does not directly harm human life. The government and the association tried to minimize the damage by controlling citizens and the mystery, but in the end, the situation came to this point.

'So it seems like you've decided to seek help from the gods.'

They judged that this was a situation that could not be resolved with human power alone. No, even if there was a way to do so, they judged that they did not have the luxury of going that far. In addition, a dungeon that was clearly related to the clown had been opened, so they needed to take action as quickly as possible.

'Receiving divine help will have many side effects, and seeing the higher-ups who know this so well are contacting various religious groups so openly... I can definitely feel that the situation is serious.'

I've already heard that this dungeon was opened by 'Black Cloak'. The way it took the form of a picture in a frame was so distinct that it would have been impossible not to recognize who it was. Yes, that would be right.

Cha Eun-hyuk stood still, slowly taking stock of the situation.

"……."

And then I cried a little.

"…Why are you doing this to us…."

What did I do wrong to be like this?

'Our children lived so well, and all we get in return is something like this. Why?'

I knew that the world didn't revolve around right and wrong, but I still felt resentful for no reason. Only negative thoughts kept coming to my mind.

What if Cha Ara had been sacrificed for someone else's happiness? What if Cha Sol had died in this war? Cha Eun Hyuk hurriedly packed his luggage with trembling hands.

'No, it's okay.'

Even though she is the weakest among the hunters, Cha-Ara has a strong will to live. I am worried because she has a wide forehead, but she will still try her best to survive.

Chae Sol was the same. The kind youngest child knew very well how much despair his family would fall into if he did something wrong.

'Everything will be okay.'

Eunhyuk Cha raised his head after putting on his outerwear and finishing packing his luggage.

'So I have to try too.'

The only 'strength' that Cha Eun-hyeok possesses is that he is neither a proper veteran gardener, nor a hunter who can handle skills, nor does he have great power or money.

“…I should do what I can do.”

I'll pretend not to know. I'll pretend not to know anything, but I still have to save people, don't I? It was a very obvious fact that my family was included among those 'people'.

One day, Cha Eun-hyeok called out to the youngest son about the picture of the black cloak he had drawn.

“Mr. Geo.”

“Are you ready for work?”

"yes."

“I’m telling you in advance, you can rest today.”

“I don’t like it.”

This was not 'Sergio Hunter'. It was not 'Black Cloak' who gave him the chance to end this situation. This person who was imitating the pitch-black divinity right in front of me was someone Cha Eun-hyeok knew very well.

It was because of the scent of flowers.

“Mr. George, where are you working today?”

“Our Eunhyuk Cha strangely knows me too well….”

The two-legged garden answered.

“Do you remember that I am a gardener?”

“Of course.”

“And we always had a food stall in the garden or in the dungeon.”

“I know that too.”

“So this time it won’t be much different.”

“I heard a new dungeon has opened.”

“I will introduce ‘The Garden of Pleasure’ to Eunhyuk Cha.”

The garden burst into laughter as if it was playing a prank.

“Oh, I think I already introduced you…?”

“I guess so.”

The place of work this time was the 'Garden of Pleasures'. It seemed to be the entity called 'George' itself.

And then you.

“…….”

Did you hurt my brother?

* * *

So, George sent only Cha Eun-hyeok to work and leisurely disappeared, but the problem was that Geo himself did not know about this fact.

In other words, it was only natural that 'Sergio Hunter', who had come out to social life for the first time in a long time, would be flustered when he saw Cha Eun-hyeok lying around in the dungeon that he had created.

"……?"

"Huh?"

Yoo Seong-un, who was next to Geo, was also flustered. He was so flustered that he thought for a moment that he was hallucinating. However, no matter how many times he looked at the other person, he was not a hallucination, but the real person.

Yoo Seong-un was startled by the appearance of a civilian who had fallen into the dungeon/garden that Black Cloak had personally created, and asked.

"Why is Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok here?"

"Yes, that's why I'm here."

"What kind of professionalism do you have to keep a food stall running on a day like this?"

"I don't know either…."

Cha Eun-hyeok was sitting in the food stall with a relieved expression on his face. The members of the collectors' guild, who had been able to enter the depths of the garden thanks to the efforts of the Sergio Hunter, also looked flustered.

"Tea, Mr. Cha Eun-hyuk…?"

“I heard that this place is a garden, not a normal dungeon.”

“Even if your workplace is a garden, isn’t it a bit too much to continue doing business in this chaotic place?”

“Why are you here…? Are you okay? Are you in your right mind?”

Meanwhile, only Bisabal was smiling brightly.

“Since we’ve already met, can I have a bungeoppang?”

“Oh, yes, please have some.”

“How much will it cost?”

“In the past, I would have sold it for money….”

As Cha Eun-hyeok trailed off with a bitter smile, Bisabeol smiled brightly. It seemed that Cha Eun-hyeok was running a food stall alone in this metaphysical garden, which was funny.

“Aha, you came out today to volunteer?”

“I became a semi-forced volunteer. Normally, my boss, George, would collect the money, but as you can see, he didn’t show up for work today. There was no way to collect the money, and now there’s no reason to do it.”

“What a cruel boss, leaving such a weak employee in this mess and disappearing.”

“That’s true. Leaving a weak person like me who would fly away if you blow on him… Ha….”

“Oh my, that’s wrong.”

Bisabul nodded at Cha Eunhyuk, who seemed to be screaming silently, whether it was crying, indignant, or both. Then he looked back at his subordinates and said innocently.

“It looks like a perfect safe zone has been created!”

“Now that I look at it, you seem to lack humanity.”

The collection staff thought about the calm analysis of 'Sergio Hunter'.

'I can't find it even if I just look.'

'Did you realize too late that you are not human?'

'At this point, you can say it's genetic.'

It was an absurd situation in many ways. Since the executives were gathered, they also knew the general identity of 'Cha Eun-hyeok'. Like, he was doing business in a safe zone with a human-shaped garden.

But even Cha Eun-hyeok was just a civilian after all. I heard that he had the qualities of a gardener, but that didn't mean he was safe in a place like this.

“Well, then first of all….”

Geo, who was rubbing his chin, smiled and said.

“Shall we sort out the situation?”

“I agree.”

Yoo Seong-un supported him like that.

“It’s already a mess, so I don’t think it needs to get any worse.”

If this chaos is already happening, isn't the future really bleak?

* * *

“…Okay, very good.”

George smiled brightly and patted Jeong Hae-woon, who was sitting on the chair.

It was an attitude similar to that of a pet dog, but Jeong Hae-woon did not object. However, he did not laugh either. If he cared, he could laugh, but he did not feel the need to care that much.

Even though he knew Jeong Hae-un was like that, George smiled happily.

“It’s finally starting, Jeong Hae-un.”

“…….”

“Thanks to you, I was able to come this far. Ah, is it because you are a gardener who knows all the mysteries of a country? Your skills in bringing chaos to the world were truly amazing.”

“…….”

“The clowns you made are really cute.”

George's face, praising Jeong Hae-un, looked like that of a person in love.

“I was really happy….”

"…under."

Jeong Hae-woon burst into laughter at the sweet misanthropy displayed among the numerous clowns.

“Are you stupid?”

It was time to get as ugly as possible.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (348)

348

Episode 348

The collection store employees nodded their heads as soon as they heard Cha Eun-hyeok's story.

“In this day and age, it would be understandable to be anxious if a family member went missing like that.”

“I don’t recommend entering a dungeon as a civilian, but I understand that you want to try something.”

“But it hasn’t been confirmed that your brother’s disappearance was caused by a clown, so please calm down for now.”

Cha Eun-hyeok nodded at that.

“I’m… calming down.”

“It seems like you haven’t really calmed down since you came here as a civilian.”

“That was true when I first got here, but it’s been about three days since I got here. By then, I’d probably be screaming, crying, or making a scene before calming down.”

“Aha, I understand. About three days?”

The civilians who would fly away after a while were quite rational even in this dungeon. The collector who confirmed this was satisfied without a trace. It was because if the target who had to be protected was just that calm, protection would be much easier.

This time, Eunhyuk Cha asked him.

“But is it really true that it’s been three days? It’s always so bright and shiny here that it’s hard to tell the difference between day and night, and for some reason the clock keeps ticking… I thought it was roughly three days, but I’m not sure.”

To Cha Eun-hyeok's question, 'Sergio Hunter', who had been quietly listening until now, answered.

“We don’t know the exact time either, but we thought it was around a week. That’s the time it took to enter the dungeon and get here.”

“Oh, a week…?”

“It seems quite different from the three days that Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok mentioned.”

“…No matter how out of my mind I was, I don’t confuse three days with a week. There’s also the thing called perceived time….”

“Is that so?”

Geo nodded and looked back at Yoo Seong-un.

“It seems that time is distorted in this space.”

“I was wondering why the contacts from other guilds were so chaotic, and it was as expected.”

“Is it okay if I share information with Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok?”

“Geo, if you want, by all means.”

For the hunters, civilians caught in the dungeon were the subject of unilateral protection or control. This was even more so for large corporations like them. However, that was simply an implicit rule that Geo could change at will.

“Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok is not an ordinary civilian. He is not an awakened person, but he would have been a gardener if he had been born. He is also one of the owners of the food stalls in the garden.”

“So it would be difficult to define Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok as a normal civilian. Isn’t he the only person who can create a mobile safe zone? It seems like he would be a great help in the strategy….”

“I think so too. There’s no need to go out of your way when you can help each other. I think you’re fully aware of the dangerous situations that can arise in dungeons.”

A statement that Cha Eun-hyeok should be acknowledged as a 'colleague' rather than a 'subject of control'. Yoo Seong-woon said this in order to explain the minimum legitimacy of this opinion to the members of the Collection Guild. And the members of the guild nodded.

Of course, they were capable yes-men who were always ready to follow the opinions of the guild leader, their colleagues, and the work. However, it was important to establish tacit agreement in this way, especially in a dungeon like this.

As soon as the opinions seemed to have narrowed down to one, the guild members looked at one person.

“Is that okay, Guild Leader?”

“Are you going to do everything and then leave the decision up to me?”

“Usually, we do all the paperwork and you just make the decisions.”

“Our Yoo Seong-un, you’ve become so cute.”

Bisabeol smiled contentedly. It was nice to see Yoo Seong-un's aegyo increasing recently, as he matched with 'Geo's Portrait'. If it were before, he wouldn't have said such a thing, saying he didn't want to get involved.

“I’m fine with it. Unfortunately, I rarely have the chance to go to dungeons and I’m not a gardener who can go in and out of the garden… so I don’t have any reason to visit Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok’s food stall. I can’t give up this precious experience so easily.”

Geo stepped forward for him.

“If you’re thinking of taking over someone else’s business, it’s a little difficult.”

“Oh, what could be wrong with our son? Would he be offended by meddling in the work of a human he cares about?”

“There are many factors, but first of all, the guild leader’s personality is a problem. I think it would be embarrassing to hang out with him.”

“Oh my goodness, that won’t do. I’ll try to endure it.”

It was a joke, but Geo knew it was serious and the guild members knew it. Only Cha Eunhyuk made a subtle expression, saying, "What a weird joke." Common sense tells you that you can't take away the 'food stall in the garden' and you wouldn't want to.

In any case, Cha Eun-hyeok was able to share the situation without missing anything. It was an extremely rare situation for a civilian to be treated in such a large-scale punitive operation, but it was possible because he was treated as a quasi-hunter and not a regular civilian.

“First of all, as I said earlier, our collectors have been in the dungeon for about a week. Since they are hunters who are relatively accurate in their perception of time, there may be some errors, but I believe it is somewhat accurate.”

The one who started the explanation was 'Sergio Hunter'. The other members of the collector's guild were busy decorating the area around the safe zone without even looking in that direction, as if expressing with their whole body that they had no intention of interfering with the playful activities of such works.

Thanks to that, only Cha Eun-hyeok, Sergio, and Bisabal remained there. After confirming that Cha Eun-hyeok was concentrating on the explanation, Geo continued speaking.

“The collector has entered the advance party.”

“Surely the only people who are considered collectors are the advance team….”

“Oh, of course not. This advance party included Justitia and the hunters of the Association, as well as priests of the Dalnim Church.”

“If it’s Dalnim Church… you said it was in the process of sealing the gate?”

“That’s right, we opened our doors for a moment at the request of the Association. A total of 14 guilds also participated.”

Eunwol and Haeryeong, who had previously participated in the Gangwon-do dungeon raid, also participated.

“The day the advance party entered the dungeon was the 26th, but when was it, Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok?”

“…I don’t know if I can express this in a grand way, like entering a dungeon, but I moved on the 19th. I moved right after hearing the news of the disappearance….”

“Well, you said you moved right after you saw the news that the dungeon entrance had opened, so that would be right around that time. If that’s true, then it seems like Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok’s time was distorted as well. It’s quite different from ours.”

“You keep mentioning time distortion. Is that a feature of this garden?”

“I have to tell you that, to be exact, nothing is certain.”

Terrible uncertainty. If that was a characteristic, it was a characteristic. Geo blinked, rubbing his cheek.

“Even though I drew it, it’s strange that I don’t know how to do it….”

At Geo's words, Visabal's face brightened.

“Oh, are you going to hit me?”

“What are you talking about?”

“Um… Not yet?”

“Whatever it is, you misunderstood.”

“If that’s what our son is like, then that’s what it must be.”

"sure."

Anyway, the story continued again.

“The nature of this dungeon doesn’t end with just time distortion. It’s the same with space, and it’s even difficult to communicate normally with people’s words and actions.”

“Are you saying that words and actions are distorted? I don’t really understand what it means just by hearing it….”

“It can sound much worse or better than what you intended. I’ve seen how the speaker’s attitude can be distorted in that way, and how the content of the speech itself can be twisted.”

“…….”

Giovanni smiled brightly at the sight of Cha Eun-hyeok remaining silent.

“Oh, don’t worry. Everything that Cha Eun-hyeok sees and hears right now is the original.”

"text…."

I was so scared that I thought someone might call me a divine being in a portrait format. If someone else had said that, I might have thought so, but it was even scarier because the other person was wearing a black cloak. Cha Eun-hyeok swept my face.

“…How can I believe that? Help me, please.”

“I think it would be best if Mr. Yoo Seong-un explained this part.”

“Ah, Mr. Yoo Seong-un…?”

“I am greatly helped by the gardener in overcoming that trait.”

“…Not Hunter Sergio?”

“I’m included, but anyway.”

Yoo Seong-un noticed Geo's gaze and came next to him.

“What, why did you call me?”

“I didn’t call you, but is it mental contamination? Has the effect of the snowfield worn off?”

“You wouldn’t be hallucinating now. But there’s no way I wouldn’t notice your gaze. What’s going on?”

“Please tell Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok about Mr. Yoo Seong-woon’s activities.”

“Uh… Is it a little embarrassing to say that?”

Yoo Seong-un rubbed his neck and looked at Cha Eun-hyeok.

“I think you’ve heard that this garden is quite wild.”

“That’s true, but… no, why are you using formal language again?”

“But there is only one power that can ignore it.”

“…That’s another power of the garden?”

“That’s right. And to a lesser extent, it also includes divine power.”

Surprisingly, I found out about this only an hour after entering the dungeon. Of course, it was a story about a collector with a 'Sergio Hunter'.

“We were able to figure it out quickly thanks to Sergio Hunter, who received revelations from the Black Cloak, but unfortunately, it seems that the other advance parties were not able to do so.”

“…It was the same?”

“Can you see that the collectors are all gathered together and walking around? We entered the dungeon at the same time, but when we actually went inside, we were all scattered. Fortunately, the members of the same guild were all together.”

“Well, but that’s a bit….”

“I guess it’s either the dungeon itself or the boss’s tricks?”

If everything was completely mixed up, then I could understand. That could be understood as a characteristic of the dungeon being

'uncertain'. However, everything else was mixed up and distorted, but the team composition of the participants was not the only one.

“We figured out that the owner of this garden was playing some kind of game. Well, what kind of game is it? It’s a survival game? It’s a crazy dungeon where the last team standing wins….”

“Is it really that serious?”

“It’s just a guess. This isn’t a normal dungeon. Even if it has some of the characteristics of a dungeon so that hunters can enter, it’s basically more like a garden. And it’s not a normal garden either, because the owner of a normal garden isn’t this serious.”

“I guess so.”

The garden was a mysterious nature. It could express itself in a similar way, but it never acted like a human being. At least, that is what gardeners on Earth have found out so far.

But perhaps because the owner of this garden was in human form, there were many variables. When Cha Eun-hyeok’s face showed embarrassment, Geo smiled gently as if he knew.

“What a peculiar friend. I have been fooled many times myself.”

From the beginning, it should have felt strange when 'The Garden of Earthly Delights' appeared as a series rather than as one work. Unlike Giovanni and Argio, who contained their hometowns in one work.

But Geo was easily fooled, thinking that it wasn't so strange for a two-legged gardener to have multiple hometowns. As long as he insisted on being human, he should have only one hometown.

From the beginning, George had come to see Geo with the intention of playing a prank.

“It seems that in a world where there is little clarity, even hunters can easily become mentally polluted and fascinated. Then, they end up becoming a part of the dungeon.”

“I’ve heard that explanation a lot.”

“After all, it’s a garden, so the fate of the people who fall into it is bound to be similar. But even this is not certain, because all methods of communication with hunters from other guilds have been confirmed to be distorted.”

It's not that the communication equipment isn't working, but now we can even see the obvious time difference.

Fortunately, after learning of the distortion, the hunters agreed to refrain from communicating with each other as much as possible and proceed with the subjugation individually in order to prevent any possible confusion.

“The primary goal of the collector is to contact the members of the guild that includes the gardener. The only place that has successfully reached an agreement is Eunwol, which has many believers, but because of the dungeon terrain….”

“…Can I meet other people?”

“It seems like it might be difficult because it’s such a large dungeon. So, in reality, this expedition should be considered as an individual battle. I’ve also conveyed the story outside the dungeon in advance.”

“This might be information for the later troops, but I’m not sure if it will be conveyed well.”

“I have borrowed the power of the garden and the divinity, so I can’t help but think as positively as possible.”

"…I…."

Eunhyuk Cha asked, wiping his face.

“…Have you ever met another team in the past week?”

“Aha, none.”

“…….”

Eunhyuk Cha, who was at a loss for words, thought for a moment and then asked again.

“Then, is there anything you’ve figured out, like, a strategy point or something? Of course, I know I’m not qualified to ask about such things… but as someone who operates a mobile safe zone, I wonder if there’s any way…”

“I can tell you as much as you want even if you don’t say so. Of course, the people who have the right to operate the mobile safe zones are mostly Junhunters. However, I don’t think that will be a satisfactory answer.”

“In what sense did you say that….”

“The nature of the dungeon also made it difficult to find any clear singular points. In a situation where it was difficult to tell if something was real or an illusion, no monsters that stood out particularly appeared.”

"ah."

Cha Eun-hyuk groaned.

“What on earth is this place, then….”

“We define it like this for now.”

Giovanni answered with his characteristically clear face.

“It’s called a war of exposure.”

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (349)

349

Episode 349

Eunwol, a guild of believers with deep ties to the Sun Church and the Moon Church.

“Jeong Yeong-won.”

"…mother."

“Hey, hey, don’t look at things like this….”

“Mom is over there….”

“Oh really, that’s fake.”

It was a group of believers who could control their powers, even if it was weak, and there was a gardener among them. Although it was the most stable combination to fight against this dungeon, the atmosphere was not very good.

“Mother, ah, my mother…!”

“How many times has this happened?”

“Ahhhh!! Let go of me, Mom…! Mom! Mom! I’m here!!”

Jeong Yeong-won, the only gardener in the team, had long been damaged by trauma despite her powers. The only person who knew she was a gardener was the team leader who was currently holding her, but even he was now exposed.

“Mom…!!”

“This is driving me crazy.”

The team leader was half Jeong Yeong-won's guardian. Her mother, who was a gardener, one day became one with the flower garden she tended. Jeong Yeong-won inherited her will and fanaticism and became the gardener of the flower garden.

She was crying out for her mother as she looked at the human figure in the beautiful flower garden, made up of flowers. This wasn’t the first or second time. It was obvious what Jeong Yeong-won was looking at in the flower cluster.

“…Why are you so annoying, Yeongwon….”

One of the Silvermoon guild members approached and asked the team leader.

“I… How about taking a break first?”

“I’ve already rested too much.”

“It’s not just Jeong Yeong-won’s problem. The only gardener in the team is like this, so the other team members are also in bad shape.”

“Because my strongest shield is gone. Ha, I guess I’ll have to rest again….”

“The investigation is still being delayed, but if things continue this way, we will not be able to avoid total destruction. If we were true believers, we could have helped ease the burden on Jeong Yeong-won, but we are sorry.”

“No, it’s okay. There hasn’t been any major damage yet.”

One thing that could counter this dungeon was the power of another garden, and the other was the power of the divine. However, Eunwol was a gathering of believers, not a group of formal priests who could handle the divine power.

The team leader groaned as he knocked Jeong Yeong-won unconscious.

“I expected it would be a headache when I first came in as a starter, but this is a bit serious.”

In fact, entering a dungeon with this level of danger as an advance party was tantamount to risking one's life. Even though the advance party itself was unusually large, the danger did not change as long as they were scattered. No, it was even more difficult.

Yes, originally, it was said that the vanguard was half-dead, but even considering that, this was indeed difficult. The situation continued to worsen, as if someone was scheming. This was because it was not something that could be solved simply by using one's head and body.

“Isn’t our guild pretty mentally strong?”

“Well, um, I guess it’s not that low.”

“But how can it get this bad?”

It's not that I haven't been to dungeons that involved mental attacks before. And at that time, the most important thing was the hunter's own mental power and willpower. In that sense, the believers of Eunwol, who were not chosen by the gods but could borrow some of their power, were relatively strong on the inside.

But this dungeon was on a different level.

“What about the guild leader?”

“I am praying to the sun and the moon.”

“Yes, let’s pray one more time before we go. That would be good. There’s nothing better than that to get your mind back on track.”

“I will report this to the guild leader as well.”

“Fuck….”

He wiped his face as he looked at the fainted Jeong Yeong-won. He didn't show it because it was obvious that his pride was hurt, but he couldn't remember how many times his heart sank when he saw the girl he loved like a daughter struggling instead of fainting. His stomach lurched.

‘… This dungeon strikes at a person’s weakest point.’

Humans are animals with weak eyesight. First of all, this dungeon itself was beautiful and pretty. The colors were pure and shiny, and it didn't seem like it would cause any harm. The scent, the temperature, the humidity, everything was comfortable.

It opens people's hearts wide and slowly seeps in, destroying their minds. It was just like people who were addicted to drugs. Even though they went crazy and cried, they couldn't let go of that 'something'.

And in that crazy way, he says that my happiness lies there.

'It's creepy.'

This dungeon brings out the ugliest side of humanity.

“…….”

By that time, they were exhausted.

Because he had to watch the bottom of himself and his colleagues.

* * *

“…A war of revelations?”

Geo nodded to Cha Eun-hyeok’s question.

“This garden keeps provoking people. It pricks sensitive spots and leaves bait that can’t help but be harsh. When I listened to the cases of other teams, they said that they were like people addicted to highly addictive drugs.”

"…that…."

“In the end, it seemed like they were training themselves to accept the attack sweetly. Just like the ‘clowns of happiness’ endlessly asked people about happiness, they were shaking them with such twisted happiness as bait.”

“…….”

“I heard that there have already been quite a few casualties and deaths.”

Giovanni was still smiling, but Cha Eunhyuk felt that something was wrong with his temper. He had felt this way before, but it seemed like 'Giovanni' didn't like George very much.

“That’s the worst part. This garden makes it impossible to recognize an attack as an attack. In this situation, conflicts arise, people get tired, the team stagnates….”

“…I understand what you are saying.”

Eunhyuk Cha, who had been thinking for a moment, asked again.

“But I still don’t understand why the term ‘exposure war’ came up.”

“It’s literally like this. It’s about publicly revealing certain events or past events.”

“Like the things that often happen on the Internet… like the things that happen to politicians or hunters?”

“I guess you could say they are similar.”

Geo blinked and looked into Cha Eun-hyuk’s eyes.

“How kind and upright a person is Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok?”

“…? Uh, yes…??”

If I don't be good, will I die?

When Cha Eun-hyeok froze at the question of none other than the divine, Yoo Seong-woon, who had been watching him, intervened. He smiled awkwardly and neutralized his friend’s inhuman question.

“I’m not scared when you ask me like that, Geo.”

“I didn’t mean to do that.”

“I guess I should explain the rest.”

Yoo Seong-un continued Geo's explanation.

“I personally think that Eunhyuk Cha is an honest and upright person.”

“? Oh, yes… That… Thank you?”

“And you think so too?”

“I’ve never done anything so bad that I deserve to be arrested… but to say that I’m honest or upright is a bit too much praise.”

“That’s right, someone, including yourself, knows that person’s imperfections. People can’t be perfect.”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“Everyone has flaws. What may be good to one person may seem bad to another. There may have been times when you were hated, times when you made mistakes and blamed yourself….”

“Where in the world is there a person so pure and innocent that he has done nothing wrong?”

“Yeah, I think so too. But when those parts are exposed so clearly, there are bound to be things that people can’t help but shy away from. Right?”

“Well… that’s natural….”

Cha Eun-hyuk thought that all humans are inevitably selfish. However, that does not mean that Cha Eun-hyuk liked selfish people or such aspects. Naturally, Cha Eun-hyuk was also a human, so he preferred good and upright people.

Yoo Seong-un pointed that out.

“This dungeon is designed to expose just such things.”

“…In what way?”

“It seems like there are a lot of different methods?”

Sometimes, the person's memories would reappear, sometimes something symbolic would appear and trigger a traumatic seizure, and sometimes the guilt would be visualized and make someone resentful.

“Or, it is said that sometimes it appears in the form of writing, like a report or a diary.”

It felt as if a small dungeon based on the concept of a certain weakness of people had been added to this huge garden. Thanks to this, it was natural that the already unrealistic structure of the 'Garden of Pleasure' would become even more complex and bizarre.

“…What, are you bringing up your dark history?”

“If we were to speak lightly, it would be like that, but well. If we just look at the number of people who were injured and died, it’s easy to see that it’s not a situation to laugh off.”

“I meant to say this lightly… That wasn’t my intention.”

“I know that I was trying to understand you in my own way. I wasn’t blaming you, so don’t worry. It seems that such petty stories do come up.”

Geo, who was watching Yoo Seong-un smile innocently, smiled as well and said.

“So, in short, this is a garden whose purpose is to make people ugly. You can see that it is very malicious, unlike other gardens, in that it makes people avoid the shortcomings that everyone has.”

Then Giovanni added firmly.

“It’s because you don’t have social skills.”

“Ah, that, uh….”

“It seems closer to being thrown away than not existing, but I think that’s the case. Even manners between people are ugly hypocrisy, and he is a great man.”

“Oh, I see.”

Cha Eun-hyeok, who was at a loss for words due to Giovanni’s rare and strange coolness, continued to ask.

“But if it’s like this, isn’t there no way to fight back?”

“It’s unpleasant to be manipulated by the owner of this garden, but there are ways to deal with it.”

“That… holding on with the garden and divine power?”

“Actually, that’s just holding out, as you said, rather than responding. But didn’t I keep using the word ‘exposure war’?”

In the lives of ordinary people, a war of exposure means fighting each other. It means revealing information that could be most damaging to the other party if it were known, with the intention of shedding blood.

“We can also expose the most painful part of this garden.”

“…Is that possible? It’s called a garden?”

“And yet this garden insisted on the human form.”

“So there must be memories as vulnerable as humans?”

“One way or another, isn’t this place ultimately revealing the ‘ugly side of humanity’?”

It was a simple story.

“If the master of this dungeon had followed a fate other than human, the story would have been much more complicated… Well.”

As long as he remained human, he could not avoid being influenced by the characteristics and rules of the garden. George himself must have known this well. On that subject, he was waiting for the punitive force.

Perhaps that was one of the things George wanted. Maybe he wanted a chance to escape from beauty. He was causing trouble for the entire country by trying to vent his frustrations right before becoming a Buddha.

However, if he had kindly taught me the strategy, I had no reason not to follow it. Even though it was not pleasant to follow the path that George had laid out.

“It’s a mental dungeon, so shouldn’t we respond accordingly?”

“I understand that in the end it’s a battle of wits between humans and gardeners.”

“Of course, so far we haven’t found a single clue about him!”

Giovanni burst into his signature bright laugh as if trying to lighten the mood.

“I decided not to be too disappointed.”

“Is that so?”

“Given Mr. George’s personality, he seems to be very forgiving, so I think we’re still at the beginning of the entrance. You could say we’re taking some time to adjust before we move on to more dangerous levels of exploration.”

“Adaptation… Will this work? It’s not a physical thing, but it’s a mental and past issue… Relationships can easily fall apart in a moment of carelessness.”

“Aren’t humans animals of adaptation?”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok was speechless. Of course, there was an idiom like that, but he hoped that Black Cloak would not believe it and take an attitude like, 'I believe you guys will do well on your own!'

“But isn’t this a situation where there is quite a bit of damage?”

“I think people have realized by now that it’s not enough to just blindly borrow the power of the garden or the divine.”

“…Oh, right.”

“Isn’t it time to try something different? We need to find a way to counter this mental attack before it gets to a more dangerous level.”

Fortunately, this advance team was selected to reflect the seriousness of the situation and were generally competent people. No matter how dire the situation, they were not the type of people who would simply sit back and do nothing.

Cha Eun-hyeok had an ambiguous expression on his face, whether he still didn't understand or he lacked faith.

“What if there is another way?”

“I’m not sure, but….”

Geo blinked and smiled.

“I’ll try anything.”

Doesn't competence essentially mean the ability to deal with variables?

* * *

“Sanarae, you little bastard!!!”

“Ugh.”

The leader of Hae-ryeong grabbed Sanarae by the collar and roared.

“There’s no one here who doesn’t know that you’re a worthless brat. Since when did you start to act like such a brave brat! Huh?! Do you think I supported you so that you could be so pitiful and cower?!”

Sanarae whined at the tremendous force.

“Ah, no… Banzaang….”

“Don’t you know that this is a guild full of idiots?”

“Oh, you know?”

“If you know, why are you acting like that!”

"I don't know…!"

“Why don’t you know? How much is the food I fed you?!”

“Why are you doing this to me….”

“Why? Why?! Why are you saying something like that now?!”

The class president grabbed Sanarae by the collar and shook her hard.

“Wake up, you punk! You were just trash all along! A loser of character who would always pick fights, a dirty rascal who wouldn’t listen to anyone, and a total loser with no special qualities other than a good face! Do you understand?!”

“Class president, I’m crying….”

“You too, listen up you little bastards, this is a message from the guild leader!!”

The leader of Hae-ryeong shouted at the hesitating guild members.

“We were at the bottom anyway, you know?!”

“Oh, why are you saying that again?”

“It was originally a guild formed by socially misfits. What difference does it make if we look down on each other here? Did you come into Hae-ryung without knowing that there were these kinds of guys? That’s not true!”

“Well, it’s the class president….”

“The faint call is annoying, so throw it away!!”

She glared at Sanarae again, who was still holding her by the collar and staring wide-eyed. The man with the clean face was making such an intimidating expression that it didn’t feel like she was feeling sorry for him, but rather annoyed.

Would it have been better if she had been this obedient in everyday life? If she had pretended to reflect and acted even half as she does now, the amount of stomach medicine she would have had to take would have been reduced by half.

Anyway, he was like a beast of a man who had no merits at all. In a situation where he was already tired and about to collapse, how could he dare to lose his cool? It was an impudent thing that he should not have dreamed of without my permission.

“Sana-rae, what are you going to do for a living?”

“I… I’m from Haeryeong, and the class president… are you trying to kick me out?”

“So what are you going to do when you get out of this dungeon?”

“I have to live by doing what the class president tells me to do… You can’t abandon me.”

“Then what the fuck is wrong with you?! Do you really think I’d let a kid like you out into society?!”

“…But….”

Sanarae spoke gropingly, still held by the collar.

“…I’m not human.”

“That’s how it was originally, you little beast.”

“It’s not even a beast.”

“I knew it, you damned punk. Even animals listen when you beat them.”

“People… I killed a lot.”

“Don’t you think we’re not?”

“…I caught it and ate it….”

Behind Sanarae, his 'weaknesses' and his 'pride' were scattered all over. In the dark laboratory filled with the blood and flesh of innocent people, Sanarae spoke again while holding the collar.

“I’m a monster.”

A created humanoid monster, a homunculus. Sanarae was a deteriorated version of a homunculus created by damned 5th-grade citizens. In other words, it was a monster that underwent illegal experiments.

He started out as a doppelganger, grew up eating humans thrown to him by illegal researchers, and through experiments, grew into an entity that almost perfectly imitated humans. Inside him, the souls of those sacrificed in experiments were swarming.

“Is that okay?”

The one who brought him in and raised him as a human was the leader of Hae-ryung's guild. And most of the guild members did not know about this fact. And today, it was finally revealed. As a monster, his nature that he could never abandon was revealed.

Monsters, like Sanarae, were excited by human suffering. They were monsters who enjoyed seeing their suffering and took pride in violence. Even if you say no, they're just trash. They were ambiguous beings that were neither human nor monster.

And the class president's answer to this was always the same.

“Don’t listen to me again, you little punk.”

Boom-!!!

It was so consistent.

“……!!”

Sanarae's head was wrapped in great pain.

“…Kwaaak…!”

“Do you think I’m doing this to impress you? Do you really think that’s why you’re acting like this?”

“Uh, no…??”

“As the class president, I have a duty to make you at least act like a human being.”

“I’m doing well…?”

“Sanarae, you learned something wrong. People don’t live like you.”

The class president smiled warmly.

“You’re just a less than human being.”

"aha."

“So stop whining and get to work. Unless this is a sophisticated strategy of yours to cause Hae-ryung’s attack to fail through a disease.”

“Yes, class president.”

“Oh my goodness. You answer so well and you’re so pretty.”

“Am I pretty?”

“When a kid suddenly starts acting up, he starts to act like a bastard.”

“Eww!!”

The tension of the guild members eased at the sight of the two people looking no different than usual.

“…The leader wasn’t a human being.”

“That’s true… If he were a human, he wouldn’t have beaten up a reporter to that extent….”

“Somehow, just breathing makes people feel like their insides are going to burst.”

“That’s because you’re not really human… You really didn’t know.”

“You’ve become a real human. I guess you didn’t study hard enough.”

“I might not have been able to study that much because I was busy with my work.”

“Yes, that’s right. Let’s understand.”

It was an absurd conclusion, but it was Hae-ryung's answer. They didn't need any touching consolation or speeches.

Originally, it was a place where fighting cocks who couldn't adapt to society gathered. If there were a monster that was good at imitating humans in a place where beasts gathered, then its humanity would be among the top among the Haeryeong guild members. That's why Sanarae must be the leader.

Hae-ryung was able to console herself with a friendship built on fists, or something like that. Whether the leader's true identity was a monster or a human, it didn't really matter.

“Then, class president, what do we do now?”

“You bastards, come find the safe zone that everyone else has found.”

“Yes.”

That's how Hae-ryeong found the answer.

One by one, other people began to find their own ways.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (350)

350

Episode 350

Hae-ryung chose the method of saying, "Oh, that's right, our beastly son." In other words, he meekly acknowledged his ugly bottom. It's like a fish living in water doesn't drown.

This was a method that was possible because Hae-ryung originally had low, if not negative, expectations of himself. Even if they were criticized as “You’re trash,” they were ready to say, “What do you know?” Hae-ryung’s guild members were pretty good at self-objectification.

Of course, this was not a method that anyone could do, so Dalnimgyo chose knowledge and research.

“I did it, I did it, I did it…!!”

The voice of a young woman shook the garden.

“It works successfully!!!”

“Whaaaah!!”

“As expected, you are our moon!!”

“Praise her!!!”

The new moon of the Dalnim Church, Aram, who had now grown a little physically, held up the brightly shining moon and shouted, and the priests cheered. Their cheers seemed to reach the heavens.

Bishop Aram, once a saint, cried out with tears of pride.

“The formula is finally out! As expected, if our seniors help us, there is no formula we cannot figure out! Let’s all praise our seniors who have figured out this complicated and difficult mystery!”

“As expected, they are the saints and saintesses of the Dalnim Church!”

“Thank you to those who created the brain and heart in that poor moon!”

“Oh, noble and wise saints of the Dalnim Church!”

The priests of the Dalnim Church were actually close to scholars. And their social skills were relatively, somewhat, very low. They could not have the courage to solve the situation with simple, ignorant, and loose methods like Hae-ryung.

Eventually, they worked out how to mimic the power of the gardener. This was largely due to the fact that time was distorted more than the other teams. For almost four months, the priests of the Dalnim Church put their heads together and focused on creating a 'garden formula'.

If we don't find a solution, we'll all be wiped out before we can even properly explore, so we've figured out a way.

“With this, both hunters and priests can mimic the power of the garden!”

Aram, full of joy, wept again.

“There is an end to this crazy experiment…!”

“I am very glad that the 481043rd and final experiment was a success.”

“It is a miracle that we were able to achieve this in less than a year. How could this have been possible without the help of adults?”

“That’s right!”

“We must never forget the help of our young dragons who warmed the hands and feet of our seniors so that the moon could roll smoothly.”

“Of course, Bishop…!!”

In fact, research on this has been going on since the time when 'gardens' and 'gardeners' were introduced to the world. They knew that 'mystery' was at the foundation of all things, including skills, dungeons, and monsters, and they studied its power.

And as a result, in this difficult situation, Dalnimgyo finally succeeded in their experiment. They created the 'Garden Formula' and were able to overcome the severe distortion of this garden using divine power.

“It’s definitely more effective than divine power, right?”

“When we lift the seal on the church, we must first recruit priests who have the qualities of a gardener….”

“However, we have come this far thanks to the gardeners’ consistent support.”

“It might have been uncomfortable, but they were truly grateful people.”

“I will have to thank you again later.”

Naturally, they were not as good as the Jinjjobaegi Gardener. This formula could only work within the garden, because they borrowed the power of the garden they were staying in. That was how quickly they consumed their body and mind.

But it was much better than nothing. At least, by dyeing themselves with the colors of this garden, the intensity of the mental attack was almost nonexistent. It applied a similar principle to how one's own organs do not attack themselves.

“Then let’s make this formula known to everyone! It might be difficult to share it since our communication equipment is in shambles, but wouldn’t it be ridiculous to keep this to ourselves?”

“Your Majesty, you are right! I still remember the number of deaths I heard in the last communication. If we use the formula, there will be less distortion in the communication equipment…!”

Another priest spoke to the excited priests.

“But can other people use this formula?”

"…ah?"

"ah…."

“Ahh….”

It wasn't a formula that specialized only for the divine power of the Dalnim Church. They started making the formula with the goal of maximizing the survival of the participants in this expedition. However, the problem they didn't anticipate was that the target users were not hunters or priests of other religions.

“This… I’m asking if anyone would know or listen to this, except for our Dalnim Church.”

The problem was that other people were not as good at studying as Dalnim-gyo.

“…….”

“…….”

“…If I give a lecture….”

“You want to give a lecture to the hunters with such poor communication equipment?”

“It would be quicker to simplify the formula so that anyone can use it.”

Aram nodded. She didn't think she could instill the formula in ordinary people who didn't know anything using this wretched communication device. There was a high chance that they wouldn't understand even the most basic formula.

The association staff and priests were somewhat okay, but most hunters, on average, were somewhat lax in their studies. Rather than praying for an unspecified number of people to increase their intelligence in a short period of time, it seemed more realistic for the intellectuals who created the formula to put in a little more effort.

“Everyone, gather again, let’s simplify the formula.”

“Ah… how much do I have to reduce to make those ignorant people understand….”

“You shouldn’t criticize me like that just because I’m not good at studying.”

Anyway, Dalnim Church found their own way to fight back.

Also, they weren't the only ones adapting to the situation. In the end, if they didn't want to die, they all had to adapt to this mental attack and this unfamiliar, elusive mystery.

“Uh, uh uh….”

“? What is it?”

“Hey, I think I got this.”

“What happened?”

“I have a feeling it’s a garden or something!”

“Have you been drinking? You punk, you used to be an alcoholic, but you really are….”

“No, I said no?! You want to keep poking me where it hurts?!”

Some hunters were seeing the benefits of their diligence during the previous 'system failure', of reaching out to retired hunters and less visible gardeners who had been through the system's absence and learning from them.

“This is crazy, how can I do this? It’s so hard to do this in real life.”

“Ah… something is a bit different. It feels completely different from Earth. I think it was successful because the environment is different from Earth.”

“What exactly is the difference?”

“It feels like I can breathe a little easier? Why? If you’re going to use water magic, it’s better to do it in a place with a lot of water. It feels just like that.”

“How the hell is a dealer supposed to understand that if he’s not a magician?”

“No, think about it, then you can breathe in a place without oxygen?!”

“Is that the same as this?!”

In the process of sharing the secret, there were some commotions and conflicts, but some people also saw results. For the first time in their lives, they were experiencing the 'mystery' itself, rather than a skill that depended on a system.

“…So this is what a mystery is.”

“It’s not that it doesn’t have any similarities to Skill, but this….”

“I feel like I have a new sense.”

There were more than one or two people who had encountered this situation. There were quite a few people who had tried to learn something new during the 'system failure', and thanks to this, there were quite a few hunters among the participants this time.

“Hey, hey, look at this.”

“It’s a skill you use often. What do you want me to see?”

“No, it’s different. It feels like something I created myself, without going through the system.”

“Anyway, you’re doing something weird.”

And in the process, another strange phenomenon occurred.

"…uh?"

“Poetry, the system…!”

“What the heck, why is it like this?!”

The system of hunters who were able to successfully sense and handle 'mystery' began to break down.

It started displaying a bunch of broken letters and symbols, then it started to crackle and not work. After a while of this weirdness, the system went completely black and only displayed a few sentences.

Check variables

Deviated from basic calculations

An error occurred

And then it stopped right away.

Shut down the system

It was a difficult thing to understand.

“What, what, why is it like this…?!”

“Hey, my system is off.”

“No, it’s not like the reservation window or something like that….”

Some of them even tried to interpret this phenomenon.

“…Is that really true?”

"what?"

“Did the server crash?”

“What did I do?”

“It says here that it is a basic calculation.”

The hesitant hunter came up with this hypothesis.

“It’s kind of like, the… game tutorial is over. Beyond the basic stages, the current system can’t do any more calculations.”

“…The system is a game?”

“No, that type of game has been around on Earth all along. Even before the Great Disaster. Honestly, doesn’t it seem a bit similar? Am I the only one who thinks this way?”

“So the system borrowed that game format?”

“I’m just a family member too….”

A similar assumption was made by the head of the association, Dan Hae-ra, who was one of the vanguard.

“…….”

“Chairman, this is….”

“…It was a tutorial.”

She laughed out loud for the first time in a long time.

“Aha, hahaha…!”

“…….”

“Oh my gosh… This really is a game. It’s based on a game format.”

So that as many people as possible can easily adapt after the chaotic catastrophe. Isn't it really kind of you to call yourself a 'teacher'?

I realized the significance of the existence of the Danhae system and the reason for the current situation related to it. 'Teacher Sergio' really became the system for the survival of mankind and their education, and only after people felt the 'mystery' without the help of the system did they complete the basic education.

If you've reached that level, you won't die even without the system.

“Our director, you can still use your skills even though the system is down?”

“Yes, that’s right. It’s not that there aren’t people who haven’t achieved success, but I’ve also identified many cases similar to mine.”

“When exactly did the system shut down?”

“It was when I detected the mystery that was the basis of the skill and confirmed that I could use my skill with the detected mystery.”

“In other words, the system shut down as if it had been waiting for you when you were sure you could use the skill without the system’s help. Am I right?”

“Yes, maybe… I think so.”

“It’s really fun, I like it.”

Dan Hae-ra, who had been blinking, soon smiled brightly.

“…The system must continue to exist.”

This had endless uses.

'Jung Hae-woon said that this power is not mine, but I still feel that this power belongs to me. That means that there is a possibility that I, as the owner of the promise, can be involved in the system that is its product to some extent… .'

This time it was basic training, so how about going into advanced training next time? If that were possible, the future planned by the symbol of eternity would come even sooner.

I decided to admit that it was a short-term solution. This time, the education of the 'Black Cloak' was quite effective. The country was shaken and there were quite a few deaths, but that was a sacrifice worth accepting compared to the results this time.

'The system must be maintained. There are so many benefits to be gained from it. Now that we understand the nature of the system, its utilization can be improved in the future. What better teaching material is there to properly train hunters who can exercise dangerous force anytime, anywhere?'

Her goals had changed, but the tasks she had to accomplish were similar: to conquer 'George', a single-minded man, and to persuade

'Portrait of Geo' to develop a new system.

'If you say you can't be persuaded, I guess I'll have to make a promise.'

Just as the many divinities had 'promised' not to interfere with the Earth without permission, Danhae's power was effective even against the great mysteries. And for that, Danhae had to prepare a very high 'price'.

“From now on, I will move on my own, individually.”

“But, Chairman…!”

“You don’t think I can take care of myself, do you? Are you perhaps one of those people who can’t survive without my care?”

“No, but isn’t it too dangerous? This is both a dungeon and a garden.”

“That’s why it’s even more valuable when you explore alone.”

I had to accumulate more memories, more emotions, so that I could gather and accumulate them and develop a new system in the near future.

“See you later.”

So Dan Hae-ra started to take individual action.

* * *

And then, a few days later.

“…and, clown….”

"what?"

“A clown appeared.”

The full-scale 'attack' has begun.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (351)

351

Episode 351

It is true that no one can deny this, but it is certain that the 'attacks' of the garden have been passive so far.

They simply existed and fascinated people, destroying their minds without showing any active attitude. However, after people gradually got used to the existence of the 'mystery', it was clear that the actions of the participants had triggered the trigger.

“Tell me more, clown? Are you saying there are clowns here too?”

“It looked similar, but it was completely different from what I’ve seen on Earth! It attacked me directly and it was even contagious…! Seoyoung turned into a clown and I killed her!!”

“Calm down, if you talk like that, I won’t be able to properly report to you. What exactly were you doing when the clown showed up? I sent you out to investigate, where were you and what were you doing?”

“He, he, he fell off the edge of the stairs….”

This 'Garden of Delights' was different from ordinary dungeons in many ways. Unlike other dungeons that consist of a beginning, middle, and end, it was truly nature itself.

This place, where time and space are twisted like a surrealist work, was so complex that it was impossible to pinpoint the exact location with words like 'edge of stairs.'

But one thing was clear.

“As soon as we found this, the clown chased after us….”

“…This is….”

The woman squinted her eyes at the jewelry. It was so faded, broken, and damaged that it was hard to believe it had come from this dungeon, where everything seemed so beautiful and clean.

The guild leader muttered.

“Bracelet, huh…?”

Another guild member said to him, seeing what the guild leader was holding in his hand.

“Ah… that looks like an ankle bracelet.”

“Anklet? Foot?”

“There’s a place to put it on your ankle, and a separate place to put it on your toes.”

“The larger one goes around your ankle and the smaller one goes around your toes.”

“Yes, of course there are items that can be worn like that for hands too….”

The guild member nodded after examining the broken ornament with his gloved hands. As a member of the guild who was in charge of inspecting and managing all items coming into the guild, he had no choice but to know a lot about such ornaments.

“If it’s this long, it’ll fit as an anklet. It’s small enough for a slightly older person to wear on their hand, since it’s probably worn by someone of a younger age group. But the middle part is too long to wear on your hand. It’s meant to be worn on your foot.”

“Why is that kid wearing an anklet like this? She’s going to catch a cold. It doesn’t look like it has any kind of warmth or defense buffs.”

“Yeah, I thought that was a bit weird too. This type of anklet is… like a slipper or flip-flop, so you can’t wear shoes with it. That’s why anklets like this are often cursed.”

“You don’t think it’s something that has a positive feel? Hmm, if you call it a curse….”

“It’s a type of item that our guild rarely has.”

The gems that were embedded in the ornament were badly damaged, but they were still large and shiny. Above all, their shape was extremely splendid. They were definitely not the size and shape that could be hidden by shoes.

“Why are items usually made by humans and have multiple effects? Especially accessories, they can’t help but have multiple meanings. That makes them even more special.”

“This doesn’t really look like an item… but you know what it’s used for, right?”

“It doesn’t look like an item, so it’s more about meaning than purpose. It’s small, so it’s for children, and it’s flashy, so it’s for show, but you can’t wear shoes on it. It’s one of two things. It’s either for restraint or for display.”

“Uh… doesn’t that seem a bit perverted either way?”

“Considering the traces of use, it doesn’t seem like an item that just fell out of thin air. Usually, items made from other dimensions like this have a lot of strange stories, Guild Leader. This is a passable level."

The guild members skillfully read the stories woven into the accessories.

"The target was probably a child of low social status. If they had been of high social status, they wouldn't have been prevented from wearing shoes. Or perhaps the environment had nothing to do with social status."

"An environment unrelated to status… Oh, like kidnapping?"

"That could be a possibility. After all, it's an item that doesn't take into account the health and pain of the wearer, even if the person being used is a child who can easily get hurt."

"And also."

"As I said before, it's either for restraint or for show. The former is to prevent her from running away since she can't wear shoes, and the latter… is she a pretty girl who would look good in something like this? No matter how I think about it, it seems like it was intended to be made for display purposes."

"Ooh, you look like a pervert. A pedo?"

"That may be true. Anyway, I guess I was a bird in a cage, as they say. I guess I was treated well enough to be given such dazzling trinkets, but I couldn't run away with such great treatment."

A guild member who seemed to have lost his mind in the conversation between the two grabbed his guild leader.

"…G, Guild Leader, what should we do about Seoyoung…."

"Are you talking nonsense? What are you going to do, after you killed him?”

“No, that’s not what I meant…!”

“You’re going to resurrect someone who’s already dead? Sorry, I can’t do that.”

"…ah…."

“Anyway, I found out something good. It will help you with your strategy if you read the story. I’ll give you an incentive later.”

“…….”

“Where exactly did you find this and how? If it’s a dungeon where the story is important, there should be clear conditions for finding such items.”

“…….”

“Tch… I’m going crazy.”

The guild leader clicked his tongue and willingly showed mercy. It seemed that he needed a break before opening his mouth. He could afford to give her that much convenience since he had achieved this. She began to make her own guesses without the help of witnesses.

For the first time, this garden showed a non-passive attack. And the old and broken ornaments that didn't fit in with this dungeon, and the various stories that could be read from them. If you think about it all together... .

“This is the dungeon master’s story, right?”

“Well… at least there’s a connection.”

“Okay, let’s just find a few more of these. We don’t have to do a walkthrough.”

She wasn't a particularly bad guild leader, at least not by modern standards.

The woman was the leader who paid her salary without fail, and if she worked overtime or did something particularly well, she would give extra compensation. She was not the type of person who neglected the management of her guild members or left civilians and porters in the dungeon.

But happiness is inherently subjective, and the grief of losing a close friend is deeply personal.

“…Seoyoung….”

The team was completely annihilated over the course of three days.

It must have been the work of a clown, perhaps.

* * *

“…If we really have to be specific, is this going to be a defensive battle?”

“A defensive battle?”

“Ah, I don’t know Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok very well.”

“I understand that it is a roughly defensive battle.”

“Actually, that’s all.”

Yoo Seong-woon, who shared the information with every team he could contact, explained to Cha Eun-hyeok.

“Dungeon raiding can be divided into two very, very basic methods. One is exploration and the other is defense. The former is going to find it, and the latter is finding it.”

“Uh… Are you talking about monsters?”

“That’s right. This is a space that has been reconstructed into a dungeon, so it’s natural that monsters will appear. It seems like the clowns we saw on Earth are appearing… These guys aren’t gathered anywhere.”

“He even said he would come looking for me on his own.”

“If there’s a trigger, it seems like they’ll use that as an opportunity to attack. Or they’ll make contact in a rather shady manner. I heard they’re really good at causing conflict within a team and annihilating them.”

Cha Eun-hyeok asked him once more.

“Then wouldn’t it be peaceful if we just didn’t touch that trigger?”

“I can’t live here in peace my whole life….”

"ah…."

“We have to try and attack it.”

At that point, Visabal smiled and said.

“In Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok’s case, shouldn’t we also look for his younger sibling?”

“…That’s right. But, even though I came here to look for clues…what on earth should I do in this situation….”

“Just by providing us with a safe zone like this, you are doing us more than we can imagine. The collectors are sure to make a deal, and I promise to help you find the car hunter.”

"…thank you."

“And this is a message that only the guild leader received just now.”

To be exact, it was a call from outside the dungeon, from Earth.

“The first trigger… was it called an anklet?”

“Yes, it was. It was a small anklet that a child could wear.”

“We’re probably seeing that as the cause, but we’ve heard reports that the clowns on Earth have disappeared. It’s hard to say for sure given the nature of clowns, but the Association and Justitia have confirmed that it is.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat and asked.

“Did they all come here?”

“I don’t think there’s a low chance. Congratulations, Eunhyuk Cha. If you’re lucky, you might even meet your younger sibling in this dungeon.”

“Guild leader, please.”

Yoo Seong-un calmly freaked out, and the other employees were silently freaked out. What Bisabal had just said was no different from saying, "Your little brother has become a clown, right?" What would happen if he made the already weak water owner even more sensitive?

But Visabal was surprisingly confident.

“Hmm, well, isn’t it fortunate that we now have a better chance of finding at least one of our missing siblings?”

“I think it would be better for father not to say anything.”

“Should I close it?”

“Please.”

The collector checked Cha Eun-hyeok's condition as discreetly as possible.

“…….”

Yes, it was because I received information a few days ago that his younger brother, Chae Sol, had gone missing.

“…I’m fine.”

“It’s true that our guild leader is bad.”

“It’s really okay.”

“Oh, yes….”

“Really… ha….”

In the end, Cha Eun-hyuk cried.

Dozens of employees' eyes were focused on Bisabal. They were looking at him as if to say, 'Do you want to make a young friend cry at your age?', but Bisabal's face was very thick.

Since it was difficult to speak ill of his chief in front of an outsider, the collector could only criticize him with gestures and eyes.

'Oh, guild leader, please.'

'Why are you doing that to a young man who works hard to take care of his family?'

‘Mr. Cha Eun-hyuk is crying…!’

No one knew exactly what had started the incident. However, there had been a couple of reports that internal conflict had broken out within the Solar Cult team after the advance party had entered, and eventually, other teams had reported that they had witnessed a chaotic scene with only traces of the Solar Cult remaining.

Based on the circumstances of the 'trace', it seems that most of the priests were dead. I don't know if there were any priests who ran away from the place, but it was fortunate that I didn't see the corpses or pieces of the young and small priests who could not have been seen.

Of course, it wasn't a hopeful situation.

“…It’ll be okay.”

“Well, yes, he must have run away well.”

“Because Father Kang Seo-dam said he would take care of it almost exclusively.”

“Reverend Kang Seo-dam is famous, isn’t he? He’s an elite priest of the Solar Church. If someone like him had taken charge of everything, he would have definitely left before anything happened.”

“I think so too.”

Cha Eunhyuk took a deep breath and his eyes were red. He had been absentmindedly staring at me and crying a lot recently. Perhaps because of that, Cha Eunhyuk’s eyes were sunken. He looked considerably more haggard than when we first met.

“…What the Visabal Guild Leader said is also correct.”

He tried to think calmly and objectively. It would be a lie to say that there was nothing unpleasant about what the other person said, but Bisabal’s words, “Fortunately,” were not wrong. He had to admit it.

“It would be easier to find them if they were all gathered in one place. In Cha Ara’s case, she disappeared so cleanly that even the association staff couldn’t find her, so… If she were really a clown, she would at least be able to stay healthy.”

“Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok….”

“Chae Sol-do, the same. I’m just thankful that no bodies were found there. In today’s world, if a body is preserved, it’s considered a preventive measure. I know that. I know that.”

From the moment Cha Ara awakened as an F-class and decided to become a porter, Cha Eun-hyeok had to prepare for his younger sister's death several times. The same was true for Cha Sol, who awakened as a priest.

When you become a hunter, and a priest on the scene, the extent of the corpse being mutilated is ridiculous. There were many scenes so horrible that not even a single hair was left behind. In comparison, it might have been funny to see a corpse being made into a clown. At least all the limbs were attached.

"just…."

Yeah, actually, I was starting to lower my expectations a little bit.

“…I’m sorry, it must be uncomfortable since there are civilians here.”

“You shouldn’t say something like that when you’re benefiting so much from Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok’s safe zone.”

“I'll come to my senses, I'm sorry.”

It would have been better to have no expectations at all.

'If I think about it any deeper, I feel like I'm going to end up blaming someone.'

And the target of that resentment was obvious. It was the S-class Bisabal and the divine Black Cloak. If you have such good eyes, why don’t you come to see my younger siblings? If you are a god, why did you leave my kind younger siblings like that?

But I knew it was absurd. My heart was like that, but my mind was not like that. I shouldn't have done that. Who could I blame?

'So what's the difference between me and the people in the Mermaid Dungeon?'

The experience of 'Sergio Hunter', who was walking beside him now, was secretly famous. It is said that there was a situation where civilians criticized him for not coming to their rescue sooner. And yet, 'Sergio Hunter' was kidnapped by a mermaid in their place.

There was no obligation for the strong to save the weak, their younger siblings. It was appreciated if they were shown kindness and mercy, but they should not demand it first.

Of course, 'Sergio Hunter' was not an ordinary human being. He was a god, a mystery. But that was a separate issue. It was so in many ways. Above all, it was an attitude that would bring great loss before conscience and ethics.

‘These are the people who obviously know what I’m thinking.’

How absurd. How absurd it is for a worthless person to blame them for not doing something that wasn't even their duty. Cha Eun-hyeok was consciously trying to give up hope for his younger siblings.

At the very least, when my siblings die, they will be able to go to a good afterlife without any disadvantages. To do that, he must look good to the divinity who is watching over him. That was a selfish thought.

“Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok.”

“…Ah, yes.”

"thank you."

“…….”

Eunhyuk Cha blinked at the sudden thank you.

"…yes?"

“I appreciate your effort.”

“No, I just… do it. More like putting in effort….”

“Thank you for thinking of others.”

"…uh…."

Did I get caught after all?

'... If you're a god, you can read my mind without any problems, but that's why you're saying this? Are you trying to scold me in a roundabout way? You know all about my arrogant thoughts?'

Cha Eun-hyeok looked at the face of 'Sergio Hunter'. He saw the eyes that were as blue as the ocean, and the mouth that had a gentle smile. There was no condemnation or disgust anywhere. Of course, he could control those facial muscles at any time.

A strange silence flowed. Cha Eun-hyeok instinctively realized that the staff of the collection store were trying to keep their mouths shut. For some reason, Cha Eun-hyeok couldn’t shake the feeling that every word of ‘Sergio Hunter’ and the silence of that moment were like some kind of ritual.

‘… Something feels strange… .’

And then a huge being 'praised' him.

“You are a kind person.”

“…….”

And then, it happened.

“—…Uh, uh! Uh uh!!”

A familiar voice was heard from far away.

“Huh!!”

“…….”

“Hyung, hyung, hyung!! Huh! Hyung!!”

“…….”

“Brother, I’m hungry!!!”

It was Chae Sol, with Iru Da and Kang Seo Dam by her side.

“Give me some food…!!”

And then the sight of her crying loudly.

Chae Sol, who was running towards him from beyond the jewel vault, was exactly as he knew. No, it was his younger brother, who was injured and had bandages wrapped around his feet, but all his limbs were intact. That is, unless this was a hallucination.

But if he really is Cha Eun-hyeok's younger brother.

"…her."

…the black cloak is said to give gifts to ‘good people.’

I guess that's really true.

* * *

“……!”

Oh my god, my God.

'What in the world is this?'

By the way, this was an appearance that even Geo didn't know about.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (352)

352

Episode 352

As Cha Eun-hyeok looked as if he had lost his mind while hugging his younger brother, Yoo Seong-woon approached Geo. He whispered so quietly that no one else could hear.

“What? Did you give me a present?”

"? no?"

“This isn’t a gift?”

“Does it hurt when you treat people like gifts?”

"oh…."

Yoo Seong-un looked at Geo with a strange look. It was a look that said, 'Why is he admitting that he did it anyway?' Geo, who confirmed it, actively denied it.

“It wasn't me who did it.”

“Oh, I see. It wasn’t you, it was Black Cloak who did it. His grace is truly amazing.”

“It wasn't me who did it.”

Geo felt wronged. It was fortunate that the Cha family had a touching reunion, but he couldn't understand why they were treating it as something he had done. Timing? Was it because of this amazing timing?

'Why did the person involved appear when Isul was talking?'

That surprised Geo too. Cha Eun-hyeok, who was struggling with the disappearance of his younger siblings, felt sorry for him, so he spoke to Cha Sol, who appeared at that moment. It was as if good people were blessed.

“If I had to be specific, I think I should be thankful to the god of fate.”

“…Do you raise things like that too?”

"yes?"

“I’ll take note of that for now.”

“What?”

I'm not raising one.

'What exactly was the question?'

Even though he didn’t know what it was, it was clear that he wasn’t raising it. Geo wanted to make that point clear, but Yoo Seong-woon’s gaze had already moved to his guild leader. Geo, who had missed the timing to refute, watched him with a lingering sense of discomfort.

Yoo Seong-un asked Bisabal something similar.

“Did you say that because you knew Chaisol was coming?”

“What does that mean?”

“Didn’t you really scratch Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok? Didn’t you react awkwardly when you found out that you would be meeting your younger sibling soon? I thought it would be somewhat resolved this way anyway….”

“You really are going too far in framing me like that.”

“Aha, did I misunderstand?”

“I was just saying it with pure intentions.”

The visage grinned with a snake-like face.

“I didn’t even know that Chaisol was coming.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un had a face that seemed to have understood something. Even if he didn’t know, Geo thought it was probably related to the personality of the leader of the Bisabal Guild. He also happened to be thinking similar thoughts at the time.

It was a talent to elicit such a reaction from Yoo Seong-un, who had also embraced the characteristic of Geo's possessed portrait. Bisabyeol, who had been enjoying Yoo Seong-un's expression, added a beat later.

“I have been keeping an eye on the prospective priest Chaisol, as he is a talent I am interested in, but strangely, I don’t see him very often in this dungeon.”

“You didn’t see it?”

“Yes, I didn’t mean to look at it on purpose.”

“It’s surprising that such a disturbance could block the guild leader’s eyes.”

“I think Sergio Hunter is probably in a similar situation….”

“Oh, really?”

Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo with a surprised face. Geo, sensing an opportunity to explain himself in that face, nodded repeatedly. Thanks to Giovanni’s characteristically calm demeanor, it was not obvious, but it was a desperate nod.

“Yes, I didn’t know that either. It really was.”

“Uh… I’m sorry I misunderstood…?”

“I am glad that the misunderstanding has been resolved.”

“All those good eyes are blocked. Is there some evil in here?”

“I never thought my eyes were that good….”

Geo, who was touching his eyes, continued speaking.

“Well, it is a very mentally demanding place, so there are many things that are difficult to do.”

The Cha family was a family that Geo also really liked. They were a ray of light in this bleak society. I can't tell you how nice it was to see their rare kind and honest appearances.

He wasn't a person who believed in helping all the good people in the world, but he had a personal connection to the Cha family. So he didn't want to see them depressed over the disappearance of his siblings anymore, so he wanted to help them in some way...

“You can’t even draw pictures here. It’s probably because, unlike my house, there aren’t any materials.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been dazed for a moment, blinked.

“…? Wait a minute, isn’t that a bit dangerous?”

“I thought it was a rare occurrence.”

A portrait possessed by a ghost cannot draw. His identity was on the verge of being shaken. He tried to supply food with a lot of selfish intentions by drawing pictures whenever possible, but it was all ruined.

“In the same vein, the door to our house was also jammed.”

“The door isn’t closed, it’s tangled? What do you mean, tangled?”

“It meant that instead of the picture I originally wanted to draw, an odd frame was dragged in.”

“Well… considering the nature of this dungeon, it’s not that strange.”

Isn't this a dungeon that even mocks goodwill and justice?

“But the pictures you draw are mostly safe.”

“They are good kids.”

“Then wouldn’t it be okay to just keep dragging until the door you originally wanted to open appears? Even if it’s probabilistic, wouldn’t it appear eventually?”

“Well, I thought about that too….”

“I guess there is a reason why it won’t work.”

“For some reason, all my children were angry.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was speechless for a moment.

“…What do you mean, you’re angry?”

“I don’t know if he was angry or excited, but he didn’t seem to listen to me.”

“Is the Earth in danger right now?”

“In preparation for that point, all the doors to the painting have been closed for the time being.”

“Oh, that’s good. Thank you.”

“Anyway, I decided to stop for now because I thought bringing my children into this situation might be counterproductive.”

“Thank you for that too.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded and asked after a moment of silence.

“…Do you have any idea why that happened?”

“I think it might be Mr. George’s influence.”

“Did you… do something?”

“It’s not impossible, but it feels like we’re seeing antibodies trying to kill the virus.”

“Does that mean your children judged 'George' to be a foreign substance?”

“Yes, that’s why I think it’ll be hard to persuade them. Since this is a move to protect me, it’ll be harder to persuade them. I guess….”

An error occurred

An error occurred

An error occurred

Error occurred… .

“…I had a strong feeling that it was out of my hands.”

They were children who usually listened so well. They were called children, but he also knew that they were beings who absolutely obeyed Geo's words. Nevertheless, this situation had come.

This meant that there was another influence. And Geo thought that the person who had that 'other influence' was probably the System. That is, Mr. Sergio.

'I've felt this way for a while now, but Sergio, you don't have any emotions?'

Basically, they had similar tendencies and views, but sometimes Geo felt that the system was only concerned with right and wrong. Perhaps, to the system, 'Geo' was someone who deserved to be punished.

'But I've already fallen for her. Even though she's a 21-year-old loser who I hate, I figured I'd give her a good beating and sucking...'

So Geo did not agree with the system's opinion. Because of that, Geo himself was fine, but his children were particularly angry. It was as if the 'rejection Geo should feel' was also transferred to them.

“Anyway, I think it’ll take some time to calm down.”

“Roughly how much…?”

“Oh, I misspoke. I think I’ll be in this state until I leave this dungeon. So it’ll be a bit difficult to get help from the drawings I made before.”

“Well, I wasn’t expecting that kind of trick, but I’m a little worried. I hope it doesn’t hurt you too much or anything.”

“I’m not that incompetent, so I don’t think I’ll get hurt badly enough to warrant your concern.”

Divine power was a characteristic of 'Giovanni', and physical ability could be resolved with the help of 'Argio'. Even if Sergio was in a situation where he could not draw, it did not seem like there would be any particular problem.

“But I think our honey….”

“Oh my.”

Honey, who was curled up in Geo's hands, was squirming. She looked so hot that it looked like water was bubbling, and Geo said while covering Honey with his other hand.

“I’ve become very sensitive.”

“Well, Honey was your child too.”

To be exact, he was included in the 'children drawn by Geo'. In the case of his family members, such as his teddy bear father and Dana, who he did not draw, there was no particular effect, but well, it was difficult to say that he was very safe.

Geo was momentarily speechless at the strange sensation inside his hand.

“…….”

"what's the matter?"

“It might be better not to know.”

“Did I ask you something?”

“Oh, you are wise.”

For some reason, he felt that the shape of Honey, trapped in his two hands, was uneven. Geo's eldest son only wanted to show him his cute appearance, but as his vision was obstructed, its shape was changing.

'I knew I wanted to be cute, but I didn't know it would be such an extreme obsession.'

I thought it would be better to keep Honey in sight.

“Honey, do you want to be on my shoulder?”

“Kururuk….”

“Why is our son so upset?”

“Kung-kung.”

“It’s cute.”

In the meantime, the small talk between father and son continued.

As time passed and Cha Eun-hyeok showed no signs of letting go of his younger brother, Kang Seo-dam approached Bisabal and Geo. He too looked quite tattered, as if he had been busy.

“Can you excuse me for a moment?”

“Oh, of course. It’s been a while.”

“I am embarrassed to see you like this, but as you can see, I need your help.”

Despite his exhausted appearance, Kang Seo-dam still had a strong sense of responsibility. He continued speaking after seeing Chae Sol, who was being held by Cha Eun-hyeok and was just observing him, and Iru Da, who was struggling next to him.

“…It’s embarrassing to say, but the Sun Cult team among the advance party was almost completely wiped out. There were some who escaped during the incident, but they were all scattered and could not be found again.”

“Can you tell me exactly what happened?”

“Internal conflict was the most fundamental cause. Our church has always had severe generational conflicts. That and other small conflicts escalated into something bigger, which eventually led to this incident.”

“I expected that, but I never thought a religious sect as big as the Sun Church would be completely destroyed.”

“Fortunately, there are some parts that can be excused.”

Kang Seo-dam soon showed me an earring.

“There was a clown attack.”

It was an invisible attack.

* * *

Putting aside the detailed information sharing for a moment, the collector decided to focus on taking care of the other hunters he encountered for the first time upon entering the dungeon, as their condition was not very good.

“If you wish, our collector can take care of storing the earrings.”

“I don’t distrust your ability to manage your items, but I’m not sure if I’m still in a distorted state or not. Could you give me some time?”

“Then I think that would be a good idea. Get some rest first.”

Bisabal didn't necessarily urge Kang Seodam.

“Just by not leaving this place, you must have at least some confidence.”

“…Yes, it’s a team with excellent priests and gardeners. The influence of distortion would have been minimal. However, I can’t rule out the possibility that what I see and hear is all a hallucination.”

Kang Seo-dam nodded. In the first place, since they were a team with 'Sergio Hunter', I didn't think their words and actions would be distorted. The problem would be if the existence of the collection team itself was distorted, but that was something that needed to be looked into further over time.

Geo asked with a worried expression at Kang Seo-dam's cautiousness.

“Then you’re not even going to eat…?”

"…that…."

Kang Seo-dam hesitated for a moment, then corrected his posture and answered politely.

“…I am in charge of two prospective priests. I think it would be better to stay away from all possible variables in case something happens. If something happens to me, I won’t be able to guarantee the safety of the prospective priests.”

The leader will be the safest. It is not uncommon for abuse to occur, but it was an unspoken rule that had to be followed if one was responsible for a young hunter. It was the same principle as when an airplane crashes, the adults take action first and then the children.

“Of course, if you prepare the meal, I will check it first.”

“Because the food could be dangerous?”

“If you try a little bit and it tastes good, you should feed it to the prospective priests.”

“Hmm, I guess I should prepare some food that you can eat comfortably.”

“…Please don’t give me too much strength….”

“I will keep that in mind.”

So, for a moment, a break came.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (353)

353

Episode 353

Kang Seo-dam wasn't a rational person from the beginning.

“Hey, Kang Seo-dam.”

Of course. Humans are creatures that grow as they age. There are bound to be some who waste their time, but that is basically how it is. Kang Seo-dam was one of those ordinary people who grew up like that.

Although it was something that was completely natural, there were times when I felt it was unfair. I didn't even know who I should complain to about the unfairness, but I still felt a little bit wronged. It just passed by.

“Why are you thinking so much?”

“…….”

“This kid is ignoring me again.”

However, all the scars in the world are forgotten one day. Even if scars remain, it is impossible to live looking at them every day. There were several scars that I forgot naturally as I lived.

Don't we all live like that? The past is just the past. If time passes and we can forget it, it's better to forget it. Humans are creatures who have to live looking toward the future as they grow.

“It’s very common for you to chew on my words.”

“…….”

“What is it? An order to go on a business trip? Another order from the higher-ups?”

“…….”

“I told you to just let it all out?”

But as always, it was too clear to be a passing voice, so Kang Seo-dam rubbed his stuffy ears. He wanted to tear out his ears and rip his eardrums, but he knew that it was not a sound that he would not hear even if he did.

“That’s just what old people who don’t know how to do do. It’s not like it’s been a day or two since that happened, right? Or did you start calling me a foreigner again? I’m telling you, you’re really a bunch of senile bastards.”

“…….”

“Who doesn’t know you’re Korean, kid? I don’t know what you heard when you were called in this time, but don’t act so stuffy and say something. Then this big brother will buy you a drink.”

This is a sound heard in the brain. No, it's just an auditory hallucination that you think you hear. So let's forget it. But can you forget a voice that you're hearing in real time? I don't know. I don't know.

“You, what are you? You know? Right? The future of the Solar Church is ours to take over.”

“…What do you mean by ‘receive’?”

“You really have to tell me nonsense before I answer.”

“That crazy guy….”

“It’s so comforting to have a crazy dog like me.”

He asks if life isn't happier when you have a friend who will yell at you for you.

Instead of answering, Kang Seo-dam rubbed his face with his hand. His palm touched the facial bone structure that was far from the 'native Korean' that the elders sometimes referred to. So, he suddenly remembered what kind of face the owner of this voice had.

Blonde hair dyed with dye and dark brown eyes. An idiot who would turn a deaf ear to the priests who told him to let out some of the hair dye because he looked like a gangster.

“…What are you talking about, native chicken?”

“Why are you so grumpy? What did I do wrong?”

“Be quiet.”

So surprisingly it becomes quiet.

“…….”

This damned auditory hallucination would even quiet down when I told it to.

'Fuck.'

It's a shit situation.

'It would have been better if it had been just a normal auditory hallucination.'

This auditory hallucination is interactive. Now, it borrows the voice that it has almost forgotten and responds and reacts according to its personality. It even closes its mouth as if it is checking the situation because the condition looks serious, which is very similar to that guy.

I think about it again. I want to tear out my ears. I want to rupture my eardrums. I know it's a sound coming from my brain, but I want to relieve this inexplicable urge.

'But then it would be a nuisance.'

Kang Seo Dam wasn't alone now. He had two other prospective priests to take responsibility for. If it weren't for those idiots from the Sun Church who were wasting their time and going crazy, this wouldn't have happened. Ah, I wish I had just laid down on the floor and kicked my butt in front of those handsome faces.

The very idea of sending a 'prospective priest' to a dungeon like this was wrong.

“…Gangseo Dam.”

“…….”

“It's not your fault.”

I wish you would just shut up.

'If you're going to attack, act like an attack.'

Those words rose to the tip of my tongue.

I wish it had been a word of resentment. I wish it had been a curse that I died because of you, that you were a hypocrite. Then I would have been sure that these were whispers from the enemy testing me.

But this voice was really an exact imitation of his old partner.

'No, but was it really an imitation? What if it really was that guy's soul?'

Even so, it doesn't change the fact that this is an attack in this dungeon. So it would have been right to refuse and pretend not to know. That's what I should have done, but strangely enough, I ended up listening.

Yes, that was the voice. Yes, that was the way he spoke. Yes, that was the person. Memories that I had forgotten one by one as I was busy living came back to me. It wasn't a very pleasant experience.

“Good-looking guys like us don’t have any self-reproach.”

“…….”

Correct, it was a little bit cheerful.

“Father Kang Seo-dam?”

“…Sergio Hunter.”

“Are you tired?”

“…….”

“That voice.”

A compassionate voice speaks with a smile.

“I didn’t put it away because I thought you wanted to keep listening.”

I couldn't tell if it was mercy or indifference.

“…Usually, if you think you’re hallucinating, don’t you treat it?”

“Judging from your expression, it seems like you’ve been having a long time.”

“Still.”

“If you ask me what is right and what is wrong, I can only tell you that I am not the judge.”

“I didn’t ask that difficult of a question.”

Kang Seo-dam rubbed his ears.

“It becomes quiet when you talk to me.”

“Hmm, I haven’t really touched it.”

“Didn’t you defeat evil spirits just by existing?”

“You’ve gotten better at telling jokes than before.”

I heard a faint laugh.

'Satisfaction? Amazed?'

Kang Seo-dam lowered the hand that was rubbing her ear at the laughter filled with the affection of an adult. Feeling slightly awkward, her eyes narrowed as she looked at the other person.

“…I guess you’re having fun.”

“I am happy that you treat me more comfortably than usual.”

“To be honest, I’m just a little out of my mind, and I’m sure you’re not happy about it.”

“Isn’t it my own pleasure that I determine for myself?”

“…Are you talking to me?”

It may be a convenient thought, but it seemed as if God was telling me that it was okay to keep hearing this voice, that it was okay to indulge in a brief nostalgia for the past.

“If this lowly person gets into an accident, wouldn’t it be a big deal?”

“I don’t think you’d be the type of person to fall to that extent.”

“You seem to have high expectations, but I fall more often than you think.”

“I didn’t know you were like that because I always saw you standing up. I guess that shows how skilled you are.”

“I see. I’m glad that I’ve become a pretty decent adult.”

I saw the prospective priest Chaisol sleeping in my brother's arms. His partner, prospective priest Iruda, was lying right next to him. They looked very happy to have this long-awaited rest.

“…….”

Did he find any comfort in the faces of the children who had fallen asleep like that? Normally, he would not have done this, but suddenly, even his remaining sanity melted away. In the end, Kang Seo-dam looked at God again.

The merciful and loving sun. A gigantic fire so big that it embraces even the sea.

“…Can you listen to my story for a moment?”

“I like that kind of thing.”

“I thought you would do that.”

It was really, really a choice I would not have made in normal times. Nowhere has God been treated in this way. I had no idea what kind of side effects such close contact with the divine might bring.

But what does that all matter? Even if you suffer such side effects, what does it matter? Kang Seo-dam looked at Sergio Hunter sitting across from him. He had a nice face and smile.

“Can I hear the priest’s story?”

"…sure."

It was a cliche.

“I used to have a partner. The Solar Church was the first one, and that’s how… they help the prospective priests adapt.”

His story was really cliché.

A pair with very different personalities but a great combination of abilities. They fought many times but eventually became friends and trusted and relied on each other, but one of them ended up making a wrong choice due to an unexpected accident and the irrationality of society.

Kang Seo Dam killed his partner who was contaminated by the evil spirit while trying to summon it. He was sentenced to death. So he proved his innocence to the Sun Church and the world. However, he could not save his friend's soul...

“…….”

“…I guess that was a bit of a predictable story.”

“I don’t know much about that, but I listened carefully.”

“I wonder what you thought of it.”

“I’d like to meet you sometime.”

“…the answer exceeded all my expectations.”

Well, since he is divine, it might really be possible. The black cloak is said to depict the afterlife. I also heard that his messenger, shining like a garnet, guides good, young souls directly.

“But I’m not sure if my friend is nice enough for you to like.”

“If Father Kang Seo-dam is a person who likes this much, then isn’t he a good person?”

“Even though he was the one who threw away the money while trying to summon the evil spirit.”

“Humans always show various appearances.”

“It makes more sense when Sergio Hunter tells it.”

“I’m just curious. You seem like an interesting person.”

“…He was a crazy guy.”

He was completely different from Kang Seo-dam, who felt like the sky would fall if he didn't follow all the principles of the world. He was such a mess that you'd wonder if he was a priest. He was a punk who acted like he didn't even have basic manners or common sense.

"…still…."

Nonetheless, to be honest.

“…Yes, it was fun.”

“I knew it.”

“Because he’s such a funny guy.”

“Are you still talking to me?”

“You’re grumbling. I guess you think I’m making fun of you.”

“Then raise him well.”

“Can you also increase auditory hallucinations?”

“That’s up to your discretion.”

As expected of a divine being, the idea was amazing. Of all things, to increase auditory hallucinations, and of course, to increase the 'attack' of the dungeon. However, Sergio Hunter gave a rather refreshing answer.

“If you drink just enough to not get drunk, who would stop you?”

“Oh, you’re treating this as alcohol. But alcohol isn’t supposed to be very good for your health.”

“What if you know how to control yourself? After all, it’s a luxury item. Above all, I can’t imagine Father Kang Seo-dam getting drunk.”

“That applies to me too.”

“Why?”

“I don’t really enjoy drinking, so I’ve never been there.”

“That’s a good habit.”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been pressing his ear for a moment, asked Sergio.

“…I know that you spare two catechumens.”

“No matter what happens, I will take care of the two children.”

“I feel relieved when you say it like that.”

Seeing him feel so relieved that he was free from responsibility, it seemed that he was not yet an adult. At least, it didn't seem like he had anything to console himself with by thinking that he was better than his partner.

“If I become a clown, will I die?”

“Is that what you want?”

“In that case, I thought I’d go look for that guy….”

“Aha, so you wish to become a wandering ghost in the nine heavens.”

“It just occurred to me that it might not be so bad.”

“Then come find me and be my friend.”

Sergio Hunter smiled happily.

“I am also a possessed portrait.”

“…Okay.”

Kang Seo-dam also smiled a little as if he had no choice.

“My ghost friend….”

“Are you okay?”

“Yeah, that wouldn’t be bad either.”

I got enough rest.

“I will keep that in mind.”

So now, I have to live my life again.

* * *

“I will report and proceed in that regard.”

“Wait a minute, Father Kang Seo-dam.”

Yoo Seong-un, with a calm face, raised his hand and said.

“I have a question.”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“Where on earth did ‘that kind of meaning’ come from?”

“Does that matter?”

“Oh, it’s not important.”

Certainly, what was important now was conquering the dungeon.

“Please continue.”

“Yes, then….”

Ahem, Kang Seo-dam cleared his throat and continued speaking with his characteristically blunt expression.

“The incident occurred approximately five weeks ago, in my time and that of the two novice priests.”

“Can I ask you a question?”

“Yes, Teacher Cha Eun-hyeok. Do whatever you want.”

“Are you saying that my child has been a vagrant for about five weeks now?”

“It was very accurate.”

“Can’t we get the kids out of the dungeon first and then continue the story?”

“If that’s the case, I did it first.”

Kang Seo-dam continued her story, leaving behind Cha Eun-hyeok, who was clutching his head.

“The Sun Church’s advance team has had many conflicts in the past. If they had been able to communicate, they would have shared information to some extent, but in short, it was just a pile of gunpowder that had not been lit."

"And that spark…?"

"Yes, this was it."

Kang Seodam held up a pair of gorgeous earrings. They were a little worn and broken, but they were large and full of jewels. When they were first made, they were probably ornaments that scattered light like lights.

But now, despite all the jewels attached to it, it somehow looked unsightly. At least, it was clear that it had not been cared for with affection by its owner.

"The problem arose immediately after this was discovered by the prospective priest Chaisol."

Cha Eun-hyeok, whose hair was disheveled, looked at his younger brother without saying a word, and Chae Sol avoided his gaze without saying a word. Kang Seo-dam continued her report, not paying attention to the subtle confrontation between the brothers.

"The entire Taeyanggyo team complained of auditory hallucinations, and as time went on, their other senses were also affected."

"The whole team?"

"Yes, I guess that was the trigger."

"Similar reports came from other teams a few times. They found the necklace, but the clown's appearance was secondary, and the words they were spitting out were seriously distorted…."

"As you said, it seems that if you find the strategy point of this dungeon, you will receive a debuff."

"Is this a debuff related to the body part where the accessory is equipped?"

"As of now, that seems highly likely."

What happened next was obvious. The already toxic Solar Cult team began to experience internal divisions, and the clowns entered the fray.

"If it was a clown… did it attack you? Was it a physical attack?"

"It's not that there weren't any, but I think it was mainly a mental attack."

"So what was the method?"

"They naturally sneaked in between us and spread all sorts of rumors. The priests, whose mental powers were low, were easily taken in by the clowns and started attacking each other."

Until everyone dies.

"I was lucky that I wasn't possessed by a clown, so I took the two acolytes and left the place. Leaving the team may not be a good thing, but…."

"If I had stayed still, I would have gotten caught up in the chaos, so it would have been a wise decision to come out in time."

"I thought so too. It wasn't a situation where I could stop them even if I tried. I had a gut feeling that the Sun Cult's advance team's attack would be a complete failure, so I went out with the reserve priests to find another team."

"With earrings?"

“I don’t think the trigger that has already been activated will have any additional effects if you just keep it. It seems like it only explodes once when it’s first discovered. I took it because it might help with the strategy, and I’ll have to show it to other teams.”

“Was that our collection?”

“That’s right, and fortunately you weren’t hallucinating.”

This time, Bisabal, who had been quietly listening to the story, asked.

“How do clowns charm people? Is it similar to the feeling on Earth?”

“Yes, it made me feel like I didn’t feel any discomfort. I also realized that the clown’s appearance was strange only after I saw some blood.”

“Even so, I don’t think the priests of the Sun Church are that incompetent. The internal conflicts before must have been quite serious. How serious must it have been for it to get to that point….”

“Isn’t this dungeon made with the concept of a person’s weaknesses as the basis for a small dungeon? It definitely had a big impact. It was difficult to endure with just divine power, not the power of a gardener. And….”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been hesitating, cleared his throat and continued speaking.

“…Because corruption within the Solar Church has been revealed in such a way several times, it has become a situation where it is impossible to trust each other even if we try to do so.”

“Oh, my.”

“I guess the collector has never created a dungeon before?”

“Don’t we have some great talents?”

Bisabal pointed at Sergio Hunter and Yoo Seong-un with a proud face. Geo, who was immediately pointed out, handed Yoo Seong-un a cup of warm flower tea and opened his eyes wide, and Yoo Seong-un looked at Bisabal while fixing the blanket.

Yoo Seong-un said with a trembling face.

“Why, what?”

“Look at that angry face.”

“I’m dying of cold.”

“As you can see, Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s sacrifice was great.”

Kang Seo-dam nodded in agreement.

“It is true that the dungeon does not change because there is a gardener. Even though it is called a dungeon, the essence of this place is a garden, so the power of the gardener who managed the transformation and maintenance of the garden must have been of great help.”

“It’s so cold I could die.”

“To be honest, I’m jealous that you have a gardener on your team.”

“It’s a very disadvantageous fight without a gardener.”

Giovanni sympathized with him with a pitiful heart. This wicked dungeon did not allow people to rest comfortably. It was just like the garden of George, who was sociable but had no social skills.

“Will other teams also suffer a lot of damage?”

“Hmm, well….”

The squirrel who had been rubbing his chin blinked and answered.

“I don’t think it will be too much.”

Everyone has flaws.

Even if they seem like the perfect person.

* * *

"oh."

Another transformed garden.

Dan Hae-ra muttered while caressing my cheek.

“It’s a pretty familiar place.”

This time, it looked like a school from a certain day.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (354)

354

Episode 354

How does this garden specifically address the vulnerabilities of individuals?

'At least it wasn't based on memory.'

Danhae looked around in silence.

“…….”

The school seen through a gap in the trees.

Although it was twisted and deformed, it was clear what this garden was trying to show her. This was Danhae-ra's alma mater. It was still imitating its former appearance, before it burned down and was not a closed school.

'What on earth is the standard?'

I was organizing the characteristics of this garden called Danhae while taking individual actions. Since it was a type of dungeon that had never been seen before, the way it progressed was quite unique.

This place created another dungeon inside the dungeon and tormented the participants. The small dungeon was formed with someone's 'happiness' as its theme and was also presented in a twisted way.

'This is the primary attack on this garden.'

It was a characteristic that would have made the attack much easier if the number of advance parties had been smaller.

'Next up is the appearance of a clown.'

All cases discovered so far are triggers in the form of jewelry.

The moment this is discovered, a curse will be inflicted on the team depending on where the trinket is worn. At the same time, clowns will infiltrate and drain people's souls just like on Earth.

'Unlike on Earth, where happiness was simply achieved in an evil form, it is a bit more direct. The fact that we cannot perceive the strangeness even though it is visible is definitely a problem… .'

If it's an anklet, it distorts your steps, if it's a necklace, it distorts the words you speak, and if it's an earring, it distorts the sounds you hear. If you add the tricks of clowns to it, you wouldn't be able to endure it unless you have a strong heart.

Up to this point, the garden's attack method was quite clear.

“…Hmm….”

However, what I still wonder is, what criteria does this small dungeon use to determine 'individuals'?

'The person most suited to cause trouble?'

It could have been completely random. That was also quite possible. After all, there is no such thing as a perfect person in this world, and it is a world where everyone has one or two embarrassing happinesses that they can't show off to others.

Dan Hae-ra smiled mechanically.

“A war of exposure is definitely a war of exposure.”

I thought it was a good idea to act individually. If the 'vulnerability' of someone in her position is exposed, the colleagues who act together will also easily be ruined and collapse. It shouldn't be like that yet.

I slowly looked around Danhae and saw her own dungeon. It felt like I was the owner of a dungeon, which was amazing. She hadn't made any 'promises' in a while, so I was able to experience quite a variety of emotions.

“It’s a little bit fun.”

“Oh, really?”

“At least I don’t feel bored.”

“If it’s not boring, is it fun?”

Jeong Hae-woon sat on the steps in front of the school gate and smiled.

“That sounds plausible.”

“You must be bored, picking a fight the first time you saw me in a long time.”

“I was so upset that I didn’t even have time to be bored.”

“What could have been so upsetting, my friend?”

“I was wondering when you would create a human being.”

Jeong Hae-woon got up and shook his butt.

“Want to take a look?”

"what?"

“This school.”

“Well, I guess we can’t look anywhere else until we conquer this.”

“Just enjoy it, this is a garden after all. It’s not like a normal dungeon where the deeper you go, the more a boss appears.”

“That’s not very welcome news.”

I had heard reports about the garden before. It was a project that Jeong Hae-un was in charge of alone. It seemed like an image close to endless nature, and this dungeon was probably the same.

“I don’t even have a clue how to conquer this garden.”

“I guess there’s no other way than to hit the garden itself.”

“Was nature something that could be conquered?”

“I used to do that a lot. At least when there’s a forest fire, the mountain becomes barren.”

“But trees and grass continue to grow.”

“We can just throw it away and build apartments on top of it. We can turn the ocean into a garbage dump, and we can build an ozone layer in the sky.”

“That makes sense.”

Danhae-ra drew a smile on her face.

“If I really conquer, why are you giving me all this advice?”

In the end, the story was that in order to destroy this dungeon and the garden, you had to influence the source itself. Looking at the accessories that kept appearing, you could get a rough idea of how that could be done.

“Weren’t you allies with Mr. George?”

“Uh… it’s a bit of a complicated relationship.”

“So, it’s okay to die someday?”

“Who died?”

“You or Mr. George. Either way, you seem to have no regrets.”

“Well, I don’t know what the future holds.”

Jeong Hae-woon soon smiled broadly. It was the smile he always gave to his friends.

“I just want to achieve my goals while the garden runs wild.”

“…That face suits you well right now.”

“I think there is no need to mix with people anymore.”

Jeong Hae-woon's face now was that of a man in his 20s or 30s. At some point, he stopped aging. Dan Hae-ra thought that his face, which he was seeing for the first time in a long time, seemed a little unfamiliar.

But it suited me very well at this school.

“You look just like a student, Haeun.”

“Speak sense.”

Jeong Hae-woon giggled and entered the school. Dan Hae-ra followed him. There was a need to find out what this clever friend was thinking when he came to see her.

“…….”

It was quite quiet inside the school.

“…It seemed like it was a bit more noisy before.”

“That’s right.”

“Are you sure it’s not composed based on memory?”

“That could be the case.”

Jeong Hae-un didn't seem to have any intention of guiding anyone, and just wandered around. Perhaps because this place was created by Danhae-ra, it seemed like a place that would pique Jeong Hae-un's interest.

After wandering around for a while, Dan Hae-ra asked.

“What do you want?”

“Bumping your head in and out.”

“Hmm, how romantic.”

“Don’t you know what romance is?”

“You might know.”

“The teacher was a good person.”

“I know.”

“I don’t know….”

Jeong Hae-woon stopped in front of a classroom.

“…….”

“Was it an art room?”

“That’s right.”

“What is that?”

Inside the classroom, which was like a day in the afternoon when the sunlight was dimly coming in, warm shadows were falling. Dan Hae-ra passed Jeong Hae-un, who was just standing still, and went into the classroom. It was because something like a pole was visible beyond the transparent glass window.

It was a straw doll.

“…….”

It was quite tall and well built, but it had no face or clothes. It was just a very messy doll, with a soft leather body like a stuffed animal, stuffed with straw.

Dan Hae-ra, who had been watching it quietly, tilted her head and muttered.

“Cursed doll?”

“Are you crazy?”

“I have a rough idea of who you are portraying. It must be Professor Sergio, right?”

“You’re really amazing, you couldn’t make that pretty face any better than this.”

“What can I do if I don’t remember?”

Danhae stroked the thousand faces that had nothing drawn on them.

“Oh.”

The doll looked at Danhae.

“It’s moving?”

“…….”

“I can’t say… anything, though.”

Didn't you have a mouth?

“If I cut it, won’t it hit you with its mouth?”

“Please don’t, really.”

“It’s a doll anyway.”

“Everything I see makes me feel strange.”

“I just wondered what you would say if you had a mouth.”

“That’s a bit surprising.”

Jeong Hae-woon asked while looking at Dan Hae-ra.

“Has it been a while?”

“If you’re asking about the period of time that wasn’t ‘promised’, then maybe.”

Danhae continued to touch the doll's face without even looking at Jeong Hae-un. What was it that made his hands reach for this shabby doll that didn't even have clothes on? It seemed strange, fun, and strange at the same time.

She said, touching the area where her mouth would probably be.

“Can’t you speak?”

The doll moved to him.

Dan Hae-ra blinked, as it seemed like it had no intention of attacking.

The doll passed her and walked through the art room. Then it took out a pair of scissors from the area where the common art supplies were gathered.

"…ah."

He cut off his own face like that.

“You have a mouth.”

“Do it.”

“Now you can talk.”

Danhae looked back at Jeong Hae-un without realizing it. For some reason, his face was pale and astonished. He was surprised, but more than that, he looked terribly disgusted.

Suddenly, a new question occurred to Dan Hae-ra and she asked.

“Why did you come here?”

“I was just trying to see what you were going to do.”

“Then what’s different?”

“I don’t know….”

“Are you going to stay here forever?”

“I’m getting a little tired of it.”

“I understand.”

Jeong Hae-woon was just a passing bystander. He could have done something or just watched and left. But at least he didn't think he would return to his position as the 'symbol of eternity'. Given his personality, he wouldn't do that easily.

'I'll have to catch Jeong Hae-un again someday, but not now.'

Even if his promise was broken, it was okay. He believed that there would definitely be a way to restore things to their original state. Thinking so, Dan Hae-ra turned her gaze. Towards this doll that she had some kind of attachment to.

She said, staring into the mouth of the doll, which was made in a ignorant way.

“What did you do this for, sir?”

“Because you wanted to talk to me.”

“Will you do whatever the student wants?”

“If I can do it, there is no reason why I shouldn’t.”

“You are dedicated.”

Why would someone like this want to destroy the system so badly?

'Maybe there is a reason why you can't and shouldn't do it.'

Or maybe he was transformed into something inhuman and his thoughts changed.

'There are quite a few cases like that.'

In the first place, it is rare for a human being to become a mystery, but it is common for their way of thinking to change when they become so corrupted. So is that the case with 'Sergio the Master'? Did he abandon this devoted way of thinking for the sake of his own preservation?

I slowly ran my finger along the corner of the mouth of the doll named Danhae.

“…….”

… Well, no.

'I don't think that would have been the case.'

There was no reason.

There was no reason for me to think that way.

* * *

While moving diligently, Geo suddenly narrowed his eyes.

“Huh.”

“Huh? Why are you suddenly like that?”

“I feel like I’ve been kicked in the butt by someone.”

“Can you even know that?”

“No, it just feels that way.”

Geo made a rare, subtle expression.

"…what?"

What are these good and bad feelings?

* * *

At some point, Jeong Hae-un disappeared.

“He lives up to his name as a gardener.”

Could it be that he was the gardener who showed the best ability in the garden? For a moment, Dan Hae-ra felt a strange sense of regret at the empty space left by Jeong Hae-un who had disappeared without a sound, and then she looked at the long doll next to her.

“I believe that you will be with me, teacher.”

“It can’t last forever.”

“Maybe it could last forever.”

She stroked my cheek and said.

“…I guess we were close?”

Perhaps it was because of the emotions I had accumulated without spending them. My attachment to this crude doll was clear.

'Just because a promise erases memories doesn't mean the affection engraved in one's soul is erased. I guess it must have been influenced by that, but this is also quite interesting.'

Perhaps this could not have happened if it wasn't an imitation of 'Sergio the Sergio'. Strictly speaking, it was close to a monster, so it was impossible to feel attached to it. But now, it was. My heart and hands went to it.

He was holding the wrist of this worthless doll named Danhae.

“I hope you don’t run away.”

“I am always by your side.”

“Are you talking about the system? You have many secrets.”

“It wouldn’t have been a secret I made up.”

“Then maybe I made it.”

To be honest, I was quite greedy for this doll called Danhae. Danhae didn't realize that her desire was like a child's greed. It had been a long time since she had abandoned her memories and emotions.

If she hadn't been greedy and hoarded memories and emotions for a while, she wouldn't have felt this desire. She just smiled and asked, as if she was being stubborn, but with a sophisticated smile.

“How can I get you to come with me?”

If this dungeon collapses, this doll will eventually disappear as well.

“I don’t want to throw it away.”

“You can eat me.”

“…….”

That moment.

“…Eat it?”

I felt a very unfamiliar feeling called Danhae.

“You can eat me.”

"…what…."

“You can eat me.”

“…….”

"me."

But I couldn't define that feeling.

What kind of feeling was this?

“…….”

“Eat.”

I don't remember very well.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (355)

355

Episode 355

The collector, who had paused for a moment after a long time of communication, heard unexpected news.

“I heard that the president of the association has started taking individual action.”

“This is why all symbols of eternity are unreliable.”

Geo stroked his chin expressionlessly with the priest's face. Yoo Seong-un, who was next to him, asked quietly at his reaction, which was difficult to confirm.

“Are you feeling unwell?”

“Not really.”

“At least you’re not smiling, now.”

“I don’t always smile. Um, no, actually….”

"actually?"

“I find it unpleasant.”

“Oh my.”

Geo smiled like a priest again at Yoo Seong-un's joke.

“Haha, it’s nothing serious. It’s just my personal opinion.”

“If there is a problem related to the symbol of eternity, it is difficult to see it as not serious….”

“I’m just worried.”

“But you have experiences worthy of your name, so don’t worry too much.”

“It feels a little different from that.”

If the information from the communications organized so far is true, Jeong Hae-un has either gone missing or betrayed her. The guild leader of Justitia is outside the dungeon, and Dan Hae-ra is moving around individually, so it would be impossible to know the news unless she contacted him first.

“Where should I look….”

As he said that, Geo rolled his eyes for a moment and looked up. In fact, Yoo Seong-un thought that it was more like he was pretending to calculate something rather than looking. It became ominous to think about what kind of prophecy would come out of that mouth.

Soon Geo opened his mouth. The first thing that came out was a question.

“Hasn’t it been quite some time since we started our campaign?”

“Uh, well. It’s hard to give a clear answer because time is so distorted… but it must have been quite a while, right?”

“What if we include the time on Earth when we were preparing for the invasion?”

“Oh, then that would really be quite a lot of time. Of course, the amount of time felt would vary greatly from person to person, but even taking that into account? Probably?”

“I think the president has been refraining from making ‘promises’ all this time.”

“…Is that so?”

A meteor shower swept across my neck.

“I guess so.”

After thinking about it carefully, I realized that what my portrait said was right.

This is the president of the association who had expressed his intention to directly participate in such an important strategy. Since her ability is fueled by memory or emotion, it is highly likely that she has stockpiled it for use in serious situations.

Unlike things like magic power or stamina, such fuel is not easily recovered.

“But why is that?”

“Am I the only one who thinks this is dangerous?”

“That’s… Oh, I guess you could think of it that way.”

“Right?”

The criteria for creating sub-dungeons for this dungeon are still unknown. Some are created based on subjective memories, while others are formed based on actual objective pasts.

However, the larger the group, the lower the probability of being selected as a dungeon target. Up until now, sub-dungeons have only appeared one at a time in front of each team.

In other words, this means that if you take individual action, you will almost inevitably encounter a sub-dungeon with your own concept. And Danhae would be in a rare state of rich memories and emotions.

“Geo, are you worried that the president will be swayed by emotions?”

“Isn’t their immunity lower than that of the average person?”

“There have been several instances in the past where the president has hoarded memories and emotions in this manner. There have never been any problems during that time.”

“I want to think that way and feel at ease, but doesn’t this dungeon strike at my personal vulnerabilities? I know that the Chairman has faced evil spirits in that way many times….”

“Yes, even evil spirits are no slouch when it comes to poking at human weaknesses. However, so far, they have overcome all the hardships and challenges without any major problems. Shouldn’t we ease our worries a little?”

"well."

The portrait artist, who had been pretending to think a little longer, soon added:

“Wouldn’t that be a problem if we become much more vulnerable than before?”

“…A lot more vulnerable than before?”

“For example, one huge ‘promise’ might be broken.”

“Oh.”

“The signs were already there.”

“You mean the system is shutting down? But that doesn’t mean all of the Hunters’ systems have shut down. Maybe the ‘Promise’ is still in operation on the Earth outside the dungeon?”

“I’m just worried.”

In fact, Geo doesn't know much either. What would he know in this world where he's too busy taking care of himself? However, he was certain that the pasts of the four disciples who were entangled with 'Sergio' were anything but ordinary.

'I don't know for sure, but I think there must have been a big accident.'

Looking at the scale of the situation, I had a bad feeling.

'If I think back to the time when our Eunhye was so scared, she must have done something really serious back then. Even though she knew my personality, she was so worried that I would get in trouble and abandon her…'

It wasn't like he had any memories of that day. He didn't even show any signs of remembering it. It was okay to know it, and it didn't matter if he forgot about it, but what was important were his disciples.

'At least if you're in your right mind, you'll know that you did something wrong and tremble in fear. It might be because Eunhye's personality is soft, but would that make a big difference to Hae-ra?'

Well, I guess not.

“…I don’t feel well.”

“Okay, can I call it a prophecy?”

“I can’t make predictions, Mr. Yoo Seong-un. Please don’t spread rumors.”

“I’ll just keep that in mind for now.”

“Do you really know that?”

Even as he said that, Geo shrugged his shoulders at the sight of Yoo Seong-un acting coy.

“Somehow it will work out.”

“That was the scariest thing you’ve said lately, Geo.”

“To be honest, I just want things to be as they are.”

“Have you fallen for us?”

“What kind of accusation is that? I feel wronged.”

“If that’s not the case, then that’s a good thing, but I feel like I’ve let go.”

“Once you become a grown adult, you should know how to take responsibility for your own life.”

“Well, that’s true. Is that ‘grown-up adult’ by any chance the president of the association?”

“Probably including this and that.”

From the moment he met and talked with his former disciple who had become the president, Geo had already made up his mind. If he got that kind of reaction, he thought he had done something really wrong. But that was all he felt.

Geo had a pretty good imagination. He used his imagination to imagine the worst, but he didn't think he'd be upset if it were true. In other words, it really didn't matter.

'It's not my place to be troubled by a bad past.'

The teacher believes that our smart Hae-ra will do well on her own.

* * *

“…….”

“Do it.”

"…ah."

Did you just blank out for a moment?

“…What kind of feeling is this?”

“Are you asking the teacher?”

“Well, maybe… I guess so.”

“You’re scared.”

“I see, that was scary.”

I raised my hand and lightly brushed my forehead. I realized that my fingertips were trembling slightly in that small action called Danhae. I tried to control my breathing and actions as usual, but it wasn't easy.

It felt like a slight dizziness, and a faint tinnitus piercing through my ears and brain. Fear, fear. Danhae reflexively calculated the value of this emotion.

‘It would be a pretty good price for the promise, but it’s an emotion I’ve never felt before… .’

As I was calculating naturally, my thoughts became blocked. Similar thoughts kept echoing in my head. I thought that this was probably the weight of fear, that I was experiencing it.

“…I wonder why you said that.”

“What are you curious about?”

“Why did you tell me to eat you?”

“You did it.”

“…….”

Dan Hae-ra let out a hollow laugh. It was a very weak and unstable laugh that was unlike anything you'd see from the 'Chairman of the Association'. The words spilled out before she could even recognize her own appearance.

“It’s more surprising than I expected.”

Eat god.

“It’s a very common method, very classic.”

“I am always here.”

“It may be barbaric, but it must have been effective. In any mysterious history, the act of eating has various meanings and has a great impact.”

“I will always be here.”

“I hope it wasn’t in such an unsophisticated way as tearing off the teacher’s flesh. Yes, but until now… I never thought of doing something like that. Why is that?”

It was an obvious answer, if you will. Didn't Jung Hae-woon already tell you that he had acquired S-class abilities by taking on 'Professor Sergio' once?

'And yet I couldn't think of that classic method.'

Was it an unconscious choice? To preserve my own dignity, which I thought I had already thrown away? For some reason, I instinctively excluded 'that act' altogether.

“…You’re not lying, are you?”

“There is no reason to do that.”

“That’s true too.”

It could be a lie. But it could also be the truth. Thinking so, Danhae raised his hand and wiped the face of the straw doll. Unlike before, it was trembling slightly as if it was feeling some kind of rejection.

“What are we….”

Dan Hae-ra's mouth, which was about to ask something, was immediately shut.

“…….”

“Do it.”

“I’m out of my mind.”

Feelings, feelings, feelings.

Ah, this troublesome thing. I didn't like myself being swayed by the feeling of being single. It felt like a parasite had crawled into my body, which was always in a comfortable state.

Now the parasite is crawling into my brain, churning through my intestines. That's why my hands are shaking like this. I want to take the bug out and kill it. I want to get rid of it. But I can't do that.

'It's a useful price.'

My precious fuel. The monster's ability to create a better future. Someone said that this ability was equivalent to the power of a god.

The word god suddenly reminded Danhae of a face he had seen before.

A pale man in a black suit… .

“…….”

Was he once a god of men?

'It probably wouldn't have been very fun.'

Suddenly, I had that thought and I quickly erased it.

'Why do I have such useless thoughts?'

The aftereffects of the emotions that had built up without being cleared away in advance were this great. In that short moment, it became difficult to make a proper judgment.

But I didn't want to wonder or ruminate about what was dulling my actions. I felt so ashamed and dissatisfied with myself for being swayed by a few words. So much so that I wanted to just get rid of it.

“…I need to get out of here quickly.”

The system will be a good teaching material for humans. For my greed as Danhae, I will obtain the system for my work as the president of the association. I have to maintain it. So I shouldn't know about the 'past' any more.

Even so, the reason why it looks so unsightly is because I didn't know that it would have such a low immunity.

“It wasn’t the time to be having fun.”

“Are you leaving?”

“I guess so, teacher.”

To the symbol of eternity, ‘Teacher’ is an unnecessary being.

So if I just pretend not to know and get away with it, then… .

* * *

“I wish Seo Seo-hee had come in too.”

As he muttered like that, Jeong Hae-woon looked at the clowns scattered here and there. It would be a lie to say that he didn’t feel sorry for the dolls piled up without any life, but he just looked away.

What was important to Jeong Hae-un right now was not his human nature or his conscience.

“…From the beginning, it was nonsense for people like us to lead someone.”

Even though I consciously said those words, it was not clear who I was talking about. It could have been my crazy friends, the people who foolishly believed them, or myself.

“Then those were things that shouldn’t have happened.”

Suddenly I saw my face reflected in the spring water.

“…….”

Around 20s or 30s. At some point, aging stopped, and they were in their prime. Jeong Hae-woon thought back to a time when they were a little younger. He couldn't remember it well, but he could recall it somehow.

Jeong Hae-woon rested his chin on his hand as he recalled his days as a student.

‘…There is no way to turn back the past.’

In fact, Jeong Hae-woon himself didn't know exactly why he was doing this. He thought he couldn't stand being called and praised as a symbol of eternity. That's why he was doing this.

Maybe it was the same goal as George. To act like trash as much as possible, and then stay here and die as a traitor to humanity. It wasn't such a bad ending for the first gardener who was full of corruption and words.

“Yeah. Okay, let’s say that’s true….”

Jeong Hae-woon, who had been quietly looking at himself reflected in the spring water, soon walked over and stood in front of a clown.

“Let’s see.”

“…….”

“Yes, it’s pretty. It suits you very well.”

“…….”

“I guess I’m not a human being after all.”

Jeong Hae-woon smiled brightly.

“We’re not old friends, are we, Mr. Cha Hunter?”

It had already been decided where she had to go.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (356)

356

Episode 356

Each piece of jewelry had a story behind it.

“Teacher, how are you?”

“Aram has grown a lot too.”

“It’s all thanks to you, teacher.”

And it was the priests of the Dalnim Church who figured it out.

The attempt to simplify the so-called 'garden formula' failed. No, to be precise, it was postponed. The prevailing opinion was that no matter how simple it was, hunters would not understand it. It could also be because they, as priests, deal with divine powers and thus understand the formula more easily.

So, what Dalnimgyo chose was a full-scale exploration.

“Thank you, I am so happy to see you in person like this, teacher. I heard that you were recovering your health and resting inside the collection, but I can’t believe you were dragged into such a big matter….”

“I wish I could take a walk on this occasion. But is it because of that that you were able to come to us so easily? That thing called the garden formula?”

“That’s right. In fact, I wasn’t looking for you, the teacher, or the collectors, but rather, I was following the location of the dungeon’s accessories. I’m still surprised that the reason the Solar Cult split was because of the accessories. I thought it was a purely internal conflict because they kept pulling out my hair.”

“And it would be surprising if those earrings ended up in the hands of Priest Kang Seo-dam and came to us.”

“Yes, it would be really difficult to meet other participants unless they read the formula of this garden like us. It is clear that the benevolent Sun Goddess is looking after Priest Kang Seo Dam.”

This meant that it was difficult to meet other survivors in this dungeon without taking any action, to the point where it could only be explained by divine luck.

“Of course, we cannot rule out the possibility that he was taken into consideration by the owner of this dungeon….”

Aram looked at Geo again as if she understood Kang Seodam, who avoided her gaze with a subtle expression.

“Then can I finish explaining?”

“It’s been a while since I’ve seen you. In many ways, you’ve lost all your strengths.”

“I’m glad that there was some growth during the short time I was in the ministry.”

“Of course, increased self-confidence is a very good growth for a human being.”

By the way, Aram shouted 'Earrings-!!!!' as soon as he encountered the collectors. It was a natural reaction, considering that he had been chasing the earrings from the beginning and not the survivors. In many ways, I couldn't help but think that his face had gotten thicker than before.

Anyway, Aram continued his explanation with a serious expression, as if he was planning to devote his time properly.

“The ornaments found in this dungeon, that is, in this garden, are special. If it were a normal dungeon, they would be so important that they could be conquered by destroying them.”

“It doesn’t seem like it’s really destroyed.”

“That’s because they are part of this garden. As long as the garden doesn’t collapse, those ornaments won’t be destroyed. That’s why we were able to come here.”

“Was it hard to find other accessories?”

“No, it’s a bit of a weak idea… I heard that if you find a trinket, you’ll be attacked by a clown right away. That’s why the Dalnim Church has already agreed to go and find the trinket that has already been found.”

“The reason we judged that the earrings we were holding were ‘already discovered jewelry’… was probably thanks to Priest Kang, who was wandering around with the earrings himself?”

“That’s correct. The only piece of jewelry that’s still moving is this earring.”

Unfortunately, the anklet and necklace were no longer moving. This would mean that the team that had been keeping the trinkets had either left them behind or been wiped out. And given the circumstances, the latter was more likely.

No matter how much they racked their brains, they couldn't figure out the specific form of the item other than the fact that it was 'an item presumed to be an accessory', so Dalnimgyo decided to go with the one that was clearly in the possession of the person who bought it rather than gambling.

“We didn’t know it would be in the form of earrings.”

“But when you first saw us, you were definitely….”

“Yes, I cried out for earrings. Let me explain the ‘story’ I just mentioned here.”

The Dalnim Church did not simply chase after trinkets.

After establishing the formula, he would have more time to himself, and he would be able to see how the mystery flows in this complex garden. Dalnimgyo moved while carefully checking the singular points that could be confirmed during the movement process. The scholar’s fierce curiosity to see the truth played a part.

“In the process, I discovered this.”

“…Is this a letter?”

“It is probably interpreted as a love letter.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been quietly standing next to Geo, glanced at him and frowned.

“…? It seems like this is a language I’ve never seen before?”

“That’s why I just said that I ‘interpreted’ it.”

“You created something from almost nothing.”

“Thank you for your understanding.”

It was really difficult to interpret such unfamiliar characters. If there had been more than enough data, it would have been different, but the letters Aram was holding now were only three.

Judging from the fact that he was able to roughly interpret it, it seems that there are rules to language… but it was a skill that was hard to imagine for a meteor shower.

At the sight of such a meteor cloud, Aram pointed to the moon that the priests behind him were holding with pride. He was a respectful yet proud figure, a guardian who would not give up his arms.

“Our moon played a big role.”

“It seems that the majesty of the moon never goes away.”

“That goes without saying.”

So, back to the explanation.

“Each of these letters has a connected trinket. While the presence of the trinket or similar objects can be felt here and there, the presence of the letters is only three, so it seems that the letters appear after the trinket is discovered.”

“Then how do you know that among these there is a letter connected to the earring? Can you tell the difference?”

“Yes, of course. As you can see….”

Aram nodded to Geo's question and showed him the letter.

“Their colors are the same.”

"oh."

“The earrings are blue gems and the letter is also blue. Of course, we didn’t treat them as a set just by looking at these one-dimensional aspects. However, our Dalnim Church clearly confirmed that the mystery of the same particles and colors is connected to the two.”

“That garden formula is amazing, look at the colors too.”

“I am glad that you are so impressed, sir. Anyway, we have already finished interpreting the contents of the letter. That is why we have guessed from the beginning that the jewelry you are wearing will be in the form of blue earrings.”

At that, Yoo Seong-un rubbed his chin and let out a nasal sound.

“Hmm….”

“Why are you doing that?”

“No, that’s it.”

Yoo Seong-un answered Aram's question with a slightly awkward expression.

“I realized once again that everything that comes from here is nothing but a mystery.”

“At least we are human, so don’t worry.”

“I’m just a little disappointed, don’t worry.”

As you move, the appearance of the world changes, and the objects and backgrounds that make up it also change. It is a bit funny to think that even the dazzling chandeliers and luxurious mansions that you see now are just made of mysterious particles or are illusions.

Yoo Seong-un, who had thought that far, was amazed once again.

“But you are truly amazing. You are seeing things that even I, a gardener, cannot see.”

“Actually, it’s closer to calculating than seeing. You remember the state of the particles floating in the air, plug it into a formula, and come to a conclusion.”

“So you also knew that the earrings were blue? That’s almost a miracle of calculation.”

“I had calculated in advance that it would be blue, but even if it wasn’t, I would have guessed it. The color of the letter was so vivid that I thought it must be a hint.”

Blue, green, yellow. It wasn't bright enough to look childish, but when I put it all together, I could tell that it wasn't ordinary letter paper. It was a clear color that clearly showed that the color of the letter had some meaning.

“So, let me tell you the contents of the letter….”

Aram opened the letter carefully and said.

“You chose a dud.”

"oh my god."

Is this terrible garden ever involved in speculative activity?

Geo lamented the learning ability of George, who only learned bad things. He didn't know how to learn games of probability even though he learned something on Earth. He could feel 'Mr. Giovanni' silently cursing inside him.

“A dud? No way?”

“This… there is a separate correct answer. I think so.”

Aram turned his head and looked at Kang Seo Dam.

“Where did you say the earrings were found?”

“…I didn’t find it, but they say there was a hidden treasure chest. It was a small treasure chest hidden in a place where people couldn’t easily see it, and they said they took what was inside.”

“You’re saying that you disguised it as if you were hiding something valuable?”

“From what you’re saying now, it seems like you’ve discovered something completely worthless. Is that right? That it was a trap reflecting human thought that was hidden in that way from the beginning?”

“It’s more of a scam than a trap, since it’s designed to look precious.”

Aram lowered her head and unfolded the blue letter she was holding. She checked to see if anything unusual had occurred in the meantime, then nodded and explained the contents.

“This is a love letter to the person who is presumed to be the dungeon master. Upon examining it, it seems like it wasn’t a letter made specifically for the dungeon story, but rather an actual letter. Even if the language is like that, the various idioms, objects, and buildings that appear in the letter accurately reflect the common era….”

“Ahem, Bishop.”

“The private message was long. And we think the owner of these letters is a stalker. Or a kidnapper, or a slave trader. They are showing affection to the point of almost being possessed… It is definitely not the kind of affection that the other person would like.”

“It seemed more like an obsession.”

“Yes, honestly, I got goosebumps while reading it.”

They all nodded as if they were displeased with the Dalnim Church.

They agreed with Aram and the priest who had intervened. As a scholar and a normal human being before being a priest, it was natural for them to feel uncomfortable with this kind of sticky emotion.

“And I guess the recipient of the letter wasn’t in a very good mood either. No, I’m not really sure about that. But what I’m sure of is that the writer’s feelings weren’t of much value to the recipient.”

“It wasn’t worth it.”

“You can tell just by looking at the condition of the earrings. If they were a precious gift from someone truly precious, even if this place is a kind of dungeon… would they really exist in such a tattered state?”

Even if it is not an actual real object, but rather a re-creation or reconstruction of a mysterious particle, it is impossible for selfish thoughts to enter it.

“If we think about the position of the dungeon owner who put his/her will into the process of reproduction, it could be evidence that he/she did not have enough affection to manage it so that it would shine. Although we cannot rule out the possibility that it was a trap that made us think this way….”

Considering that the basic direction of this dungeon and this garden is 'exposure war', the probability that even this is a trick is relatively low. In particular, this is a place where the black cloak changed the garden into a dungeon format. It would be right to think that the dungeon owner is affected as much as the humans are affected.

Just as the sub-dungeon was created with the concept of the participants' 'happiness', it seemed almost certain that this space was created with the concept of the dungeon owner's 'happiness'.

“So let’s assume for now that it’s not a trick. Then, don’t you feel that there’s definitely not much affection?”

“Aha, so it’s a dud?”

“Actually, it would be a bit difficult to say that it was a dud, but, well, I don’t know. At least it seems certain that the dungeon master is not very fond of these kinds of trinkets and letters.”

The same goes for the clowns attacking immediately after they are discovered. It could be that the dungeon master is trying to stop them before they find out more about the weakness, but even so, the clowns don't bother to retrieve any trinkets. They even seem relaxed, as if they're just playing around.

“We suspect that the appearance of such a clown is a kind of punishment. That’s why we said it was a dud. It may not be of much value to the dungeon owner, but it will bring disaster to the person who finds it, so it’s understandable to say it’s a dud.”

“So does that mean we haven’t found the opposite, the ‘correct answer’ yet?”

“…….”

Aram blinked and quickly answered Geo's question.

“…I haven’t discovered it, but there is a mysterious particle flow that is similar to these trinkets, but a little more gentle.”

“What does being gentle mean…?”

“It seems like it’s not just a piece of the garden, like a letter that was simply reproduced, but a real object. And that means it’s something that the owner of this dungeon cherishes and treasures. But maybe that’s why it’s hard to find its location.”

“It seems like your presence is blurred.”

“Rather than feeling a void, it’s more like, well, weeds. It’s very natural, but its presence isn't really obvious. Rather, it's mixed in, so it's hard to find. I guess it's a similar principle to how it's said that clowns are hard to recognize in reality."

"Then I guess we need to find that first."

"Only then can we verify whether there really is a 'correct answer'."

After literally countless hours, I finally have a goal.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (357)

357

Episode 357

The key point of conquering a dungeon is hidden by its owner.

“It’s typical.”

“That’s true, but….”

Yoo Seong-un nodded at Aram's words, but his expression was subtle.

“It was so typical that I couldn’t even think about it.”

This was no ordinary dungeon.

Basically, it was a garden, and the garden was turned into a dungeon with the power of the black cloak. There was talk during the meeting before entering that there might be a strategy like this, but most people didn't give it much weight.

It was the same after entering.

“Because it wasn’t a dungeon with a familiar structure… I felt that way even more after entering. So most people seemed to have given up on the concept of a ‘dungeon’ from the start. We were the same.”

“We were only sure after we figured out the flow. Before that, it was just one of many assumptions. It’s natural to be confused, especially in a situation with so many distortions.”

Aram, who had the greatest sociability in the Dalnim Church, naturally comforted Yoo Seong-un. It seemed that he was trying to talk to her as much as possible, considering that he would be moving with the collector for a while.

Around that time, Geo appeared quietly. He seemed to have been talking to Cha Eun-hyeok ever since he left after a short meeting with Dalnimgyo, and now he seemed interested in this.

“What were you talking about?”

“Ah, a story about conquering dungeons.”

“I definitely didn’t think it would be that way.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was about to say, as usual, 'Did you really not know?' but stopped himself. Wasn't the new bishop of the Dalnim Church next door relying on 'Sergio Hunter' as a human teacher?

It would do no good to find out that he was a much more mischievous and mysterious being than the world knew.

'It looks like you're having a great time playing the human teacher... As a curator, I shouldn't interfere with that.'

Yoo Seong-un, who had thought that far, just smiled.

“Isn’t that fortunate? Thanks to this, we can do something. In fact, I was worried that if things continued like this, the entire advance party, except for a few, would fall behind. To be honest, I think we could all be wiped out in this situation….”

“I doubt it would have led to total annihilation, but I agree that it wasn’t a good situation. Aram and Dalnimgyo really did a great job.”

As Geo said that, he smiled brightly and looked at Dalnim in Aram's arms.

“Our moon too.”

At that moment the moon twinkled.

“…….”

“Huh…? Dalnim….”

"hmm."

“You’ve never shown such a bright reaction to my words before. You really are a teacher! Would it be okay if I conducted research on the relationship between Dalnim and you later?”

“Can I check and answer later?”

“Oh, of course. I was a little excited. This kind of reaction is so rare….”

"haha."

Yoo Seong-woon was looking at Geo, who was skillfully trying to laugh it off, with a strange look in his eyes.

‘… The new bishop of Dalnim Church is definitely not a stupid person, but he is just letting this slide.’

Thanks to Aram's strong prejudice, it was easy to overlook, but this guy occasionally showed signs of trying to hide the fact that he was not human.

“By the way, I have a question.”

Geo asked Aram, as if trying to change the subject.

“May I hear the exact contents of the letter, Bishop?”

“It feels a little strange when you call me Bishop….”

“You seem skilled, but you’re a joke.”

“Actually, it took some time for this to happen. I have a lot of heartbreaking stories that I can’t help but tell, but I’ll tell you that story later. Well, anyway.”

Perhaps it was because the conversation was with Geo, who had been relying on her as an adult from the beginning. Although Aram looked a little more mature than before, she nodded to Geo like a child who had become much more relaxed.

“As I told you before I moved, it was a love letter.”

“What about gender?”

“If it weren’t for the fact that men wear dresses, the letter would probably have been written by a woman. There was one mention of a dress she would wear.”

“In most cultures, a dress would be quite expensive. Could it have been worn by a nobleman?”

“I guess so. However, the recipient of this letter seemed to be of a lower status. There was no direct mention of the caste system….”

“If Aram understood it that way, then it must be right.”

“Thank you. And as for the exact details, well.”

Aram, who had been thinking for a moment, continued speaking.

“The letter’s author called the recipient ‘my love.’”

"oh my god."

“Or it was something like ‘My Flower’ or ‘My Little Bird’. So the age range of the recipients of the letters is quite unclear.”

“The tongue seems quite sweet, so I guess the sender was a bit older?”

“I think at least it wasn’t a child, but the problem is the recipient. The letter describes the recipient as a very young child, but also as a respectable adult.”

“That’s… strange.”

“Personally, I wish it was an adult. I feel bad for the writer thinking he might be a pedophile.”

The letter was quite thick. If it had been a short letter, even the most skilled Dalnimgyo would have had a hard time interpreting the content. Thanks to this, I was able to interpret the language and analyze the content more richly.

“Perhaps the recipient of the letter was truly able to control his appearance at will. We believe that the recipient of this letter was the dungeon master or someone closely related to him.”

“It wouldn’t be strange if such a being had various powers since the time of humanity, right? I understand that too.”

“Or maybe there was something wrong with the mind of the person who sent the letter. Anyway, he was a very obsessive person. I think he gave the recipient various gifts to see how they would react. He even praised them for their beautiful singing and dancing.”

The content of the letter was so sweet and heavy that it even felt like a tinge of disgust. I judged that the language he used was quite sophisticated, but no matter how nicely I packaged it, I couldn't erase that tingling obsession.

“It was like someone was possessed… I still don’t know whose fault it was. Was it because the person who wrote the letter was so greedy from the beginning, or did the recipient make it happen?”

The problem was that either way, the possibility was high. There were many psychopaths in the world who were so obsessed with 'love', and on the other hand, this dungeon was very easy to get people hooked on. Maybe it was both.

“The three letters we found all had similar content. We could get a sense of the era and culture from the various missives, but it wasn’t enough to figure out the exact flow of the story they were intertwined with.”

“Do we really need more clues?”

“I wish the dungeon master would show up at least once since it’s come to this, but. Well, that’s all we know for now.”

“You’ve had a hard time.”

Aram smiled as if she was grateful and soon turned to her colleagues. The priests of the Dalnim Church met her eyes and nodded. They all seemed to have sensed something, or rather, calculated it.

“I think we are slowly entering the realm of what is assumed to be the ‘correct answer’.”

As he said, the surrounding scenery was changing little by little.

“This place is….”

“I can’t see very well.”

"…ah!"

Someone in the collection let out a gasp.

“The vein of jewels!”

It definitely resembled that place.

* * *

“If it’s the vein of jewels….”

Geo nodded at Cha Eun-hyeok’s muttering.

“I think the place that Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok is thinking of is right.”

“Does the Earth dungeon usually appear in the garden?”

“If we really have to be specific, it doesn’t seem to be the same place.”

“Then it’s really just a similar level?”

“There must be a reason for this, but it certainly seems like a different place with the same format.”

“…I’ve heard Cha Ara talk about it.”

Eunhyuk Cha, who said that, looked at Geo with a strange look.

“I was really scared back then.”

“Was that all?”

“You said the food was delicious.”

“Oh, you feel so good.”

“Is that so?”

After admitting that they both knew of the existence of the Black Cloak, Cha Ara and Cha Eunhyuk had quite a few conversations. The 'Jewel Vein' where they first encountered him was one of them.

“Actually, I can’t see anything very well….”

“But you can clearly see the jewels, right?”

“Yes, it’s amazing. I can only see the jewel and the area right around it.”

“It’s because there is a kind of monster growing in abundance in the air.”

Geo waved his hand lightly.

“Fortunately, the sunlight penetrates to some extent.”

My vision became clearer around his faintly glowing hands.

“How are the priests of Dalnim Church?”

“It seems our power isn’t working well.”

The moon, unlike the sun, could not shine on its own. Aram shook his head as the representative.

“I’ve never actually been inside the ‘Jewel Vein’, but I think the air there is a bit heavier. Among us, it feels like only Dalnim is exerting a little bit of strength.”

As the saying goes, the view was clear up to the moon and Aram, who was holding it in her arms. It seemed as if the moon, judging that securing the view was important, had begun to shine on its own.

However, the surroundings were not fully revealed. No matter how similar it was to Earth, it was definitely a dungeon of a higher level, or a strict garden. It did not easily give something away.

“…….”

And Geo just blinked his eyes without saying anything.

‘…Am I the only one who sees this again?’

Even though monsters were floating around, there was no reaction from the people around.

'I remember when I first met Dana.'

First of all, the 'Jewel's Vein' was basically a place with strong negative energy. I'm not sure if it's actually strong, but since Mr. Meteor Cloud, who looks like the sky, said it was, it must be. Anyway, there were quite a few ghost-shaped monsters in the 'Jewel's Vein'.

‘Here too, is it a bit similar…?’

Some ghosts with distorted shapes were visible.

'It really seems like only I am looking at it.'

Geo hesitated for a moment, wondering whether to keep his mouth shut until others saw him, or to tell them in advance. However, this was a scary dungeon. It would be better to let them know before any casualties occurred.

“…A ghost-shaped monster is observed, just like the veins of the jewel.”

“Oh, I see.”

“It’s similar to the dungeons on Earth, so the monsters here don’t seem to be particularly aggressive, but it’s best to be careful because this could be distorted in some way.”

“It would be good to be prepared.”

Fortunately, the people gathered here were priests who boasted overwhelming superiority over undead monsters and collectors who were skilled in all kinds of curses and abnormal phenomena. They proceeded with their exploration relatively smoothly.

“Hmm, what is the connection between the ‘Garden of Delights’ and the ‘Jewel Vein’? I understand that it’s not a very well-known dungeon on Earth….”

“Well, to put it bluntly, it is known as a dungeon that is not very tasty, Your Majesty.”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking with his characteristically innocent smile.

“It’s hard to escape in a way that’s recognized as a raid, but the rewards are especially small. Since you get less for the effort you put in, it’s a place that most hunters avoid. However, if there’s anything that can be made illegally, it would be Anti-Cat.”

“Curator Yoo Seong-un, you know a lot about the ‘Jewel Vein’? Have you ever been inside? Was there anything special about it other than Anticat?”

“Oh, nothing really. It’s just that my partner, Sergio Hunter, showed interest, so I did a little research and presented it to him.”

“Teacher…?”

Geo smiled and stroked the round water bird on my shoulder.

“It’s because our eldest son really likes jewelry.”

“Aha, I understand.”

Aram nodded, having memorized everything about the habits of water birds.

“As far as I know, Dana is from the ‘Jewel Vein’….”

“That’s right. I brought him home and raised him, and it was really amazing to see him grow so well. He’s also very charming.”

“It’s the first time I’ve heard that Anticat is very cute.”

It was around that time.

“Ah, there’s something wrong with the particles over there….”

“…….”

“…There’s someone there.”

Geo, who was the only one with a clear view, opened his mouth at Aram's words with a hardened face.

“It’s a clown.”

A clown with a somewhat familiar appearance.

(Continued in the next episode)